Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will be meeting the hon. Members for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) and for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy and a deputation from the South Gwynedd Partnership.

Mr. Redwood: 21 February.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends visiting Meirionnydd Nant Conwy.

Mr. Redwood: I visited the hon. Member's constituency in September last year, and have no other immediate plans to visit Meirionnydd Nant Conwy again in the near future.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hours he has spent in Wales during 1995.

Mr. Redwood: Information on my visits to Wales is not held in this format.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales to which categories of employee of county and district councils in Wales he expects the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 to apply during the reorganisation of local government.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made in Standing Committee A on 17 May 1994.

Footpaths

Mrs. Anné Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent or grant aided in each of the last three years for which figures are available by the Countryside Commission for Wales on the repair of eroded footpaths.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Countryside Council for Wales does not grant aid routine maintenance of public rights of way unless they are of national trail status. It did, however, pay grants of £320,000 in both 1992–93 and 1993–94 on the enhancement of the public rights of way network.

In addition to this, grant of £150,000 in 1992–93 and £240,00 in 1993–94 was paid toward the maintenance of national trails. In 1993–94, a further £32,000 in grant was paid on the development of a possible additional national trail. It is anticipated that similar sums will be paid in the current year 1994–95.

Milk Industry

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives his Department is adopting to assist the milk industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The milk industry in Wales benefits from a variety of schemes designed to help business and industry and to promote the efficient marketing of agricultural products. No special initiative is required.

Staff Commission for Wales

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings he or other Ministers have had with the Staff Commission for Wales in the last nine months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: One. The Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones), met the staff commission on 14 November 1994 for its annual review meeting.

Dental Services

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many dentists in each Welsh family health services authority have stopped treating NHS patients in each year since 1992;

(2) how many dentists in each Welsh family health services authority have closed NHS registers to new patients in each year since 1992.

Mr. Richards: The information requested is not held centrally.

Delegations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the attendance list of all those who were members of delegations received in the past six months by him, his fellow Ministers and his senior civil servants.

Mr. Redwood: This information is available only at disproportionate cost.

N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide estimates for the total amount that has been paid to N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. with respect to any work undertaken by it on privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1979 after taking account of inflation.

Mr. Redwood: My Department has not paid any money to N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. in connection with privatisation programmes.

Health Common Services Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority concerning the timetable for the running down of the stores service in Gwynedd and the establishment of the new service in Clwyd.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place copies in the Library of his departmental letter of 24 January to consultees on the future management arrangements of the clinical side of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority.

Mr. Redwood: Copies of DGM(95)4 consulting on the future management arrangements of these clinical services have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority concerning the increase in the share out of savings offered to the Gwynedd Hospitals NHS trust to secure its agreement to the closure of the Ysbyty Gwynedd site on 31 March.

Mr. Redwood: None. There are no plans to close Ysbyty Gwynedd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the current review of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority Department of contracting and capital in north Wales; and when he expects the review's findings will be published.

Mr. Redwood: These matters are currently the subject of discussions between the Welsh Health Common Services Authority and its customers. The outcome of these discussions advising the future handling arrangements is expected in the autumn.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had and proposes to have with the British Limbless Ex-Servicemens Association concerning the proposed changes in the management arrangements for the artificial limb and appliance service.

Mr. Redwood: The British Limbless Ex-Servicemens Association is one of the organisations currently being consulted about the proposed management arrangements for the artificial limb and appliance service.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place a copy in the Library of each of the service evaluations of the financial and non-financial implications of change in the future management arrangements of the clinical side of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority by each clinical branch of the authority.

Mr. Redwood: Copies of the evaluation reports produced by each of the clinical services have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the assets considered liable to transfer from the Welsh Health Common Services Authority under the proposed new management arrangements for the artificial limb and appliance service Wales and Breast Test Wales; what arrangements he is making for an independent valuation of those assets; and what estimate he has made to date of the fair valuation of any or all of such a list of assets.

Mr. Redwood: Established procedures governing the transfer of assets will be implemented once decisions are taken about the future management arrangements of BTW and ALAS.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance he has given to the group director of the artificial limb and appliance service Wales and the director of Breast Test Wales concerning the applicability of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 to the proposed changes in management arrangements; what provisions he has had for expert legal advice to be given to them in the discharge of their personnel function following new management arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: It is for the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to take legal and other advice at the appropriate time.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he is proposing for the publication of the views of the staff of the artificial limb and appliance service and Breast Test Wales concerning the proposed new manning arrangements.

Mr. Redwood: Subject to individual confidentiality and requests being received, arrangements can be made to publish responses to the consultation exercise.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what arrangements he has made for separating those aspects of the artificial limb and appliance service in Wales which are regarded as suitable (a) for separating into three area-based services located at Rookwood, Morriston and Wrexham-Maelor hospitals and (b) only for a single site all-Wales provision under the options review for the clinical side of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority;

(2) what consultations he is undertaking with respect to the arrangements for ring-fencing of the sums repatriated to the district health authorities equivalent to those currently allocated for purchasing by the artificial limb and appliance service in Wales;

(3) what consultations he is carrying out on the length of time and detailed arrangements for ring-fencing the resources to be repatriated to district health authorities for the purchase of breast screening services;

(4) what is his current estimate of the time for further guidance on contracting for artificial limb and appliance service and Breast Test Wales services;

(5) what consultations he has had with the management of Breast Test Wales concerning the required time period for ring-fencing of the funding for purchasing breast cancer screening services after repatriation of those funds to district health authorities, arising from the need to complete and evaluate the first round national screening programme; and how long he has given them and other consultees to express views on the suggested length and administration of the protection period for the funding of the service;

(6) what are the arrangements for health authorities to consult each other with a view to setting up consortium or lead-purchasing arrangements for the artificial limb and appliance service; what consultation he has had with the management at the artificial limb and appliance service in relation to the pooling of purchasing arrangements; and what evaluation he has made of its benefits.

Mr. Redwood: Decisions on these issues will be taken in the light of the results of consultation.

Reversal of Status Declarations

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients in each health authority area, or other convenient sub-division, signed reversal of status declarations from either private to NHS, or NHS to private in each of the last three years.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not held centrally.

Patient Anonymity

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what arrangements he has made for the protection of patient anonymity in the collection of data from medical records for statistical purposes under the proposed new management arrangements for the Welsh Health Common Services Authority;

(2) what consultations he has had with the Data Protection Registrar concerning the protection of patient anonymity in the collection of data from medical records for statistical purposes in the area of (a) mental health, (b) cancer and (c) other categories.

Mr. Redwood: Information given by patients concerning their health and treatment is protected by the common law, the Data Protection Act 1984 and the ethical responsibilities of health professionals. This applies even when it is anonymised and aggregated.

We have recently consulted on draft guidance for the NHS, "Confidentiality, Use and Disclosure of Personal Health Information", which includes advice on the use of anonymised/aggregated information. Comments have been received from the Data Protection Registrar which are being considered by health Departments.

The management arrangements for the Welsh Health Common Services Authority are still under review.

Breast Test Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will specify the time period within which trusts and prospective trusts can apply to administer the management arrangements for Breast Test Wales; what arrangements he has made to permit trusts and prospective trusts not currently involved in carrying out biopsies for Breast Test Wales to have equal status with Llandough NHS trust in applying for approval to manage Breast Test Wales; and what criteria he will use in evaluating the bids to manage the service.

Mr. Redwood: The consultation period on the future management of clinical schemes ends on 23 February. No restrictions have been imposed on consultees; bids for the management of Breast Test Wales will be assessed against their ability to maintain the quality, efficiency and cost-effectiveness of the service.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 718, if he will list the external financing limit for each of the NHS trusts in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: The external financing limit for each of the NHS trusts in Wales in 1994–95 is shown in the following table:

NHS Trust	£000
Glan Clwyd Hospital	787
Wrexham Maelor Hospital	5,185
Gofal Cymuned Clwydian Community Care	9,116
Llanelli Dinefwr	334
Carmarthen and District	2,419
Ceredigion and Mid Wales	1,172
Derwen	947
Nevill Hall and District	(1,247)
Gwent Community	2,667
Glan Hafren	1,876
Gwynedd Hospital	1,562
Gwynedd Community	3,399
Bridgend and District	4,066
Rhondda	(650)
East Glamorgan	2,653
Pembrokeshire	(494)
Powys Health Care	1,412
Llandough	6,907
Velindre	(55)
Swansea	3,808
Morriston	6,038
South and East Wales Ambulance	407
North Wales Ambulance	321
Mid Glamorgan Ambulance	176

Note: Brackets denote a negative external financing limit—this means that no new borrowing is required.

Blood Transfusion Service

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the management of the National Blood Transfusion Service Wales concerning the ending of the ring-fencing for the purchase of tissue-typing services from the blood transfusion service by health authorities.

Mr. Redwood: The management of the NBTS(W) were consulted prior to the decision to end ring-fencing for tissue-typing services.

Hospital Supplies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that the capacity to replenish hospital supplies at short notice will be maintained after the proposed closure of the stores at Ysbyty, Gwynedd on 31 March.

Mr. Redwood: These are matters for the Welsh Health Common Services Authority and its customers.

Ian Greer Associates

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions departmental officials met representatives of Ian Greer Associates (a) formally and (b) informally on 26 January to discuss matters relating to their clients' interests.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Health Service Forms

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the total number of forms collected by his Department for health service administrative purposes in each of the past five years, as measured by the (a) number of different forms and (b) volume and number of actual forms collected.

Mr. Redwood: Annual figures are not available for the period requested. However, in 1993–94, I ordered a comprehensive review of 106 financial and statistical forms sent to the NHS in Wales by the Welsh Office. These returns consisted of around 220 pages in total and, taking account of the frequency of collection and the number of respondents, an estimated 6,800 completed forms were collected in 1993–94. As a consequence of the first phase of the review, 35 forms—47 pages in total—equivalent to some 1,300 completed returns, were discontinued.

A second phase of the review is in train and I expect to announce a further reduction in the form–filling burden on the health service in the near future.

Breast Screening

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of state for Wales what consultations he has had regarding the Welsh contribution to the United Kingdom-wide evaluation of the effectiveness of the screening in the diagnosis and treatment of and reducing the incidence of breast cancer, arising from the options review of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority.

Mr. Redwood: None. My Department is represented on the Advisory Committee on Breast Cancer Screening which promulgates advice on the United Kingdom evaluation of the breast screening programme. Breast Test Wales' contribution to the UK screening and evaluation programme will continue unchanged.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Calves

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what he is doing to develop alternatives to export for surplus calves from dairy farms.

Mrs. Browning: I hope that, over time, farmers can have a greater opportunity of finding more markets at home for their animals and that as much as possible of the export trade can be in meat. I met the Meat and Livestock Commission on 19 January to discuss these possibilities.

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the Departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document "Focus on Ability".

Mrs. Browning: On 1 July 1994, there were 146 registered disabled people among the non-industrial civil servants in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, including its agencies, representing nearly 1.5 per cent. of the total staff in post. In 1993, a voluntary survey of all staff, which achieved a 60 per cent. response, showed that between three and four times that number considered that they had a disability.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will cut journey times allowed for transportation of live animals for slaughter to six hours.

Mrs. Browning: We have no such plans.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what account is taken of travel in British waters in the journey times allowed for the transportation of live animals for slaughter.

Mrs. Browning: Time at sea counts as part of the journey time under the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994, except where the animals can be fed and watered on board the vessel.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision was made for the feeding, watering and resting after 15 hours of the livestock held on a ship at Brightlingsea on 19 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Browning: The ship used was a fitted livestock vessel and the sheep were fed, watered and rested in their pens once aboard. The animals were accompanied on their voyage by a Ministry veterinary inspector who was satisfied with the facilities available and the arrangements made for the welfare of the sheep during the sea journey.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the occasions since 1 October 1994 when livestock animals have died while awaiting export from the United Kingdom or during the crossing to the European mainland, giving in each instance (a) the dates, (b) the numbers of animals involved, (c) the types of animals involved, (d) the causes of death and (e) the location where the animals died.

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is not available. Those responsible for export consignments are not under any statutory obligation to provide it.

Fishing (Swap Arrangements)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what requirements exist for British consultation and consent in swap arrangements made between other EEC Governments in respect of British waters.

Mr. Jack: As my reply to the hon. Member on 20 January, Official Report, column 736, explained, the Commission must be notified when a swap has been agreed. The Commission then notifies all member states. There is no requirement for prior consultation with the member states in whose waters the quota may be fished.

Fishing (Irish Box)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what extra funding is available from the EEC for the costs of additional fishery protection efforts to control Spanish access to the Irish box from 1996.

Mr. Jack: Decisions on the detailed arrangements to apply from 1 January 1996 have yet to be made.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 738, to the hon. Member for Southend, East, (Sir T. Taylor), what assessment he has made of the relevant financial benefits accruing to (a) the Irish Government and (b) Her Majesty's Government in respect of the arrangements for the Irish box.

Mr. Jack: Discussions have not yet reached a stage at which such an assessment could be made.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the Spanish fishing vessels to be admitted to the Irish box have been inspected by British fisheries protection vessels for secret fish holds.

Mr. Jack: As I indicated in the reply given to the hon. Member on 20 January, Official Report, columns 735-36, under the agreement reached at the December Fisheries Council it is for each member state to inform the Commission, by the end of March this year, of its proposed reference list of named vessels which may have access to the fisheries covered by the agreement. Access to the Irish box—excluding VIIa and VIIf N of 50°30'N—for Spanish vessels will not be permitted before 1 January 1996. From that date they will be subject to possible inspection by British fishery protection vessels when they are in UK waters within the Irish box and elsewhere in western waters.

Fishing (Norway)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what study he has made of Norwegian methods of access control and discipline in respect of foreign fishing vessels into Norwegian waters; and if he will make it his policy to introduce similar measures in British waters and to press for their acceptance by the EEC as a common standard.

Mr. Jack: Norwegian fisheries management procedures were extensively considered during Norway's accession negotiations. Within the EU, Council regulation (EEC) No. 2847/93 provides the framework for the effective and non-discriminatory enforcement of the common fisheries policy. At the December Fisheries Council, it was agreed that further control measures should be adopted for western waters including provisions relating to the communication of vessel movements—hailing in and out—and the declaration of catch, to both flag and coastal states. These provisions are similar to those in force in certain Norwegian fisheries.

Fisheries Council

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the nations which participate in the EEC Fisheries Council, indicating which of them presently fish in (a) the Irish box, (b) area VII, (c) the North sea, (d) the channel and (e) British waters as defined by the Fishery Limits Act 1976.

Mr. Jack: The Fisheries Council consists of the Ministers responsible for fisheries in each of the 15 member states of the EU.

The following member states have quotas which may currently be taken in all or part of the areas listed:

(a) The Irish box: United Kingdom, Republic of Ireland, Belgium, France, Germany, Netherlands.

(b) Area VII: United Kingdom, Republic of Ireland, Belgium, France, Germany, Netherlands, Denmark, Spain.

(c) The North sea: United Kingdom, Belgium, France, Germany, Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden.

(d) The English channel: United Kingdom, Republic of Ireland, Belgium, France, Germany, Netherlands, Denmark, Spain.

(e) British waters as defined by the Fisheries Limits Act 1976: United Kingdom, Republic of Ireland, Belgium, France, Germany, Netherlands, Denmark, Spain, Sweden, Portugal.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what experiments have been performed involving feeding calves with BSE infected milk; and what results have been obtained.

Mrs. Browning: None. Other experiments have revealed that bovine milk contains no detectable BSE infectivity.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the dates of birth of the last five confirmed BSE cases in Somerset.

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is as follows. The exact date of birth for four of the cases is unknown.

7 September 1987
Spring 1988
April 1989

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has available on the numbers and circumstances of confirmed BSE cases born after 18 July 1988.

Mrs. Browning: As at 23 January 1995, 15,771 cases of BSE had been confirmed in cattle born after 18 July 1988. Of these 8,955 were born in 1988, 5,995 in 1989, 812 in 1990 and nine in 1991. The great majority of the born after the ban cases have probably been exposed to ruminant protein in feed. The normal range of incubation period makes it inevitable that further cases will be confirmed in some animals exposed to infected feed and born in the months following the feed ban. Although it is still possible that BSE can occasionally be transmitted maternally or horizontally, there is no unequivocal evidence that either has actually occurred.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Southwood committee's report on BSE in 1989 took into account the numbers of confirmed BSE cattle from after the feeding ban of July 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Browning: Paragraph 6.2 of the report of the working party on BSE dated February 1989, stated that the estimate of the numbers of future cases of BSE contained in the report

"Assume that no new infections have arisen or will arise after 18 July 1988, when the ban on ruminant protein in feed became operative."

The great majority of the born after the ban cases have probably been exposed to ruminant protein in feed. The normal range of incubation period makes it inevitable that further cases will be confirmed in some animals exposed to infected feed and born in the months following the feed ban. Although it is still possible that BSE can occasionally be transmitted maternally or horizontally, there is no unequivocal evidence to indicate that either has actually occurred.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number of BSE cases slaughtered and confirmed during 1994.

Mrs. Browning: The provisional figure for the number of suspect BSE cases slaughtered in 1994 is 28,257. The number of cases confirmed in 1994 was 25,578.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards rapid detection of cattle infected with BSE prior to their final encephalopathic clinical illness.

Mrs. Browning: Research is in progress to permit more accurate diagnosis of BSE in the clinically suspected live animal. Studies include detection by post mortem and laboratory test of changes in the concentration of metabolites in urine, proteins in cerebrospinal fluid and detection of PrP peripheral tissues. None is sufficiently advanced to be of immediate use.

Another study, based on work already published in the Veterinary Record by Austin and Simmons—27 March 1993, 132, 324–325—involves field trials where monitors are attached to cattle for detection of changes to heart and rumination rates. These studies are still in progress but will not result in instant diagnosis. It is expected that monitors would need to be attached to cattle for several hours if they are to be a valuable diagnostic indicator. They will only be of value for cases where clinical diagnosis is in doubt. It will not be feasible to use such equipment on all suspect cases.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) renderers, (b) feed compounders and (c) farmers have been prosecuted for contravening BSE regulations annually since 1988.

Mrs. Browning: There have been two prosecutions taken by the local authorities concerned under the Animal Health Act 1981 for contravening BSE regulations since 1988, one in 1991, the other in 1992.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the results of the vertical experiment, identified within the Southwood report at paragraph 8.1, will be published.

Mrs. Browning: The animal experimental part of the cohort study in maternal transmission in BSE is expected to be completed at the end of 1996. Results of the study are expected to be available by mid-1997.

Interim observations of this study were reported in Hansard on 12 December 1994, columns 523–24.

EU Scientific Veterinary Committee

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the United Kingdom representatives on the EU Scientific Veterinary Committee.

Mrs. Browning: The following is a list of United Kingdom members of the European Commissions's Scientific Veterinary Committee:

Mr. R. Bradley
Dr. D. J. Alexander
Dr. A. M. Johnston
Dr. R. J. Gilbert
Prof. D. Broom
Prof. J. Webster

The Commission appoints experts to be members of the various EC expert committees. These members do not represent their respective member states when participating in the work of the committees.

Cattle Semen

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what volume of cattle semen from United Kingdom herds was exported to (a) New Zealand, (b) Australia and (c) Canada, annually, from 1992 to 1994.

Mrs. Browning: The information requested in respect of exports from Great Britain is set out in the table. The figures are based on the expected number of doses to be exported included in applications to the Department for official export health certification. It is possible that quantities actually exported differ slightly.

Destination
New Zealand	—	5,933	10,653
Australia	2,500	—	200
Canada	8,107	5,371	4,495

Offal Disposal

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has available to identify the routes of disposal for specified offals from cattle prohibited from entering human food in November 1989.

Mrs. Browning: The Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989, which came into effect on 13 November 1989, prohibited the use of specified bovine offals, as defined, in food for sale for human consumption.

The SBO controls, which are under review at present, require, subject to certain exceptions, that SBO must be sterilised or stained at the slaughterhouse. Movement permits are required for the removal of SBO from the slaughterhouse for disposal. The movement of protein material derived from SBO—after rendering—is prohibited except under licence for incineration or burial.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the decision of 30 June 1994 to remove intestines and thymuses from calves under six months has been reported to EU member states.

Mrs. Browning: The European Commission and individual member states were informed of the decision on the 30 June 1994, and official notification to the commission under the technical standards directive—83/189/EEC—was made on 26 July 1994.

N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide estimates for the total amount that has been paid to N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. with respect to any work undertaken by it on privatisation programmes in which his Ministry has been engaged since 1979 after taking account of inflation.

Mr. Jack: From records held centrally, N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. has not undertaken any work on privatisation programmes in which the Ministry has been engaged since 1979.

Ian Greer Associates

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions departmental officials met representatives of Ian Greer Associates (a) formally and (b) informally on 26 January to discuss matters relating to their clients' interests.

Mr. Waldegrave: To my knowledge, officials from this Department have had no such meetings.

Shellfish

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those inshore and estuarial fisheries where the collection of shellfish for commercial purposes has been banned because of the level of viral and faecal matters in seawater.

Mr. Jack: Since 1 January 1993 single market legislation requires all shellfish growing areas in the Community to be classified according to microbiological criteria. The classification of production areas as A, B or C carries specific requirements for the marketing of the shellfish—bi–valve molluscs.

A areas—molluscs can be harvested for direct human consumption.

B areas—molluscs can go for human consumption after purification in an approved plant, or after relaying in an approved relaying area, or after an EU approved heat treatment process.

C areas—molluscs can go for human consumption, only after relaying for at least two months in an approved relaying area whether or not combined with purification, or after an EU approved heat treatment process.

Molluscs must not be marketed from areas that are not classified, or fall outside the criteria.

Shellfish growing areas are monitored continuously by local food authorities. The results for England and Wales are collated by the Ministry's fish disease laboratory at Weymouth and the classification is published annually. The latest classification, which contains a list of designated prohibited areas, was issued on 4 October and a copy is in the Library of the House.

Next Steps Agencies

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out for each of the next steps agencies in his Department, whether they have acquired their own headquarters buildings and, if so, at what purchase cost or annual rental; how many support staff they have required which were not required when their operations were within his Department; how many of them published periodical journals and at what annual cost; how many have fleets of executive cars or single executive cars and at what annual cost; how many have specially designed logos and at what cost; how many have corporate clothing and at what cost; and what is the cost of specially designed and printed corporate stationery.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 26 January 1995, c. 358–61]: The letter to the right hon. Member from the chief executive of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate stated that he would write to the right hon. Member when the information on the cost of the VMD logo was available.

I understand that the VMD has now written to the right hon. Member. The text of the letter is as follows:

Letter from C. J. Lawson to Gerald Kaufman, dated 27 January 1995:

I am now able to let you have the information about the costs incurred in the design of the Directorate logo, which was not available when I wrote to you on 24 January.

The design costs were £360 + VAT.

I am very sorry that I could not let you have this in my original letter and regret any inconvenience that may have been caused.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the level of farm incomes in 1994.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 26 January 1995, c. 356]: Total income from farming is estimated to have risen by 4.4 per cent. in real terms in 1994 compared with 1993. This is further evidence that the industry is responding well to common agricultural policy reform. 1993 saw a very large increase in agricultural income and I am pleased that overall there has been a further improvement in 1994. Detailed estimates of income, output and productivity of United Kingdom agriculture in 1994 were published this morning and have been placed in the Library of the House.

Commercial Lobbying

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) on how many occasions in the last four months of which he has knowledge any civil servants in his Department have been approached by commercial lobbying on behalf of their clients at informal or unofficial engagements;

(2) on how many occasions in the last four months he or any of his Ministers have been approached by commercial lobbying on behalf of their clients at informal or unofficial engagements.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 25 January 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 25 January 1995, Official Report, column 197. Ministers and officials receive representations about a wide variety of matters, but the information requested is not collected.

SCOTLAND

Health Care International

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to submit Health Care International hospital Clydeside to independent audit in respect of losses to public funds.

Mr. Stewart: At the request of the Public Accounts Committee, the National Audit Office is currently preparing a factual memorandum on the public sector funding of the Health Care International project. In preparing this memorandum, the NAO has had full access to departmental records on the HCI project and the full co–operation of my right hon. Friend's officials.

The receiver has recently signed an agreement in principle with a preferred bidder for the continued operation of the Clydebank facility and there is therefore every possibility that the project will yet yield the economic development and job creation benefits which the public sector funding was designed to secure.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the company that takes over Health Care International in Clydebank will be eligible for regional selective assistance; what promises have been given to the receiver on this matter; and what are the conditions for the release of any grant assistance.

Mr. Stewart: If a new investor were prepared to take the project forward, there is no reason in principle why consideration should not be given to transfer of the balance of the existing offer. Such a transfer would be subject to appropriate conditions and be based upon the project being taken forward as previously envisaged. No promises have been given to the receiver on this matter. If the offer was transferred, the unpaid balance of grant would be released in line with the job targets which would otherwise have applied to HCI.

Employment (Children)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to include clauses on child employment in the forthcoming Children (Scotland) Bill.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no plans to include provisions relating to the employment of children in the Children (Scotland Bill). The Government are committed, however, to making changes in the regulation of employment of children in line with the European Community directive on the protection of young people at work. The Scottish Office Education Department and the Department of Health are currently consulting education authorities about this.

Student Finance

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what would be the full amount of a student loan to be repaid, assessing the current rate of interests, if a student currently in the first year of a three-year course applied for the maximum loan in each of these years; and what is his forecast for the total loan for a three-year course beginning in 1995 and subsequent years for which calculations on present information can be made.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The figures requested are set out in the table. In order to estimate them it has been necessary to make certain assumptions, the basis for some of which will be subject to review from time to time.

The main assumptions used in estimating the figures are:

(i) The move to broad parity between grants and loans for student maintenance will continue and will be achieved in academic year 1996–97;

(ii) the value of the student maintenance provision will be increased in line with forecast price increases;

(iii) movements in the retail prices index will be consistent with those underlying the Budget statement in November 1994;

(iv) the students concerned are studying away from home outwith the London area; and

(v) repayments commence in the April following completion of the course.

Table 1: Total level of debt for student on a three year course

Course beginning in academic year:	Estimated total debt as at April following graduation
1995–96	£4,500

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the absenteeism rate for the Lord Advocate's Department in each year since 1991.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The average number of working days lost per staff year due to sickness is as follows:

1993: 8.1
1991: 9.6

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the absenteeism rate for (a) his Department, (b) Historic Scotland, (c) the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency, (d) the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency, (e) the Register of Scotland, (f) the Scottish Office Pensions Agency, (g) the Scottish Prison Service, (h) the Scottish Record Office and (i) the Student Awards Agency in each year since 1991.

Mr. Lang: The average number of working days lost per staff year due to sickness is as follows for:

a. The Scottish Office—excluding SPS;

b. The Scottish Prison Service Agency—SPS; and

c. The Secretary of State's Executive Agencies of Registers of Scotland and the Scottish Record Office—SRO:

	The Scottish Office (excluding SPS)	SPS	ROS	SRO
1993	10.3	15.3	15.9	10.1
1992	8.9	12.6	15.0	7.2
1991	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a

Information on the disaggregation of the Scottish Office, excluding SPS, total into the core and each of its agencies is not readily available.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of sheep scab there were in each year since 1990 and in each month for 1994.

Sir Hector Monro: Official records on the number of sheep scab cases in Scotland are not available for the period following the deregulation of compulsory controls in 1992. The number of confirmed cases in the preceding three years were as follows:

1992 (to 30 June): 17

In the early part of last year, industry reports suggested a growing incidence of sheep scab throughout Great Britain and a surveillance exercise was carried out at sales and markets during the spring of 1994. In Scotland, this showed that sheep scab was present throughout the country, although the incidence related to flock numbers was relatively low.

The Government carried out an extensive poster and leaflet campaign in the autumn of 1994 to urge farmers to dip their sheep and to remind them of their welfare responsibilities. Surveillance at markets was also stepped up and a further survey of the incidence of the disease will be made in spring 1995.

Energy Recycling, Airdrie

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will outline the criteria used to approve the energy recycling scheme proposed by Shanks and McEwan Ltd. for the generation of energy from methane gas from the Greengairs landfill site near Airdrie;

(2) if he will outline the criteria used to turn down the energy recycling scheme proposed by Monklands district council for the generation of energy from methane gas from the Dalmacoulter landfill site in Airdrie.

Mr. Steward: In setting the size of the waste-to-energy band within the Scottish renewables obligation, my right hon. Friend accepted the advice of the Director General of Electricity Supply that only those projects bidding at less than 4.2p per unit generated should be supported.

Dental Services

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much additional expenditure each health board has incurred as a result of dentists de-registering patients following the changes in their pay structure implemented by the Scottish Office in October 1990; and how much of this expenditure has been reimbursed to them by the Scottish Office.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 26 January 1995, Official Report, columns 346–48, giving expenditure on general dental services over the past five years by each health board. It is not possible to to attribute changes in expenditure to specific causes. All legitimate costs incurred in providing general dental services are met from central funds.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which health boards have emergency dental services; when these dental services were established; how much it has cost to provide these services; and how many patients have received treatment from this emergency dental service in each of the last five financial years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1990, general dental practitioners have been responsible for providing emergency dental treatment for their own registered patients. Health boards may also set up emergency dental services to provide treatment out of hours, at weekends and on public holidays where necessary, using general dental practitioners and/or community dental staff. The table shows which Scottish health boards operate formal emergency dental services and when these services were established. It is not possible to identify separately the cost of providing emergency dental services from the overall costs of the general dental service. Information is not held centrally on the number of patients who receive treatment under emergency dental services.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many patients were de-registered by their dentists in the financial year 1993–94; how many patients have been de-registered by their dentists in the financial year 1994–95 so far; and how many dental practices were involved in these de-registrations in each health board area in Scotland;

(2) how many patients have been de-registered by their dentists; and how many patients in each of these years were still in receipt of dental treatment, in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Formal arrangements for patients to be registered with a dentist were introduced in October 1990. Information supplied by health boards about de-registrations since that date is contained in the table. It is not possible to identify individual patients de-registered or to establish whether each subsequently received treatment from another dentist.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment the Scottish Office has made of the impact of de-registration of patients on the dental health of the overall population.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of patients registered with general dental practitioners has decreased by less than 1 per cent. over the last 12 months from 2,650,925 to 2,632,878. Patients can be de-registered by their dentists for a variety of reasons. It is not possible to relate this information directly to the level of dental health in Scotland.

NHS Helpline

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 466, how many (a) interactive and (b) non-interactive phone calls were made to the NHS helpline up until 12 January.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total number of interactive and non-interactive calls received by the NHS helpline between 29 October 1992 and 12 January 1995 is listed in the table.

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines exist for the declaration of business interests by the directors of local enterprise companies in Scotland; what interests they are required to declare; and what scrutiny procedure exists for these declared interests.

Mr. Stewart: The local enterprise companies are required by their operating contracts with Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise to maintain a register of directors' interests; to make that register open for public inspection; and to have in place procedures designed to avoid potential conflicts of interest. The approval and monitoring of the local enterprise companies' conflict of interest procedures is an operational matter for the enterprise bodies and I have asked their chairmen to write to the hon. Member.

Long-term Care

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many NHS continuing care beds each health board in Scotland plans to close from 1 April 1994 in (a) learning disabilities, (b) psychiatric, (c) geriatric, (d) psycho-geriatric and (e) physical disabilities; over what timescales the closures will take place; and if he will make a statement on Government targets in these areas.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no centrally imposed targets for long-stay bed provision in the NHS. The pace of change is directed by patient needs. The organisation of long-stay care and care services in the community are determined by continuous joint assessment of local needs involving health boards and local authorities. The aim is to secure the most effective package of services, both in hospital and the community, that meet the specific needs of patients and carers.

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been transferred from each health board in Scotland to local authorities under resource transfer arrangements in respect of reductions in NHS continuing care beds in (a) learning disabilities, (b) psychiatric, (c) geriatric, (d) psycho-geriatric and (e) physical disabilities in each year since 1991; what is his assessment of the adequacy of the level of resource transfer to local authorities; and what proportion of the money saved by health boards will be transferred to local authorities.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on money transferred from health boards in Scotland to local authorities has only recently been collected centrally and is available for the period 1993–94 onwards. The data provided do not include an analysis of the different categories requested. The latest information available is given in the table:

Health board	Resource transfer 1993–94 £000	Estimated resource transfer 1994–95 £000
Argyll and Clyde	—	1,465
Ayrshire and Arran	642	1,529
Borders	—	608
Dumfries and Galloway	119	857
Fife	1,018	1,822
Forth Valley	987	2,129
Grampian	2,404	3,216
Greater Glasgow	399	466
Highland	549	1,519
Lanarkshire	778	2,105
Lothian	590	3,926
Tayside	604	1,401
Orkney	—	163
Shetland	—	101
Western Isles	144	147
Total	8,234	21,454

In addition to the above, health boards paid £10.3 million to other agencies in 1993–94 for non-NHS care services, and are estimating £9.6 million for 1994–95.

Resource transfers are to be regarded as a contribution towards the cost of alternative care services in the community. Health boards' contributions will reflect what can be afforded from the savings achieved through contractions in long-stay bed provision after any necessary reinvestment in alternative health care services. The level of reinvestment is very much dependent on local circumstances and need. It is not possible, therefore, to draw ready conclusions about either the adequacy or proportion of savings eventually transferred. I am, nevertheless, encouraged with the expected level of increase for 1993–94 to 1994–95.

Development Corporations

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 467, if he will list for each development corporation of Scotland (a) how many of their properties are currently leased to housing associations and (b) the name of the housing association in each case.

Mr. Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to his question on 17 January, Official Report, columns 467-68.

Footpaths

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent or grant aided in each of the last three years for which figures are available by Scottish National Heritage on the repair of eroded footpaths.

Sir Hector Monro: Expenditure on footpath repairs in each of the last three years has been:

1991–92: £277,655—Countryside Commission for Scotland
1992–93: £292,024—Scottish Natural Heritage
1993–94: £272,566—Scottish Natural Heritage

These figures exclude some expenditure on paths which is aggregated with other works to improve a recreation site or facility. They are grant costs at rates varying from 50 per cent. to 85 per cent. according to location of site and the range of organisations which are contributing to the costs.

SNH also runs a footpath management project with aims of promoting more action on path management and encouraging high standards of work. This project is funded through SNH's research budget at around £20,000 per annum. In addition, SNH has undertaken surveys of the need for path management to establish better the scale of the problem. Surveys of this kind have been undertaken in Wester Ross and are under way in the Cairngorms.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the number of buildings currently listed in category A and in category B;

(2) how many applications have been received from the owners of listed buildings for financial assistance towards the cost of repairs and maintenance in each of the last five financial years; and what has been the total value of the grants awarded.

Sir Hector Monro: The subjects of the questions relate to matters undertaken by Historic Scotland. I have asked its director and chief executive, Mr. Graeme Munro, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graeme N. Munro to Mr. Robert Maclennan, dated 31 January 1995:

You have tabled two Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Scotland for Written Answer on 31 January. As these Questions relate to operational matters undertaken by Historic Scotland, I have been asked to provide the information you are seeking. The terms of this letter will be reproduced in the Official Report and a copy of it will also be deposited in the Library of the House.

I shall answer each Question in the order in which it appears on the Order Paper.

Question: What is the number of buildings currently listed in category A and in category B.

As at 25 January 1995, the number of buildings listed at category A was 2,987 and the number of buildings listed at category B was 25,093.

Question: How many applications have been received from the owners of listed buildings for financial assistance towards the cost of repairs and maintenance in each of the last five financial years; and what has been the total value of the grants awarded.

The total number of historic building repair grant applications received from owners of listed buildings and buildings situated within outstanding conservation areas over the past five financial years is as follows:

1990–91 103
1991–92 62
1992–93 54
1993–94 97
Total 432

The total value of historic building repair grants awarded for the last five complete financial years is as follows:

1989–90 £8,848,360
1990–91 £11,371,775
1991–92 £12,317,845
1992–93 £9,836,580
1993–94 £14,644,413
Total £57,018,973

The relationship between the figures in the above tables warrants some further explanation. The award of a grant can take place in the same financial year in which the application was received, but that is unusual given the importance of a careful evaluation by the owner, his professional adviser and Historic Scotland of the building and its needs so that a comprehensive specification for repairs can be agreed. What is more, the amount of grant awarded for what are usually significant capital projects normally is paid over two or more financial years and payments do not flow until recognised phases of the work have been completed.

The actual grant payments in each of the last five complete financial years were:

1990–91 £8,954,716
1991–92 £9,219,458
1992–93 £10,291,158
1993–94 £11,140,000
Total £47,963,987

I hope this information is helpful.

Reversal of Status Forms

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients in each health board area are recorded as having signed reversal of status forms from (a) private to NHS and (b) NHS to private in each of the past three years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not centrally available.

Scottish Homes

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many Glasgow houses Scottish Homes intends to transfer to new landlords or housing associations;

(2) if the ballot papers issued to Scottish Homes tenants will have an option for the tenants concerned to vote (a) to remain with Scottish Homes or (b) to be transferred to the local authority;

(3) what guidelines he has issued or plans to issue to housing associations with regard to which organisation they can borrow from in order to acquire the property which Scottish Homes wishes to transfer;

(4) what housing estates in Glasgow Scottish Homes will be seeking to transfer to new landlords or housing associations;

(5) what is the current value of the houses that Gemini housing association has expressed an interest in buying from Scottish Homes;

(6) what restrictions on borrowing have been placed on Gemini housing association by Scottish Homes; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked the chairman of Scottish Homes, Sir James Mellon, to write to the hon. Member with the relevant information.

A74-M74

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many miles of the A74-M74 upgrading being financed by his Department is in England; what is the estimated cost of the work involved; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None of the A74 upgrading being financed by the Scottish Office is in England.

The Kirkpatrick Fleming to Gretna contract, administered by my Department and opened in December 1992, incorporated a 1 km length of motorway in England, including an interchange at Guardsmill. This short section was necessary to enable the new road to be opened as a motorway and was financed by the Department of Transport.

The Scottish Office and the Department of Transport are exploring the possibility of completing the remaining sections of route using a design, build, finance and operate solution. Should this proceed as a single joint contract, the costs would again be apportioned to each Department.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (i) hold open meetings, (ii) conduct public consultation exercises, (iii) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interest, (iv) publish a register of members' interests, (v) publish agendas for meetings and (vi) publish the minutes of meetings; and whether this is in each case (a) under a statutory requirement or (b) voluntary.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 16 December 1994]: The information requested by the hon. Member is as follows:

(i) In the case of children's panel advisory committees, the meetings are open to the public but discussions relating to confidential matters affecting children's panels or individual panel members or candidates are taken in private.

(ii) The Boundary Commission for Scotland conducts public consultation exercises by publicising proposed changes to electoral boundaries and holds inquiries under the Parliamentary Constituency Act 1986. The Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland also publicises its proposals and holds local inquiries under section 19 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973. Local inquiries usually take place where there are major differences of opinion about the commission's proposals.

(iii) No consultation exercises are held by any advisory non-departmental public body sponsored by my Department with outside commercial interests.

(iv) No advisory non-departmental public body sponsored by my Department holds a register of members' interests.

(v) Agendas of meetings of children's panel advisory committees are available to the public if required.

(vi) Minutes of meeting of children's panel advisory committees are available to the public if required. Subject to confidential matters concerning individuals not being available, the boundary commission would be willing to consider making minutes of meetings available to interested parties.

The requirement for children's panel advisory committees to make available the information recorded above is not statutory. The requirement for the Boundary Commission for Scotland and the Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland to publicise their proposals is statutory.

New Zealand Flatworm

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what studies he has carried out into the numbers of areas in Scotland where the New Zealand flatworm has been found; if it is increasing in numbers and areas affected; and what assessment he has made of its impact on native earthworms and soil structure.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 26 January 1995]: In 1992 research was commissioned by the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department into the distribution of New Zealand flatworm in Scotland and also its impact on agriculture and horticulture. The flatworm was found to be widely distributed, mainly in private gardens and allotments. There is evidence to show that it has not become widely established in agricultural land. The research was thus unable to assess fully the impact on earthworm populations and soil in an agricultural background.

There has been an increase in sightings reported by the public. These are recorded by the Scottish Crop Research Institute, which monitors the position in conjunction with the Department. The need for further research into the impact of the New Zealand flatworm and methods of control is kept under review.

Electro-shock Weapons

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the manufacture and supply of (a) electro-shock weapons and (b) instruments of torture by Scottish-based companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 January 1995]: I have no such information.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the acquisition of electro-shock weapons by police forces in Scotland, the use for which they are acquired and the guidelines which govern such acquisitions.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 January 1995]: No police force in Scotland has acquired electro-shock weapons, nor has any force intimated an intention to acquire such weapons.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what financial assistance has been given by his Department to United Kingdom companies actively involved in the manufacture, marketing and supply of electro-shock weapons; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the policy of his Department in providing financial assistance to firms involved in the manufacture, marketing or supply of electro-shock weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 January 1995]: My right hon. Friend is not aware of any financial assistance having ever been provided to support the manufacture, marketing or supply of electro-shock weapons. Prior to 1989, regional development grants amounting to less than £5,000 were paid to ICL Plastics Ltd., but these grants did not relate to electro-shock weapons.

Forth Rail Bridge

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 25 January, Official Report, column 275, if he will publish the findings of any engineering or structural survey of the Forth rail bridge commissioned by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 January 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 25 January, Official Report, column 275.

N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide estimates for the total amount that has been paid to N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. with respect to any work undertaken by it on privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1979 after taking account of inflation.

Mr. Lang: No work has been undertaken by N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. on any privatisation programmes in which my Department has been engaged since 1979.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 1 February 1995

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Special Advisers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the severance payments made to special advisers in each of the last five years indicating (a) the amount and (b) the date.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor's Department has not employed any special advisers during the last five years.

Legal Aid

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the total sum paid in legal aid for Mr. Jawad Hashim in connection with legal action between him and the Arab monetary fund.

Mr. John M. Taylor: A total of £2.8 million has been paid on account to lawyers representing Dr. Hashim. However, the principal legal aid certificate issued in respect of proceedings between Dr. Hashim and the Arab monetary fund has been revoked pending an appeal against revocation by Dr. Hashim. If the decision to revoke is upheld Dr. Hashim will be deemed never to have been legally aided, in which case the Legal Aid Board would be entitled to recover its costs from Dr. Hashim. The final cost of the case to the legal aid fund will depend on the outcome of the appeal and, if appropriate, any legal aid costs would be subject to taxation by the court.

TREASURY

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the Departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document, "Focus on Ability".

Mr. Nelson: At 1 July 1994 the number of registered disabled people employed in the Chancellor's departments and agencies was 1,686, representing 1.8 per cent. of total staff. Figures for the number and proportion of all disabled people employed in the Chancellor's departments and agencies are not available, but surveys carried out by some of the Chancellor's departments and agencies suggest that there may be as many non-registered disabled people as there are registered.

Advertisements

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in his Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Nelson: None.

Standard Chartered Bank

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss the activities of Standard Chartered bank.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I meet the Governor of the Bank of England regularly, and a wide range of issues is discussed.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the chairman of Standard Chartered bank.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I cannot recall and I have no record of meeting the current chairman of Standard Chartered bank, or his predecessor, since my appointment as Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has called for a report from the Governor of the Bank of England on Standard Chartered bank's involvement in India.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I receive regular reports from the Bank of England on a range of issues.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what improvements he is to make to banking supervision following the involvement of Standard Chartered bank in India.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: None. The Banking Acts already give the Bank of England the powers it needs to supervise the world-wide operations of United Kingdom authorised institutions.

Budget Report

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will revise the tables in the 1995–96 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" to take account of the measures he announced on 8 December.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Copies of a document which contains a full set of revised tables, corresponding to those in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96", are available today from the Vote Office.

Taxes

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer on 19 December, Official Report, column 944, if he will now show the figures for indirect taxes, broken down into (a) VAT and (b) other indirect taxes; and when figures for council tax will be available.

Sir George Young [holding answer 25 January 1995]: The breakdown requested is in the table. Figures for council tax on a similar basis to those provided for other taxes will need to be estimated from family expenditure survey data on actual council tax payments. At present we have figures only for such payments for the first nine months of its operation after April 1993. We need to investigate further to see whether this provides data of sufficient quantity and quality to enable reliable estimates to be made. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as I have further information on when these figures might be available.

[1] Figures for indirect taxes are only shown for a narrow earnings range because the margin of error outside this range is too high to produce even illustrative estimates using the methods outlined in the notes below. Spending patterns vary widely between households with the same income and composition and all figures shown for indirect taxes are very approximate.

Notes to tables:

1. Earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. Estimates of earnings in 1994–95 and 1995–96 are based on earnings growth assumptions of 3½ per cent. in 1994–95 and 4½ per cent. in 1995–96.

2. The estimates of indirect taxes shown exclude council tax, but include estimates of the impact of intermediate taxes on households as well as taxes on final goods and services. Estimates of the impact of taxes on final goods and services assume that these taxes are fully incident on households. Estimates of the impact of intermediate taxes are based on the relation between intermediate production costs and final consumption derived using input-output techniques.

3. Estimates for most indirect taxes are based on equations derived from the 1985 family expenditure survey uprated to later years using forecasts of aggregate tax receipts. Estimates of VAT on domestic fuel and power, airline passenger duty and insurance premium tax are based on equations using results from the 1991 and 1992 family expenditure surveys uprated using a similar methodology. All estimates are based on the illustrative assumption that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved.

4. Estimates of indirect taxes are very approximate because spending patterns vary widely between households with the same composition and income. The margin of error is even higher outside the range of earnings shown, and even illustrative estimates cannot be made. Because of sampling variation, there can be substantial differences between estimates obtained from family expenditure surveys for different years.

5. Net disposable income after income tax and national insurance is calculated on the assumption that the household receives no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. All earners, including wives, are assumed to pay class 1 NI contributions at the contracted-in rate. Child benefit is treated as a negative income tax in order to provide comparability with support given through child tax allowances.

Special Advisers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when severance pay for special advisers was introduced; for what reasons; and what are the terms of the scheme.

Sir George Young [holding answer 31 January 1995]: Severance pay for special advisers was introduced in 1977. Under current arrangements, advisers are eligible for severance payments when their appointments are terminated automatically with the end of an administration, or on the day after polling day in a general election, or when the appointing Minister leaves his or her appointment. Where an adviser is reappointed immediately after one of those occurrences, no payment is made. Similarly, if an adviser is reappointed following a break of service, the adviser may be required to pay back a proportion of any severance payment received. Severance payments, subject to tax and national insurance, are made in accordance with the scale in the table.

	Number of months pay in lieu of notice for those aged:
Years of service	Under 34	34	35 and above
Less than two	3	3.0	3
Two but less than three	3	3.5	4
Three but less than four	3	4.0	5
Four and over	3	4.5	6

All special advisers, regardless of age, are entitled to one month's severance pay if their appointment is made within six months of the latest date by which a general election must take place, or if they resign to take part in national political activities within six months of their appointment.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Flagpole

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee why the flagpole at Westminster is not perpendicular.

Mr. Ray Powell: I have no reason to believe that the flagpole is not perpendicular.

Private Dining Facilities

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee, pursuant to his answer of 1 December, Official Report, column 804, when he expects the Catering Committee to conclude its review of private dining facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: The Catering Committee has now concluded its review of private dining facilities. In its deliberations, the Committee endorsed several general principles on the proper use of these facilities, and agreed that a reasonable degree of transparency would be appropriate in releasing statistics on bookings in response to parliamentary questions, based on those provided by the then Leader of the House on 10 November 1989.

The Committee also considered whether Members hosting a function should indicate whether they had a relevant registered interest, and agreed to a new procedure which is set out in the resolution passed on 25 January 1995, which records the Committee's conclusions and is, for the benefit of the House, set out in full:

Resolved, That the Committee, having considered the principle and operation of private dining facilities in the House, do conclude that:

(a) it is appropriate for the House to have private dining rooms; it is acceptable for these facilities to be used for party political functions or for "lobbying purposes"; and because of security and other implications, no alternative use of the rooms is considered appropriate.

(b) it is unacceptable for the private dining rooms to be used for any purpose involving direct commercial gain, or as an inducement to recruit new members of outside organisations or non-Parliamentary associations.

(c) the special status of the following Parliamentary organisations be recognised by permitting them to book the private dining rooms in their own names:

(i) Select Committees of the House and the British-Irish Parliamentary Body;

(ii) The Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the British-American Parliamentary Group, the Council of Europe, the Western European Union, the North Atlantic Assembly and the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe Parliamentary Assembly;

(iii) The Industry and Parliament Trust;

(iv) registered All-Party and Parliamentary Groups; and

(v) established Dining Clubs.

(d) in the interests of clarifying the stance of a Member hosting a function in a private dining room, he or she should indicate a relevant registered interest by answering the following questions, to be added to the booking form:

(i) "Do you have a registered interest relating to your sponsorship of this function? Yes/No".

(ii) "Are you making this booking on behalf of another Member? Yes/No."

(iii) "If Yes, does this other Member have a registered interest relating to the sponsorship of this function? Yes/No"; and that, in addition, invitations should be annotated appropriately "Relevant registered interest declared"".

The Committee also agreed that the resolution should take effect from the return of the House after the Easter adjournment, and that in response to future parliamentary questions requesting statistics of the booking of private dining rooms, I should answer giving figures on the basis of the statistics compiled from the date of implementation of this resolution.

Finally, I wish to advise the hon. Member that the Committee's full formal "Minutes of Proceedings" are today available from the Vote Office or through HMSO.

TRANSPORT

Drivers (Eyesight)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to what extent his Department's system for determining the causes of road accidents seeks to identify visual defects as causative factors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The reports completed by police officers for national statistical purposes—STATS 19—are confined to the objective circumstances of the accident and do not record views about possible causes.

Road Schemes

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those road schemes approved at the public inquiry stage since 1985 and since built, in each case giving (a) the capital cost estimate submitted to the public inquiry, (b) the actual cost, (c) the net present value estimated at the public inquiry and (d) his estimate of the net present value had the correct capital cost been approved.

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Joan Walley, dated 1 February 1995:

As you know, Mr. Watts, Minister for Railways and Roads, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for a list of those road schemes approved at the public inquiry stage since 1985 and since built, in each case giving (a) the capital cost estimate submitted to the public enquiry, (b) the actual cost, (c) the net present value estimated at the public inquiry and (d) his estimate of the net present value had the correct capital cost been approved.

I regret that the information you asked for is not held centrally by the Agency and given the number of schemes involved a file search to extract it could only be done at disproportionate cost.

However, I can say that a recent study of 6 schemes has indicated that the overall post-construction net present value is very close to that predicted prior to public inquiry on those schemes.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road schemes approved since 1985 are at the stage where (a) orders have been published, (b) an inquiry is pending, (c) an inquiry has been completed, the road approved and no contract has been let and (d) an inquiry has been completed, the road approved and the contract let.

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Joan Walley, dated 1 February 1995:

As you know, Mr Watts, Minister for Railways and Roads, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many road schemes approved since 1985 are at the stage where (a) orders have been published, (b) an inquiry is pending, (c) an inquiry has been completed, the road approved and no contract has been let and (d) an inquiry has been completed, the road approved and the contract let.

The information you requested will take a little time to retrieve.

I shall write with your answer as soon as possible.

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by the Department or agency.

Mr. Norris: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Red Routes, Lambeth

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects red routes to come into operation in Lambeth and on which roads.

Mr. Norris: The traffic director for London is currently considering a revised timetable for the project as a whole, under which red routes in Lambeth would come into operation progressively between 1996 and 2000. The routes in question are specified in SI 1992 No. 1372.

Channel Tunnel Link

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the status of the final line of the route for the channel tunnel link route announced by his predecessor in October 1991 at the time of that announcement.

Mr. Watts: The route announcement in October 1991 was of a broad corridor for an easterly approach to London along the lines of the proposals by Ove Arup, following a comparative assessment by British Rail of four strategic route options.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the actual or approximate public support in pence per passenger mile on services to which London regional transport provides financial support.

Mr. Norris: Government grant to London Transport is now used almost entirely for investment, rather than revenue support to services. However the current year's grant of £373 million is equivalent, on average, to approximately 6p per passenger mile travelled on London Transport's underground and bus services. Decisions on support for individual services are an operational matter for London Transport.

Through Ticketing

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that through ticketing facilities will continue to be available at (a) Nunhead, (b) Peckham Rye, (c) Denmark Hill, (d) West Dulwich, (e) North Dulwich and (f) Sydenham Hill stations.

Mr. Watts [holding answer 24 January 1995]: None of these stations currently offer a complete through ticketing service because they are not linked to the computer seat reservation system which is essential for some tickets. All are able to offer through tickets not requiring seat reservations.

The rail regulator is consulting on the requirements which should be imposed on station operators. The regulator and I are committed to easy access to through tickets for passengers.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Television Reception

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he expects all parts of Great Britain to be able to receive television signals from the BBC and independent television.

Mr. Dorrell: An estimated 99.4 per cent. of the United Kingdom population can receive television signals from the BBC and independent television. To extend coverage still further, the BBC and independent broadcasters are pursuing a programme of building about 25 new transmitters a year. The self-help television scheme provides unserved communities with the option of making their own arrangements to obtain TV signals. Technological developments, including cable and satellite, provide further opportunities for securing TV reception.

National Lottery

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to commission market research into the socio-economic groups of lottery ticket purchasers; if he will monitor the advertising policies of the national lottery operators to ensure that tickets are not marketed specifically to groups in receipt of social security benefits or otherwise unlikely to be able to afford them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I have no plans to commission such market research at present.

The advertising policy of the national lottery operator is an operational matter. I have therefore asked Peter Davis, the director-general of the national lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the national lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what has been the total and average weekly value of ticket sales by the national lottery to date; how much of that money has been (a) allocated to good causes, (b) retained by the Treasury, (c) retained by the company and (d) awarded in prizes; and what percentage of the sums retained by the company he estimates are its operating profits.

(2) whether the national lottery operators are required to make known their operating profits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: In the first eleven weeks, national lottery sales have reached £619,694,634—a weekly average of £56,334,875. Of this, to the nearest pound, £161,303,539 has been paid to the national lottery distribution fund for distribution to the good causes; £74,363,356 has been paid in lottery duty; £297,456,628 has been paid in prizes to over 12 million winners; and the remaining £86,569,121 has been retained by Camelot Group plc to cover its operating costs and profit, including the 5 per cent. commission on ticket sales paid to its retail agents.

Figures for the operating profits of Camelot Group plc are a matter for the company. It will be filing annual returns and meeting other reporting requirements in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act and other relevant regulations.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much interest has been earned to date on that money raised via the national lottery for distributing to charities.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 30 January 1995]: To date, interest of £661,699 has been earned by the national lottery distribution fund. Of this £132,869 has been attributed to the National Lottery Charities Board.

Executive Search Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidelines are operated by his Department as regards the use of executive search agencies to fill vacancies within his Department and his Department's executive agencies; and in what circumstances his Department employs executive search agencies instead of relying fully on departmental resources to fill vacant posts.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1995]: The guidelines operated by my Department are those set out in the section of the civil service management code covering recruitment as augmented by the more detailed guidance set out in "Executive Searchlight" produced by the public appointments unit of the Cabinet Office and made widely available within my Department. No additional guidelines are issued. To date no executive search agency has been employed to fill a post within my Department or its two agencies. We rely almost completely on filling vacancies with staff from other Government Departments; linked non-departmental public bodies; and local authorities.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much his Department spent during 1994 on recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies; and how many staff were recruited.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1995]: My Department and its agencies spent £60,654.05 on recruiting staff during 1994. The number of staff recruited was 46.

N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will provide estimates for the total amount that has been paid to N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. with respect to any work undertaken by it on privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1992 after taking account of inflation.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1995]: There has been no expenditure of this kind.

Ian Greer Associates

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on how many occasions departmental officials met representatives of Ian Greer Associates (a) formally and (b) informally on 26 January to discuss matters relating to their clients' interests.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1995]: None of my Department's officials met representatives of Ian Greer Associates, either formally or informally, on 26 January.

Protected Wrecks

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress he now expects to make towards the resolution of the issues which have prevented the transfer of responsibility for protected wrecks in English waters to English Heritage.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1995]: It remains departmental policy to seek to transfer responsibility for protected wrecks in English waters to English Heritage. Some issues needing to be resolved are still under discussion but the Treasury Solicitor advises that no transfer can in any case be made without primary legislation, for which there is no immediate parliamentary opportunity.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many licences are currently in force for archaeological work on protected wreck sites; and how many of these licensees have so far published field work information or deposited copies of their reports with the Royal Commission on the historical monuments of England.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1995]: There are currently four licences in force covering archaeological investigation of protected wreck sites. In the last diving season 26 licences were issued in respect of archaeological investigation: three by the Secretary of State for Scotland, two by the Secretary of State for Wales, and 21 by my own Department. I expect that a similar number will be issued for the next diving season.

There is published information about 23 of the sites for which licences were issued in 1994 and those licensed to dive are known to have published information on nine of those sites. Since 1992 one report has been formally deposited with the Royal Commission on the historical monuments of England. Full information about fieldwork reports published by those licensed to dive is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the annual cost to his Department of the functions relating to protected wrecks in English waters in each of the past five years.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1995]: The costs of exercising the functions relating to protected wrecks in United Kingdom waters[1] for the last five years are as follows:

1990–91[2]	110
1991–92[3]	227
1992–93[4]	[5]307
1993–94	271
1994–95	255

[1] The majority of expenditure is incurred on a United Kingdom basis. [2] The Department of Transport was responsible for underwater archaeology until April 1991.
[3] The Department of the Environment was responsible for underwater archaeology until April 1992.
[4] The Department of National Heritage has been responsible for underwater archaeology since April 1992.
[5] This figure includes costs associated with a new, expanded contract with the ADU.

The figures include the cost of marking wrecks on land and at sea and a contract with the archaeological diving unit based at St. Andrew's university to provide advice in relation to wrecks of historical, archaeological or artistic interest. They also include approximate figures to cover the varying costs of the advisory committee on historic wreck sites, and, from April 1991, diminishing grants to voluntary organisations carrying out projects connected with the Department's underwater archaeology objectives, and departmental staff costs.

Coaching (Cricket and Rugby)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assistance his Department has given towards the development of coaching of (a) cricket and (b) rugby football in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 30 January 1995]: Total Sports Council funding for these sports, which includes support for the development of coaching, is as follows:

	1992–93 £	1993–94 £
Cricket	802,114	587,732
Rugby Union	118,320	219,196
Rugby League	322,110	197,654

A total figure is not available for 1991–92. The council also gives an annual grant to the National Coaching Foundation—£1.064 million in 1992–93, £1.494 million in 1993–94 and £1.420 million in 1994–95—which contributes to the development of coaching in these and other sports. In addition, Sportsmatch has provided total awards to cricket, rugby league and rugby union projects which include coaching or training as follows:

	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £
Cricket	3,000	248,192	199,000
Rugby League	40,000	118,650	138,042
Rugby Union	12,000	352,412	415,144

HOME DEPARTMENT

DNA Databases

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration his Department has given to providing additional funding to police authorities to enable them to establish full DNA databases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) on 16 December 1994, Official Report column 828.

British Citizens (Extradition)

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British citizens have been extradited to face criminal charges involving child sexual abuse for each year since 1989.

Mr. Maclean: Since 1989 three British citizens have been extradited for offences involving child abuse; one each year in 1990, 1992 and 1993.

Probation Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what advice will be given to the probation service on efficiency savings following the 1994 Budget statement and current probation caseload;

(2) what efficiency savings he expects will be made by the probation service in England and Wales during the financial year 1995–96.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Government have already made clear to the probation service their expectation that improvements in efficiency across the full range of operational and support services will be vigorously pursued. It will be for individual probation committees to judge what specific steps should be taken in the light of local circumstances; but among the efficiencies to which the Government expect committees to give particular attention are the use of accommodation, information systems, inter-area collaboration and quality control.

Probation Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the estimated additional cost to the probation service of working with victims during 1995–96;

(2) what is the estimated additional cost to the probation service of enforcing national standards during 1995–96.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Grant support for the probation service in 1995–96 should be sufficient to enable it to carry out its responsibilities in relation to the enforcement of national standards and working with victims without additional provision.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff employed by the probation service in England and Wales have a previous background which is either (a) military, (b) police or (c) industry for the latest date available.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: This information is not readily available.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what adjustments were made to the probation service budget in England and Wales as a result of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The provisional current grant baseline for 1995–96 published after the 1993 Budget statement was £309.1 million, net of retentions and balances. The grant settlement for that year will be £306.3 million plus a further £14.8 million to support probation service partnerships with the independent sector previously funded by the Home Office.

Community Sentencing

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be publishing his Department's consultation paper on community sentencing.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to do so before too long.

Electro-Shock Equipment

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place with Mr. Gerry Hall on the need to apply for a section 5 permit for the manufacture, possession or sale of repressive technologies, including electro-shock treatment.

Mr. Maclean: None.

Confiscation Orders

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many domestic confiscation orders have been made under (a) the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 and (b) part VI of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 in each year since 1992; and what were the amounts ordered to be confiscated and the amounts actually realised under each Act for each year.

Mr. Maclean: The information is given in the table.

Confiscation order data England and Wales

Act/Year	Number of confiscation orders	Amount ordered to be confiscated £	Year	[1]Amount realised £
Drug Trafficking Act 1986
1992	1,002	9,129,863	[2]1992–93	5,180,900
1993	983	9,678,100	1993–94	5,377,400
Part VI—Criminal Justice Act 1988
1992–93	19	1,354,000	[2]1992–93	481,600
1993–94	13	412,200	1993–94	265,600

Note:

Annual data is taken from the Criminal Statistics England and Wales, financial year data from the Confiscation Order Financial return. The figures are therefore not directly comparable.

[1] The amounts overstate the amounts reaching the Consolidated Fund, as magistrates' courts deduct from these figures any costs incurred in enforcing domestic confiscation orders. Receivers' costs can vary from £1,000 to £5,000, depending on the complexity of the case.

[2] For 1992–93 the information collected centrally is known to be incomplete as returns were not received from all petty sessional divisions.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on crime prevention in the latest year for which figures are available; and what percentage this was of total spending on the criminal justice service.

Mr. Maclean: The information available is as follows. Home Office expenditure on crime prevention in 1993–94 was £13.1 million. That figure is separate from and additional to public expenditure on the police which was £6.2 billion in 1993–94, an increase of 87 per cent. in real terms since 1978–79. The prevention of crime is one of the key functions of the police. Public expenditure on the criminal justice system as a whole in 1993–94 is estimated to have been £9.5 billion.

Humberside Probation Committee

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to announce a date for the replacement of Humberside probation committee by the shadow probation boards.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: My right hon. and learned Friend will bring forward legislative proposals for the replacement of probation committees by boards when the parliamentary timetable permits.

Reconvictions

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, column 138, what are the current reconviction rates for (a) adult males, (b) adult females, (c) young adult males, (d) young adult females, (e) juvenile males and (f) juvenile females commencing probation orders and community service orders and for persons discharged from custodial sentences.

Mr. Maclean: The information is as follows:

Percentage of offenders convicted[1] within a two-year period following commencement of an order in 1987–90 or discharged in 1987–90 from a custodial sentence by sex and age at commencement or discharge

	Males	Females	All
Aged under 17[2]—Juveniles
Community service order	78	[3]61	77
Custodial sentence	85	58	85
Aged 17 to 20—young adults
Probation order	70	45	66
Community service order	65	45	65
Custodial sentence	71	56	70
Aged 21 and over—adults
Probation order	50	36	46
Community service order	47	42	47
Custodial sentence	47	36	47
All ages
Probation order	58	39	54
Community service order	56	44	56
Custodial sentence	55	40	54

[1] Reconvicted of a serious offence as defined by the standard list in appendices 4 and 5 of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 1993"

[2] Until the Criminal Justice Act was implemented on 1 October 1992 it was not possible to sentence an offender aged under 17 to a probation order. Those aged under 17 who were sentenced to a community service order were all aged 16.

[3] Based on a sample of only 23 offenders.
Comparisons between different types of sentence are affected by differences in the age, sex, previous convictions and other characteristics of offenders receiving the sentences, as described in the forthcoming Home Office Research Study, "Explaining reconviction rates: a critical analysis".

Sponsor Interviews

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals for changes to procedures used for recording and progressing requests from entry clearance officers overseas and others for sponsors living in the United Kingdom to be interviewed have been canvassed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The system of recording and progressing requests from entry clearance officers for interviews is reviewed from time to time. As a way of progressing applications, consideration is given, as necessary, to offering sponsors the opportunity for interview at a location outside their immediate area if capacity exists at another port.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many requests for sponsor interviews have been recorded by his Department in each of the last three years to date; and what is the current target time between the recording of a request for a sponsor interview and the official requesting the interview receiving a report on the outcome of such an interview;

(2) in how many cases over the last three years his Department has recorded more than one request for a sponsor interview in the United Kingdom from an entry clearance officer overseas; in how many a sponsor has waited to be interviewed more than (a) six months; (b) nine months and (c) 12 months;

(3) how many requests for sponsor interviews have been recorded by his Department over the past year; if he will list the ports of entry to which those interview requests have been referred; in each port in how many cases (a) the interview has taken place, (b) an interview date has been offered, (c) no offer of an interview has yet been offered, (d) an interview report has been passed to his Department and (e) an interview report has yet to be despatched.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: This information is not available. Some 1,700 entry clearance interviews with sponsors were conducted between 1 January 1992 and 31 December 1994. The waiting time for interview may vary according to the operational commitments at a particular port at a particular time but the objective is for interviews on deferred EC applications to be carried out within three months of receipt of the request from the entry clearance officer.

Leeds-Bradford Airport

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Leeds-Bradford airport was designated as a port of entry; how many and what grades of immigration service officers are currently based at the airport; what was the establishment of immigration officer staff at the comparable period of each year since the airport became a port of entry; how many immigration clerical support staff have been employed at the airport each year since it became a port of entry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Leeds-Bradford airport was designated as a port of entry on 1 March 1987. Records indicate that, since 1987, the immigration office at Leeds-Bradford airport has had the following staff in post:

1 March 1987:
1 Chief Immigration Officer
7 Immigration Officers
1 part-time Administrative Officer and
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1988:
1 Inspector
1 Chief Immigration Officer
7 Immigration Officers
1 part-time Administrative Officer and
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1989:
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers,
8 Immigration Officers and
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1990:
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers
9 Immigration Officers
1 part-time Administrative Officer
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1991:
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers
8 Immigration Officers
1 part-time Administrative Officer and
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1992:
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers
8 Immigration Officers
1 part-time Administrative Officer
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1993:
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers
9 Immigration Officers
1 part-time Administrative Officer and
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1994:
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers
10 full-time and 1 part-time Immigration Officers
1 part-time Administrative Officer and
1 part-time typist.

1 January 1995:
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers
10 full-time and 1 part-time Immigration Officers,
1 Executive Officer, 1 part-time Administrative Officer and
1 part-time typist.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of requests outstanding for sponsor interviews at Leeds-Bradford Airport; and over the last three years (a) what has been the average delay between the date a request for a sponsor interview being recorded in his Department and the interview being conducted by immigration officers based at Leeds-Bradford airport and (b) how many sponsor interviews have been conducted each week; and what representations has he received about delays in holding sponsor interviews by immigration office staff at Leeds-Bradford airport.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Local records indicate that there are currently 135 requests for sponsor interviews outstanding at Leeds-Bradford airport where the average delay in 1992 and 1993 in dealing with cases was 2.14 months in 1992 and 3.29 months in 1993. In 1994 the average delay in completed cases was 2.29 months. Some cases from 1994 have not yet been completed.

Records of interviews are not kept on a weekly basis but a total of 27 interviews took place in 1992, 20 in 1993 and 69 in 1994.

The information requested about representations received in respect of delays in holding sponsor interviews at Leeds-Bradford airport is not held in the form requested and cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Boards of Visitors

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what are his proposals for reviewing the role of boards of visitors at prison establishments.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am currently setting up a review of the role of boards of visitors.

The Prisons Act 1952 provides for a board of visitors to be appointed to every prison and young offender institution. Members of boards are lay volunteers drawn from the local community. I value the work of boards and the participation of the local community, and I am keen to maintain this involvement of lay people in the prison system. My objective for the review is to strengthen the role of boards and help them undertake their duties more effectively. With this background the review is asked to make recommendations with particular respect to:

how this role should be redefined or clarified;
the interface between boards of visitors, HM Chief Inspector of Prison and the prison ombudsman;
the recruitment and appointment of boards of visitors members;
the training of boards of visitors members;
the national representation of boards of visitors;
the administrative support at national and local level funding of the work of boards visitors;
an appropriate title for boards of visitors;

I shall be helped in the work of the review by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons; a small number of board members; representatives of their national organisations and a co-opted prison governor. We will be supported by a small team of Home Office officials.

Board members and groups with an interest in penal affairs are being invited to submit representations to the review group by 3 March. I would also welcome any representations from hon. Members. I hope to reach conclusions by the beginning of April and will announce these to the House.

Alleged Rape Charges

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that the names and addresses of persons charged with the offence of rape and not published in the press or broadcast media unless and until those persons are found guilty.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 January 1995]: I am satisfied that the present law, which affords anonymity for complainants in sexual offence cases but offers no special protection for defendants in such cases, strikes a proper balance between the principle of open justice on one hand and the need to ensure that victims of sexual offences come forward on the other. I therefore have no plans to alter the law in this area.

ENVIRONMENT

Right to Buy (Repurchase)

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to allow local authorities to use a proportion of their capital receipts to repurchase properties from tenants who exercised their right to buy and now find themselves living in accommodation which is no longer suitable and which is unsaleable on the property market.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We are currently looking at an exchange sale scheme to help local authorities to take back certain flats, which are affected by mortgageability difficulties, in exchange for selling leaseholders another home more suitable for their needs. We have received a number of representations on this which we are currently considering.

Social Housing

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the background information on the need for new social housing lettings which he used in his decisions on the 1995–96 Housing Corporation approved development programme.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My Department takes a view on the medium-term demand for rented housing as part of the annual public expenditure survey. I will publish the necessary background information in due course.

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the figures for the Housing Corporation's allocations for co-operatives for the year 1995-96; and if he will make a statement on how these relate to their housing co-operative strategy.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Housing Corporation's total allocation to housing co-operatives in 1995–96 is £9.514 million.

The projects supported reflect the policies set out in the corporation's "Housing Co-operatives Strategy" published in March 1993.

Pollution Levels, Rotherham

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to measure levels of (a) nitrogen oxides, (b) sulphur dioxide, (c) ozone, (d) carbon monoxide and (e) PM10 in Rotherham.

Mr. Atkins: My Department, in co-operation with local authorities, operates national monitoring networks which measure, inter alia, levels of smoke and sulphur dioxide on a daily basis, and the levels of nitrogen dioxide on a monthly basis. the sites at Brampton, Dinnigton, Maltby and Wath upon Dearne in the Rotherham area form part of the national smoke and sulphur dioxide network. The levels of nitrogen dioxide are measured at four separate sites in the Rotherham metropolitan area: Doncaster gate, Wellgate, Broom and Eastwood.

I understand that further air quality monitoring is undertaken in Rotherham by the local authority, and at present covers ozone, nitrogen oxides and sulphur dioxide.

The Government's strategy for the general development of air quality monitoring was recently set out in "Air Quality: Meeting the Challenge", a copy of which has been deposited in the Library of the House. This includes proposals for the progressive integration of national and local authority monitoring networks into a single quality-assured network.

Research and Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what his Department's budget for research and development was in 1994; and what proportion of this was spent on research into radioactive waste management and disposal.

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department's budget for research and development in 1994–95 is £112 million. The proportion of the Department's total research expenditure to be spent on research into radioactive waste management and disposal is expected to be 3.5 per cent.

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the absenteeism rates for (a) the Planning Inspectorate and (b) the Ordnance Survey in 1994.

Sir Paul Beresford: The provision of information on absenteeism rates in the Planning Inspectorate is the responsibility of the agency itself under its chief executive, Mr. Chris Shepley. For the Ordnance Survey this is the responsibility of its chief executive, Professor Rhind.

I have therefore asked them to reply.

Letter from C. J. Shepley to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 1 February 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the absenteeism rate for the Planning Inspectorate (PQ/940/94/95).

The average number of days absent due to sickness, both certificated and uncertificated, was 8.75. This covers both Planning Inspectors and administrative staff.

Letter from David Rhind to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 27 January 1995:

The Secretary of State for the Environment has asked me to reply to your Question about absenteeism in Ordnance Survey.

As I intimated in my letter of 16 January, since the Occupational Health Service keeps the statistics you seek from information supplied regularly by individual departments, Ordnance Survey does not itself keep duplicate records. I am told by the Occupational Health Service that details of absenteeism rates for 1994 will be available to departments in July 1995.

I regret that I cannot supply the information you have requested at this time.

Westminster City Council

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will be replying to the letter dated 12 January from Mr. Andrew Disnall, regarding an extraordinary audit of Westminster city council.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration replied to Councillor Dismore's letter on 30 January.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to order an extraordinary audit into the affairs of Westminster city council.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Secretary of State has no such plans.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he first became aware of the allegations of malpractice at Westminster city council; and how these were brought to his attention.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Neither the Audit Commission nor its appointed auditors has any duty to advise the Secretary of State of audit inquiries that may be initiated.

Since late 1991 my right hon. Friend has been aware, from coverage in the media and motions before this House, that the auditor was carrying out an investigation. The Westminster auditor published his provisional findings on 13 January 1994 which was the first occasion upon which the nature of the allegations and his investigation was confirmed. My right hon. Friend made a statement to the House on that day.

Parking Charges

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if income from parking charges made by local authorities is taken into account when calculating standard spending assessment settlements.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The income of local authorities from car parking is taken into account in determining the total of standard spending assessments. Income of this kind is also taken into account in the analyses on which the SSA formula for 'all other services' is based. But the standard spending assessment of an individual authority does not take specific account of the income from car parking of that authority.

Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 10 local authorities that gained and lost the largest sums through the changes to the education standard spending assessment formula, stating how much each gained or lost.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Taken on a comparable basis the 10 authorities which have gained the most in their education standard spending assessment for 1995–96, and the amount, are:

	£ million
Surrey County Council	16.766
Hertfordshire County Council	10.328
London Borough of Lambeth	6.926
Devon County Council	6.848
Lancashire County Council	6.688
East Sussex County Council	6.404
London Borough of Southwark	6.308
Berkshire County Council	5.788
London Borough of Croydon	5.329
Wiltshire County Council	4.878

The 10 authorities which have lost the most, and the amount, are:

	£ million
London Borough of Havering	2.485
Northumberland County Council	1.980
Norfolk County Council	1.580
Cheshire County Council	1.428
Essex County Council	1.391
Birmingham City Council	1.316
Stockport Metropolitan Borough	1.140
Gateshead Metropolitan Borough	1.052
Sunderland City Council	0.993
Cumbria County Council	0.934

These tables compare the Education SSA for 1995–96 with the sum of the Education SSA for 1994–95 and the estimated net income from recoupment payments in 1994–95.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities that made representations to him regarding the changes to the education standard spending assessment formula; and on what dates these representations were made.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The authorities listed have made representations about the education element in standard spending assessments during the 1995–96 consultation period.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution the highway maintenance indicator makes to the standard spending assessment of (a) Westminster, (b) Coventry and (c) Birmingham councils.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The table shows the information requested in respect of standard spending assessments for 1995–96.

Local Authority	Highway Maintenance Assessment £ million	Total Standard Spending Assessment £ million	Highway Maintenance as percentage of total Percentage
Westminster	9.680	241.849	4.0
Coventry	10.244	227.863	4.5
Birmingham	35.567	880.278	4.0

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the effect of the changes to the education standard spending assessment formula on the standard spending assessment of Westminster and Coventry councils.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Taken on a comparable basis, the percentage increases between 1994–95 and 1995–96 in the Education standard spending assessments for Westminster and Coventry are:

Westminster: 2.6 per cent.

Coventry: 2.0 per cent.

These figures compare the education SSA for 1995–96 with the sum of the education SSA for 1994–95 and the estimated net income from recoupment payments in 1994–95.

Planning Inquiries

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities in England and Wales which have paid him the costs of local plan inquiries together with (a) the amount paid, (b) whether this money has been paid back, (c) when it was paid back, if applicable, and (d) the amount of interest from the date of refund to the present day.

Sir Paul Beresford: I am writing to the hon. Member.

Audit Commission

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the members of the Audit Commission with the terms of appointment, the payment received per year and the number of days worked.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Audit Commission members serving at 31 January 1995 were:

	Time input (per calendar month (pcm)	Remuneration for 1994–95 £
Chairman—Sir David Cooksey	4 days	19,000
Murray Stuart (Deputy)	4 days	13,034
Sir Peter Bowness CBE	1 day	2,948
Alan Brown CBE	2 days	5,896
Anthony Christopher CBE	2 days	5,986
Sir Terence English	1 day	2,948
Sir Donald Irvine CBE	1 day	2,948
Kate Jenkins	1 day	2,948
Sir Peter Kemp	1 day	2,948

Clive Thompson	1 day	2,948
Tony Travers	1 day	2,948
Clive Wilkinson	2 days	5,896
Peter Wood	2 days	5,896

Members' remuneration is taxable and non-pensionable. Adult Commission members are required to comply with the requirements placed upon the commission by statute—primarily the Local Government Finance Act 1982. Members are also expected to adhere to the Audit Commission's code of conduct which is based upon the Treasury's model code of best practice for NDPB boards.

They are debarred from standing for Parliament and are required to declare their interests and to take steps to disengage from any activities which may lead to a conflict of interest with their responsibilities to the Commission.

The terms of appointment of four commission members—Murray Stuart, Sir Peter Bowness, Alan Brown CBE and Anthony Christopher—end on 31 January 1995. The appointment of three new members, effective from 1 February 1995, have been announced; they are Helena Shovelton, Ron Watson CBE and John Foster OBE. From that date the deputy chairman of the commission will be Clive Thompson.

Advertisements

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in his Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Sir Paul Beresford: Some 2,641 statutory notice advertisements have been issued by the Department of the Environment over the last five years. These normally appear under the Secretary of State's or his Ministers' name, in exercise of a statutory duty, and reflect the work of a wide range of divisions within this Department.

Smoke Alarms

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage the fitting of smoke alarms in flats of multiple occupation; and what plans he has to make their fitting compulsory.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Local authorities have powers under part XI of the Housing Act 1985, as amended, to require houses in multiple occupation—HMOs—to have adequate means of escape from fire and other fire precautions. They have a statutory responsibility to ensure adequate fire safety precautions in HMOs with three storeys or more and with a floor space exceeding 500 sqm.

My Department's Circular 12/92 contains the current guidance on fire precaution standards in HMOs. For smoke and fire detection, the minimum standard recommended for two-storey houses is for single-point smoke alarms. For houses of three-storeys or more, L2 fire warning systems are recommended.

The Housing (Management of Houses in Multiple Occupation) Regulations 1990 (SI 1990 No. 830) require managers of HMOs to ensure that all fire precautions are in and are maintained in good order and repair.

The Government also published a consultation paper in November 1994 inviting views by 18 February 1995 on the desirability of introducing a licensing system for HMOs in England and Wales.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he first became aware of the malpractice which led to the surcharging of councillors in (a) Liverpool and (b) Lambeth; and how this was brought to his attention;

(2) when he ordered an extraordinary audit into the affairs of (a) Lambeth and (b) Liverpool councils.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The failure of the members of both Liverpool and Lambeth councils to set a legal rate before midnight on 31 March 1985 and the district auditor's investigations which led to surcharging in each case were widely reported in the press.

The Secretary of State did not order an extraordinary audit of either authority. The Audit Commission exercised its own power under section 22(1) of the Local Government Finance Act 1982 to direct an extraordinary audit.

Noise Pollution

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage local authorities to give higher priority to tackling noise pollution.

Sir Paul Beresford: Local authorities have a wide range of powers to tackle noise pollution from premises and from vehicles, machinery and equipment in the street. In response to rising numbers of complaints about noise, an increasing number of authorities have introduced 24-hour noise complaint services but this is a matter for each authority to decide on the basis of local priorities and needs. An inter-departmental working party was set up in October last year to review the controls over neighbour noise and to investigate options for swifter remedies. The working party expects to complete its review shortly and I intend to consult fully on its conclusions and recommendations.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful prosecutions have been brought for noise nuisance for each year since 1979.

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of prosecutions and convictions for noise nuisance in England and Wales for each year since 1979 are as shown in the table. Figures are not yet available for 1993–94.

Noise nuisance prosecutions and convictions

	Prosecutions	Convictions

Planning, Yorkshire and Humberside

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he intends to introduce an adequate planning structure to implement the planning strategy he outlined in paragraph 4.9 of the Yorkshire and Humberside planning guidance January 1995.

Mr. Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 20 January his proposals on how to take forward strategic planning in North Yorkshire, Humberside and Lincolnshire.

The Secretary of State has endorsed the commission's comments on the need for continued local authority co-operation on economic and planning issues across the Humber estuary. It is this need which is addressed in paragraph 4.9 of the draft regional planning guidance. The Secretary of State would look to the authorities concerned to put in hand the necessary administrative arrangements to achieve this. A formal structure for this purpose is not necessary. The Government office for Yorkshire and Humberside in Leeds is, however, ready to discuss with the authorities concerned any informal arrangements they might like to develop.

Business Rates

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals have been made against the business rate revaluation of 1 April 1990; how many are still outstanding nationally, regionally and by valuation office; and when this process is expected to be completed.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: A total of 1,231,145 proposals to alter the 1990 rating lists had been received in England by 31 December 1994, of which 295,222 were outstanding. I am placing in the Library a table which breaks these totals down by valuation office region and office.

We expect that the vast majority of proposals received by the end of March 1995 will be cleared by the end of 1995–96. Proposals will continue to be made up to 31 March 1996, and the remainder will therefore be settled as early as possible thereafter.

North Yorkshire

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the county name of North Yorkshire.

Mr. Gummer: In the light of representations I have received about the changes I am proposing to make to the structure of local government in North Yorkshire I have decided to change the name of the county to the county of the North Riding of Yorkshire. For ceremonial and related purposes the City of York, which will be a unitary authority, will be deemed to be part of the County of the North Riding of Yorkshire. This change will be reflected in the draft structure order.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which companies or other organisations are conducting contained use work with genetically modified organisms—group I or group II for research or commercial programmes—and at which sites in the United Kingdom; if he will list the documentation he or other public bodies hold concerning the nature of the work undertaken; and what monitoring he has implemented at these sites.

Mr. Oppenheim: I have been asked to reply.

I have arranged for the names and addresses of all persons, companies and other organisations, who have notified premises to be placed in the Library. For all of these notifications the Health and Safety Executive holds the information provided, which includes a description of the modified organism and the activity, and an assessment of the risks to human health and the environment. It also holds similar information for certain individual activities of higher risk.

There are two forms of monitoring of the regulations. It is the responsibility of the person notifying to monitor, where necessary, for the presence of viable genetically modified organisms outside the primary physical containment. In addition, HSE's specialist inspectorate monitors compliance through a programme of inspection and enforcement.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the regulation of contained use activities with genetically modified organisms.

Mr. Oppenheim: I have been asked to reply.

All contained use activities involving genetically modified organisms are controlled under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations 1992. The regulations have now been in force for two years. The experience so far has been that they have provided adequate safeguards to protect human health and the environment.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Iraq

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether the possible falsification of export licences to Iraq referred to in his Department's press statement of 20 September 1993 have now been proved; what formal investigations have been commenced; and what criminal prosecutions have been undertaken.

Mr. Ian Taylor: Inquiries have established that, as far as the Department is aware, falsification of United Kingdom export licences for Iraq has, in the main, taken place outside UK jurisdiction. Since the introduction of new procedures the number of export licences issued for Iraq has fallen significantly. One investigation was undertaken by HM Customs and Excise but no criminal prosecution has taken place.

Regional Electricity Companies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what matters of public interest he will take into account in the event of a foreign conglomerate proposing to take over one of the regional electricity companies.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In the event of such a takeover qualifying for investigation under the Fair Trading Act 1973, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade would be advised on the matter by the Director General of Fair Trading. In giving his advice the DGFT would take account of all relevant factors as would the president in making his decision.

Northern Electric

Mr. Cummings: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what matters of public interest he will take into account when considering Trafalgar House's bid for Northern Electric;

(2) if he will take into account the views of consumers in the north-east in his consideration of the proposed take over by Trafalgar House of Northern Electric.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade will be advised on the proposed merger by the Director General of Fair Trading. In giving his advice the DGFT will take account of all relevant factors, as will the President in making his decision.

Euratom Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which of the facilities operated by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority have had sanctions imposed for infringement of article 88 of the Euratom treaty since 1988; what specific infringement occurred; and what has been done to rectify the situation.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Article 88 of the Euratom treaty provides that "The Agency shall keep a special account in the name of the Community, called Special Fissile Materials Financial Account."

It contains no provision for the imposition of any sanctions.

Nuclear Waste Shipments

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the first shipment of high level waste will take place from Sellafield via Barrow in Furness.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Arrangements for the return of such waste are, in the first instance, a matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc and its customers in line with the contracts between them. I understand that no date has yet been set for the first commercial shipment.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EU Fisheries Policy

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at what date, and in what circumstances, qualified majority voting was agreed to by the United Kingdom Government for fisheries policy.

Mr. Jack: While the Community's market regime for fish and fish products has always been based on article 43 of the treaty, on United Kingdom accession regulation 2141/70 gave vessels of all member states, subject to certain limited derogations, the right to fish throughout all member states waters and was also based on article 235 which requires unanimity.

The UK accession treaty included a 10-year derogation from the provisions of regulation 2141/70. This enabled the UK to maintain a six-mile exclusive limit and impose certain restrictions in the six to 12 mile belt.

In 1976, regulation 2141/70 was replaced by regulation 101/76. This regulation's treaty base also included article 235. The regulation stated that in principle vessels of all member states should have equal access to the use of all fishing grounds within the fisheries limits of member states.

Later in 1976, the member states of the EC agreed to extend their fishery limits to 200 miles. The UK Government sought to extend the UK exclusive limit significantly, but a Council resolution, adopted in The Hague on 3 November 1976 about the creation of a 200 mile fishing zone in the Community, made no reference to this. The outcome of a European Court case in the early 1980s also suggested that, unless a decision to the contrary were taken, the principle of "free access to waters" came into force at the end of the period specified in the accession treaty.

This was the background to the negotiations on the CFP regulations which were formally adopted at the beginning of 1983. These regulations substantially reduced other member states' access to waters within the UK six to 12 mile belt, while continuing their total exclusion from the six mile belt, and also provided for the Shetland box. Regulation 170/83 was the principal regulation and was based on article 43.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the three largest registered owners of milk quota in the United Kingdom, with (a) the quota held by each, (b) the amount of quota held which is leased, (c) the amount of agricultural land owned by each of these registered milk quota holders and (d) the amount of milk produced annually by each of the above.

Mr. Jack: No. An individual's entry in the Intervention Board's milk quota register, maintained under the Dairy Produce Quotas Regulations 1994, is confidential and is disclosed only to that individual or to a person with a valid interest in his or her holding.

Caviar

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quantity of caviar has been imported from (a) Russia and the Soviet Union before it and (b) elsewhere in each year since 1984.

Mr. Jack: Official figures on imports, by quantity, of caviar—sturgeon roe—and caviar substitutes originating from Russia and the former Soviet Union and from elsewhere are given in the tables:

Imports of caviar (sturgeon roe) (tonnes)

	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993

British Association of Sheep Exporters

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the British Association of Sheep Exporters.

Mrs. Browning: My right hon. Friend and I have not met representatives of the British Association of Sheep Exporters nor have we been requested to meet them.

NORTHERN IRELAND

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what purposes other than those connected with the tax and benefits systems the national insurance number may be used; what plans he has to make the number more widely available for those purposes; if legislation is necessary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moss: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 6 December 1994, Official Report, column 163. The national insurance number can be used only for national insurance, tax and social security benefit purposes and there are no plans at present to introduce legislation to extend its use.

Health and Social Services Councils

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Roman Catholics and (b) Protestants are employed by each health and social services council.

Mr. Moss: There are no staff employed by health and social services councils. Staff employed by the health and social services boards service the councils.

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document, "Focus on Ability".

Sir John Wheeler: At 1 January 1994 there were 1,073 non-industrial staff in the Northern Ireland civil service—4.2 per cent. of the non-industrial service—who self-reported a disability. Of these 413—1.6 per cent. of the non-industrial service—were, or had been registered as disabled. In addition 81 registered disabled people are working in the Northern Ireland civil service under the employment support programme.

Of the home civil service staff in the Northern Ireland Office one person is known to be registered disabled—0.45 per cent. of the work-force.

Egg Production

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed in the egg production industry; and what was the figure five years ago.

Mr. Ancram: A total of 522 people are estimated to have been working on specialist egg production farms in 1989 and 605 in 1994. In addition 422 people are estimated to have been working in packing, processing and marketing eggs in 1989 and 462 in 1992, the latest year for which an estimate is available.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many parliamentary answers on health issues have been refused on the grounds of disproportionate cost or information not being held centrally (a) as a total and (b) as a percentage of all health answers in each of the last five years.

Mr. Moss: The information is as follows:

Year	Number of PQs unable to be answered (a)	PQs as a percentage of all Health Answers (b)
1990[1]	8	4
1991[1]	11	4
1992[1]	9	4
1994	14	[illegible]

[1] Due to implementation of computer system the percentage of PQs prior to 1993 are approximate.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

United States Congress

19. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he is taking to build relations with the new United States Congress.

Mr. Hurd: I visited Washington last month, partly to meet the new congressional leaders. Ministers visiting Washington invariably see Members of Congress and I have no doubt that our excellent relations with the US Congress will continue.

Fisheries

20. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food relating to the re-negotiation of the EU-Morocco fisheries agreement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have been in close contact on this subject, and will continue to liaise as negotiations with Morocco develop.

Falkland Islands

21. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Argentina and the future sovereignty of the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Hurd: Co-operation between Britain and Argentina has developed well since 1990. Our exports in the first 10 months of 1994 rose 35 per cent.

My hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, visited the Falkland Islands last weekend. He reassured the islanders that we will continue to uphold their right to self-determination and are not prepared to discuss sovereignty with Argentina.

We have co-operated with Argentina over fisheries conservation since 1990 and we are now examining the prospects for co-operation over oil.

China

22. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit the People's Republic of China to discuss Anglo-Chinese relations.

Mr. Goodlad: I have no plans to visit China at present.

Iraq

23. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has had about hunger and health problems in the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates as a result of the implementation of United Nation sanctions against Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Iraqi regime, not the United Nations, is responsible for the suffering in Iraq. Food and medicines are exempt from UN sanctions. Iraq has twice rejected UN schemes to provide much-needed humanitarian aid in return for limited sales of oil. The Iraqi regime's continued refusal of these offers and its exploitation of human suffering show its callous disregard for its own people.

Overseas Missions

24. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the proportion of the budget for United Kingdom overseas missions currently devoted to promoting trade and commercial relations; and what was the position in 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: Commercial work, including export promotion and inward investment, is the FCO's largest single activity overseas, accounting for 23 per cent. of the cost of running overseas missions or 30 per cent. of frontline staff. This is broadly the same level as in 1989, the first year in which comparable data were available. With the help of efficiency savings, including a programme to reduce staff and costs in support areas, the FCO is planning to create over 100 additional commercial staff slots in posts overseas during 1995, an increase of over 9 per cent. in frontline commercial staff.

Armenia

25. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards opening an embassy in Armenia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The possibility of opening an embassy in Yerevan is currently being carefully considered as part of the regular review of our representation in the states of the former Soviet Union.

Middle East

26. Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the peace process in the middle east.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We welcome the substantial progress that has been made, but we are concerned at the strains on the peace process resulting from a number of recent development, especially the dreadful bombing near Tel Aviv. We will continue to lend our full support to the peacemakers to ensure that those who oppose them do not succeed.

UNESCO

27. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the United Kingdom rejoining UNESCO.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are continuing to keep this issue under review, but have not yet reached a decision.

Departmental Staff

28. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the academic background of graduates entering his Department.

Mr. Goodlad: Graduates entering the fast and main streams of the diplomatic service and the Overseas Development Administration come from a wide variety of academic backgrounds.

European Union

29. Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the President of the European Commission to discuss the future of the European Union.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary meets Mr. Santer as a matter of course at Foreign Affairs Councils. The next Foreign Affairs Council is on 6 and 7 February.

Pirate Attacks

30. Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many attacks by pirates on British shipping off the coast of Brazil have been recorded since 1987.

Mr. Goodlad: Our records show six attacks since 1987: three attacks on British-flagged ships, one attack on a Hong Kong-flagged, British-managed ship and two attacks on ships with a British interest, but flagged in other countries.

Chechnya

31. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to assist the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe to establish a mission in Chechnya.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We welcome the Russian decision to agree to an Organisation of Security and Co-operation in Europe fact-finding mission to Moscow and Chechnya on 24 to 27 January which explored the possibilities for greater OSCE involvement. A United Kingdom official, the director of the OSCE office for democratic institutions and human rights, was a member of the team.

Human Rights

32. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet representatives of (a) the Red Cross and (b) Amnesty International to discuss human rights overseas.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the president of the International Committee of the Red Cross in October last year and I hope to meet him in Geneva in the margins of my visit to the UN Commission on Human Rights in February. I have no immediate plans to meet representatives from Amnesty International. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met Amnesty representatives in November. FCO officials are in regular contact with Amnesty International.

UN Peacekeeping

33. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet the Secretary-General of the United Nations organisation to discuss the United Nations' peacekeeping work.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and I last met the Secretary-General of the United Nations when he visited the United Kingdom in October. We had wide-ranging discussions covering a number of UN-related topics including peacekeeping operations.

Cyprus

34. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application of Cyprus for full membership of the European Union.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Corfu European Council agreed that Cyprus will be involved in the next phase of enlargement. The Council is committed to a review of the application, in the light of progress in the intercommunal dispute, early in 1995. We welcome the prospect of eventual Cypriot accession.

Kashmir

35. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new proposals he has to assist the Governments of Pakistan and India to resolve the Kashmir dispute.

Mr. Baldry: Our position has not changed. We continue to believe that the best way forward on Kashmir should involve simultaneous progress on dialogue between India and Pakistan as provided for under the 1972 Simla agreement; an improvement in human rights in Kashmir and a genuine political process there; and a clear cessation of external support for violence in Kashmir. We stand ready to offer our good offices to help resolve the dispute if both sides so wish.

Malta

36. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Malta's application for membership of the European Union.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Corfu European Council agreed that Malta will be involved in the next phase of enlargement. The Council will review the application this year. We welcome the prospect of Maltese accession to the European Union,

Africa

37. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about areas of disagreement with France about foreign policy in Africa; and what he proposes to try and ensure a joint approach.

Mr. Baldry: We work closely together with the French both bilaterally and within the EU. On 18 November, my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister and Mr. Balladur said both Governments would explore ideas on peacekeeping further with African partners. We are following this up. More recently, on 25 January, my right hon. and noble Friend, the Minister for Overseas Development had wide-ranging talks in Paris with French experts on Africa.

India

38. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of current relations between the United Kingdom and the Republic of India.

Mr. Baldry: Relations between the United Kingdom and the Republic of India are excellent, as my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary saw when he visited Calcutta and Delhi last month. In particular the Indo-British partnership initiative continues to flourish. British exports to India have increased by 40 per cent. in the last 18 months, and investment approvals have increased dramatically in the last two years. The UK's largest bilateral aid programme is in India.

Sudan

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the current status of the mission of the United States special representative to Sudan; what he is seeking to achieve; and what progress he is making.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The US special envoy on the Sudan, Ambassador Melissa Wells, was appointed last May to work in support of regional efforts to find a peaceful resolution to the conflict in Sudan. She has visited Sudan and neighbouring countries in pursuit of this.

Palestinian National Authority

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further international discussions are taking place that are leading to proposals further to assist the Palestinian national authority with its internal security and terrorist problems.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The international committee, which co-ordinates assistance to the Palestinian police force, will meet in Gaza as one of the working groups under the local aid co-ordination committee, supported by the UN special co-ordinator for the occupied territories. The first meeting is expected to take place on 7 February.

Afghanistan

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the recent arrest and release by rebels of a British citizen in Afghanistan.

Mr. Baldry: We welcomed the release of Eden Fernandez, on humanitarian grounds. Swift and effective action by a British diplomat, who fortunately was visiting Kabul, and the helpful co-operation of the International Committee of the Red Cross, enabled his release and return, via Pakistan, to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ray Nelson

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations have been made into the circumstances of the death of Mr. Ray Nelson in a fire at a works living quarters in Tengiz, Kazakstan on 29 December 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The police in Tengiz, Kazakstan are treating the tragic death of Mr. Raymond Anthony Nelson as an accident. Mr. Nelson was sub-contracted to TengizChevroil, which is holding its own investigation. The company's initial accident report states that Mr. Nelson remained in a burning building, looking for another person when he was overcome by smoke. The full report has not yet been completed.

Gibraltar

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors preclude residents of Gibraltar from voting for and being represented by a Euro-MP.

Mr. Baldry: Annex II of the 1976 Act on direct elections limits to the United Kingdom itself the franchise for elections to the European Parliament.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Independent Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions in 1994 the Government sought opinions from independent counsel; and what was the total cost.

The Attorney-General: Information is not held centrally and could be obtained from Departments only at disproportionate cost.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Indonesia

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all Overseas Development Administration-funded forestry and forestry-related projects since 1980 in Indonesia, providing (a) the dates approved and the status of their implementation, (b) the amount and type of aid funding, (c) the main objectives of the projects and (d) the counterpart Indonesian Government or private sector bodies involved in each of the projects.

Mr. Baldry: A list of forestry projects has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Sudan

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which parts of Sudan are still inaccessible to international aid agencies and humanitarian relief.

Mr. Baldry: Operation Lifeline Sudan was refused access in January to seven of the 95 destinations designated as relief distribution centres: Maiyut, Pariang, Boma, Nimule, Chunkodum, Ikotos and Mundri. These are all located in areas of military activity. Access to the Nuba mountains remains as described in my answer of 25 October 1994, Official Report, column 546.

Pergau Dam

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral statement of 13 December, Official Report, column 773, if he will make a further statement on the Pergau dam project.

Mr. Baldry: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs announced to the House on 13 December, arrangements are being made for the outstanding commitments on this project to be met from the reserve voted by Parliament. This is outside the scope of the Overseas Development and Co-operation Act 1980.

International Development Association

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to argue in the forthcoming IDA replenishment negotiations, that the bulk of IDA funds should be allocated to social sectors and direct poverty reduction programmes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: In the report on the 10th replenishment of IDA, donors underlined the central importance of poverty reduction in IDA's policy dialogue with borrowers, and stated that they expected the share of social sector and poverty-targeted interventions to increase steadily where justified by the country assistance strategy. In IDA-11, we will press IDA to intensify its efforts in this area.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's plans for (a) the size of the 11th IDA replenishment and (b) the allocation of IDA-11 among the various objectives towards which it is directed.

Mr. Baldry: We shall be working for a substantial replenishment of the International Development Association, while taking account of the constraints on available aid programme resources. We do not expect any major shift in IDA's priority objectives of poverty reduction, sound economic management and environmentally sustainable development.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy (a) to support the United States Government's position on mandatory social safety net programmes and public consultation campaigns for all structural adjustment loans and (b) to press for their implementation, at the Paris meeting of International Development Association delegates in February.

Mr. Baldry: If the United States tables proposals during the IDA-11 negotiations, we and other donors will give them careful consideration.

Turkey Ankara Metro

Mr. James Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements are being made by the Overseas Development Administration to meet expenditure in 1994–95 on the Turkey Ankara metro mixed credit aid and trade provision project.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs announced to the House on 13 December 1994, Official Report, columns 773-74, that, following a review of aid and trade provision projects in the light of the judgment of the divisional court on the Malaysia Pergau hydro-electric dam project, arrangements would be made for outstanding commitments to certain projects to be met from funds voted by Parliament outside the scope of the Overseas Development and Co-operation Act 1980.

Financial aid for the Turkey Ankara metro project, including the cost of monitoring, will be met from funds outside the overseas aid budget. Parliamentary approval to this new service will be sought in a spring supplementary estimate for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office—Overseas Development Administration: external assistance vote, class II, vote 5. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure, estimated at £4.627 million, will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of housing benefit claimants who are likely to be affected by the tighter restrictions on the level of rent eligible for housing benefit consequent on the change to the housing benefit regulations he proposes to make from October 1995.

Mr. Roger Evans: Much will depend on the definition of average rents to be used in the calculation of housing benefit, and other factors, including the behavioural effects of the proposals. A realistic estimate will not be possible until we have made decisions on the detailed structure of the new arrangements, following consultation with the local authority associations, the social security advisory committee and other interested bodies.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases the Child Support Agency has had to trace the absent parent; and what is the rate of success.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 1 February 1995:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number and success rate of specialist traces performed by the Child Support Agency.

Since launch to the end of November 1994, specialist tracing action has been completed in almost 77,000 cases, 58,000 of which were successful; a success rate of 75 per cent.

I hope that this is of help.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the outcome of the 13,281 section

18 reviews outstanding as at 31 March 1994 cited in his answer of 18 May 1994, Official Report, column 526; how many section 18 reviews of child support officers' decisions have been requested since then and how many have been cleared; and what efforts are being made to monitor the outcomes and length of time that reviews are taking to be decided;

(2) how many section 17 reviews of child support officers' decisions have been cleared in the first half of 1994–95; how many of these resulted in a fresh assessment; and what efforts are being made to monitor the number of requests made for section 17 reviews and the length of time that reviews are taking to be decided.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 1 February 1995:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Section 17 and Section 18 reviews completed by the Child Support Agency.

Between April and september 1994, 15,562 Section 17 reviews were cleared. From April to the end of July, 13,065 reviews resulted in the maintenance assessment being revise. From August 1994, numbers of reviews resulting maintenance assessments were no longer collected because there was no business need for the information and data collected for earlier periods had clearly shown that the overwhelming majority of reviews cleared result in a fresh assessment.

Following enhancements to the Agency's management information systems it was found that the number of Section 18 review applications outstanding at 1 April 1994 was 9,537, which differs from the figure of 11,732 given in the answer of 18 May 1994. Between April and November 1994, a further 18,766 review applications were received and 18,671 applications were cleared.

Enhancements to our Management Information Systems enable us, from August 1994, to identify the number of Section 18 review clearances which actually result in a review being completed, against those considered not appropriate to Section 18 and those refused or withdrawn. However, there is no business requirement to record the number of completed reviews which result in a change to assessment. From August we are also now able to measure the proportion of Section 17 and Section 18 reviews completed within specific age bands.

I hope that this is of help.

Household Commodities

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has on the proportion of households in the bottom 10 per cent. of income distribution which have (a) a car, (b) a television, (c) a video, (d) a telephone, (e) a washing machine, (f) a fridge freezer or freezer and (g) a home computer (i) in the latest year for which figures are available and (ii) in 1979.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

Percentage of individuals in the bottom 10 per cent. of the income distribution who live in households with access to consumer durables, in 1979 and 1991–92[1]

	Before Housing Costs		After Housing Costs
	1979	1991–92	1979	1991–92

Washing machine	69	87	69	86
Fridge freezer or freezer[3]	29	79	32	81
Home computer	[4]—	20	[4]—	21

Notes:
[1]The latest period for which figures are available is 1991–92; that is the calendar years 1991 and 1992 combined.
[2]The latest period for which information on televisions is available is 1990–91.
[3]The large increase in access to fridge freezers or freezers mainly reflects a rise in the access to fridge freezers over the period.
[4]Information on videos and home computers was not available in 1979.

Unemployment

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each of the last three years the numbers unemployed and drawing (a) national insurance benefit only, (b) national insurance and income support and (c) income support only; and if these three sets of data for each year could also be presented in percentage terms of the total claimant unemployment count.

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the tables.

Disabled People (Discrimination)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of the report prepared by SIA Ltd. on the analysis of responses to consultation on Government measures to tackle discrimination against disabled people.

Mr. Hague: The total cost of producing and printing the document, including the sum paid to SIA Ltd. for research and analysis, was £73,000.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will commission a report on the analysis of responses to the Government consultation on pensions similar to the analysis carried out by SIA Ltd. on Government measures to tackle discrimination against disabled people.

Mr. Arbuthnot: No. The report of the pension law review committee included an analysis of the written responses to the committee's consultation document. Since the publication of that report, the Department has consulted widely on a large number of issues, and received detailed and technical responses. These were placed in the Library on Thursday 22 December 1994 in response to the hon. Member's earlier question, on 19 December 1994, Official Report columns 930-31.

Benefits

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to help improve the take up of benefits by older people.

Mr. Roger Evans: The Benefits Agency pursues a number of initiatives to ensure that all sectors of the public, including older people, are aware of the availability of benefits. A leaflet, FB32 "Benefits after retirement", gives information on a wide range of benefits available to older people. The first stage of the one-step benefit delivery service was completed in July, providing information locally on all major benefits, plus help with claims. Information material is also available through other, non-Benefits Agency, outlets. The social security freeline service provides information and advice on all benefits.

Pensions, Australia

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has had about the level of British pensions paid to people living in Australia; what replies he has sent; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have received a number of letters recently about non-payment of annual pension increases to British pensioners living in Australia. We have also received representations from the Government of Australia. It would cost an additional £105 million a year to uprate British pensions paid there. In view of the continued need to contain public expenditure, we have no plans to change our policy on this issue.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has studied the comments made on 24 January by Australia's Minister for Social Security about the level of British pensions paid to people living in Australia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have seen the press release issued by the Minister's office. We have no plans to change our existing policy on indexation.

Private Hospitals

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what use his Department or its executive agencies makes of private hospitals in testing applicants for benefits; if he will list (a) those private hospitals which have contracts from his Department or its executive agencies to carry out work during the current financial year, (b) the types of medical testing which will be carried out, (c) the number of patients to be treated under those contracts and (d) the value of the contracts; and what factors led his Department to use these facilities rather than national health service hospitals.

Mr. Hague: Only the War Pensions Agency makes use of private hospitals in testing applicants for benefit.

(a) General Healthcare Group plc trading as BMI Healthcare Audiology Services (BMI) are currently contracted to carry out audiological examinations for the War Pensions Agency.

(b) In each case pure tone audiometry is performed and depending on the circumstances, tympanometry and/or Evoked Response Audiometry may also be performed.

(c) BMI performed just over 105,000 pure tone audiometric tests.

(d) This information is commercial in confidence.

Prior to this contract being awarded, audiological services were provided by a fragmented network of private individuals throughout the United Kingdom that had been appointed by senior medical officers in the various regions. However, a wide variance of service reporting standards and unacceptable delays in some areas led to the decision to undertake a competitive tendering exercise for the nationwide provision of audiological services. Many expressions of interest were received, including some from individual NHS hospitals. However, upon extensive and thorough evaluation of all submissions, a single contract was awarded to General Healthcare Group plc, its tender best matching the contract strategy of providing a uniform quality service to pre-determined standards and offering the best value for money.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the Department and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document, "Focus on Ability".

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: The number of registered disabled people in the Departments and agencies for which my right hon. Friend is responsible and other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office vote is as follows:

	Number of RDP	Total staff in department	Percentage of RDP
Cabinet office OPSS (including CCTA)	18	1,316.5	1.4
CCC	3	397.5	0.75
CSC	—	253	—
OHS	0.5	113	0.4
RAS	3	137.5	2.2
COI	4	502	0.8
HMSO	40.5	2,002	2

The figures represent full time equivalent posts; part time staff are shown as 0.5.

Figures for the number of all disabled people employed within the Departments and agencies as a whole are not available. However, 51 staff in the central Cabinet Office/OPSS and CCTA have a disability which they consider might affect them at work.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many tenants of the Duchy are in receipt of housing benefit.

Mr. David Hunt: The Duchy has no record of tenants who may themselves be in receipt of housing benefit. The Duchy receives housing benefit in the form of rental payments on behalf of tenants for four properties.

Open Government

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many applications for the release of information under the code of practice on access to government information since April 1994 have been (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful; and in the latter case what reasons have been given.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: This information is not available centrally, but information on the first nine months of operation of the code of practice is being collected for a report to be issued shortly by the Office of Public Service and Science.

Open Government

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will make available documentation in its original form in instances where information is released under the code of practice on access to government information.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: There is no commitment that pre-existing documents, as distinct from information, will be made available, but paragraph 52 of the guidance on the code of practice states:

"Requests for information should be met in the simplest, most cost-effective way. This will usually be by letter giving the information requested [. . .] There may be occasions on which it is appropriate to send photocopies—for example of a letter which has been published or a factual record . . . "

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister (1) in which circumstances a Minister is not expected to notify the Member for the constituency visited by the Minister of a ministerial visit to the constituency, under paragraph 71 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", May 1992;

(2) what constitutes adequate notice of a ministerial visit, under paragraph 71 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" May 1992;

(3) in which circumstances hon. Members are (a) invited and (b) not invited to make suggestions to Ministers about the inclusion of places which it would be helpful to visit, under paragraph 71 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", May 1992.

The Prime Minister: It is for individual Ministers to ensure that they comply with paragraph 71 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and to judge what constitutes adequate notice. "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" makes it clear that informing the Members for the constituencies that they intend to visit is a courtesy which they should take special care not to overlook.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment Medical Advisory Service

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many nurses were employed by the Health and Safety Executive's employment medical advisory service in the years 1974 to 1994;

(2) how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses were employed within the Health and Safety Executive's Health policy division and its predecessors in each year since 1974;

(3) how many doctors were employed by the Health and Safety Executive's employment medical advisory service in each year since 1974.

Mr. Oppenheim: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Job Vacancies (Rural Areas)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what initiatives he is developing to improve access to information on employment vacancies for people living in rural areas; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about initiatives to improve access to information on employment vacancies for people living in rural areas.

Local initiatives are being developed by many of the Employment Service's (ES) rural offices to improve our clients' access to vacancy information. These often involve provision of vacancy displays in post offices, libraries, community centres and other focal points in small rural communities. Local press and radio are also used to publicise our services.

The ES programme Development Fund is being used to develop rural initiatives and supplement the more traditional forms of vacancy filling in scattered communities. Mobile Jobcentres have been provided in several areas and Freephone services are being used to make Jobcentre services more accessible to clients in the more remote areas. Access to vacancies and advisory services has also been provided by our Claimant Advisers through Outreach projects. These initiatives will be subject to evaluation in the future and consideration may then be given to wider delivery.

You may also be interested to know that an internal working group has been set up in Scotland to consider how existing ES services might be further developed to meet the needs of ES clients in rural areas.

Jobcentres

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what guidelines he has issued in respect of the geographical size of the catchment area served by the Jobcentres.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 Februry 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the guidelines he has issued in respect of the geographical size of the catchment area served by Jobcentres.

There are no specific guidelines on the geographical size of catchment areas. Decisions on the location of Jobcentres and the area they serve are made primarily on the basis of how the best possible service can be provided to clients taking economic, demographic and geographic factors such as travel to work patterns into account.

The network of local offices nationally was reviewed in 1990 as part of the Employment Service's (ES) integration programme, which is about merging Jobcentres and Benefit Offices into a single location of ES Jobcentres.

The location of the new integrated Jobcentres and the areas they serve were decided using the factors mentioned above to provide, wherever possible a service appropriate to the local economy and labour market. Since 1990, 925 integrated Jobcentres have been created, with a further 47 planned in the current financial year.

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the Departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document,"Focus on Ability".

Miss Widdecombe: On 1 July 1994 the number of registered disabled people employed as non-industrial civil servants in the Employment Department group was 2,342, representing 3.9 per cent. of the total. Figures for the number and proportion of all disabled people are not available as the Department does not record information on people who have chosen not to register as disabled.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of men aged 55 to 64 years were active in the labour market in (a) 1967, (b) 1977, (c) 1987 and (d) 1994.

Miss Widdecombe: Latest estimates from the summer 1994 labour force survey show that 64 per cent. of men aged 55 to 64 were economically active. Equivalent figures for 1987 and 1979—the earliest available comparable data—were 68 per cent. and 84 per cent. respectively.

South Thames TEC

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what indicators were available, and when, to providers to South Thames TEC in respect of its insolvency;

(2) when the state of solvency of the South Thames TEC was at such a point as to render it advisable for providers to ask for cash in advance.

Mr. Paice: I understand that the board of South Thames training and enterprise council invited my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to appoint a receiver as soon as it became apparent to them that the TEC was insolvent. This was as a result of a report by a team of accountants acting on behalf of the Department, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Before that point the terms on which providers contracted with the TEC were a matter for their commercial judgment. I have no direct knowledge of the indicators available to providers prior to the appointment of the receiver though I understand that the appointment was preceded by a period of difficulty in relations between TEC and its providers when, for example, payments to some providers were delayed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what alternatives to the South Thames TEC existed for providers of training opportunities guaranteed by Government before the insolvency of the TEC.

Mr. Paice: The Government do not guarantee that training opportunities will be contracted to any provider of training. The extent to which training providers had alternatives to their commercial contracts with South Thames training and enterprise council will have depended on the nature of their business. Many providers will also have contracts with other TECs in London and elsewhere.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training providers were not paid by (a) the Manpower Services Commission at the time it was wound up and (b) the South Thames TEC.

Mr. Paice: At the time the Manpower Services Commission ceased to exist, its contractual responsibilities on training were transferred to the Training Commission and business continued as normal. As for South Thames training and enterprise council, it is for the receiver to specify what number of training providers have not been paid as a result of it's receivership.

Advertisements

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in his Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Miss Widdecombe: There have been no occasions where advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in the Employment Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

North West Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many members are on the board of the North West training and enterprise council; and what is the gross turnover.

Mr. Paice: The total number of board members on the 14 north-west training and enterprise councils is currently 198. Their total income in 1993–94 was £263,600,572.

HEALTH

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many parliamentary questions she has referred to chief executives of next steps agencies in each year since 1992.

Mr. Sackville: Five parliamentary questions were referred to agency chief executives in the 1992-93 parliamentary Session. Two parliamentary questions were referred to chief executives in 1993–94 and so far in 1994–95 one parliamentary question has been referred.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out for each of the next steps agencies in her Department, whether they have acquired their own headquarters buildings and, if so, at what purchase cost or annual rental; how many support staff they have required who were not required when their operations were within her Department; how many of them publish periodical journals and at what annual cost; how many have fleets of executive cars or single executive cars and at what annual cost; how many have specially designed logos and at what cost; how many have corporate clothing and at what cost; and what is the cost of specially designed and printed corporate stationery.

Mr. Sackville: There are four next steps agencies within the Department of Health:

Medicines Control Agency
Medical Devices Agency
National Health Service Estates
National Health Service Pensions Agency

I have asked the chief executive of each of them to reply to the right hon. Member in respect of their own agency.

Agencies operate within the framework of demanding quality standards and tight financial control of civil service running costs and other financial targets, set out in the White Paper "The Civil Service, Continuity and Change", Cm 2627. In the usual way their expenditure is subject to audit by the Comptroller and Auditor General. Staff in agencies remain civil servants, but total civil service manpower in my Department has reduced at the same time as my Department's next steps agencies have established. Improvements in efficiency or effectiveness brought about by my Department's agencies are a matter of record.

Letter from A. F. Cowen to Mr. Gerald Kaufman, dated 26 January 1995:

The Secretary of State for Health has asked me to reply to your question in so far as it relates to the NHS Pensions Agency.

The NHS Superannuation Scheme became an Executive Agency of the Department of Health from 20 November 1992 and continued in it existing premises (Hesketh House) at Fleetwood which are leased via Property Holdings from the Co-operative Society. The acquisition of a separate Headquarters was not necessary. At launch the Agency had some 650 staff. It currently employs 494 whole-time equivalent staff which includes 4 staff recruited on contracts to support the Agency's development—the Chief Executive; a professionally qualified accountant; a human resources professional; and an information technology specialist. Our corporate objective is to secure a running cost reduction of 20 per cent. below the 1992–93 baseline whilst measurably improving our service to customers.

We do not publish periodical journals, we are required to publish our statutory Annual Report and Accounts. With regard to vehicles, the Agency has continued to use the Private Use Scheme run by the Department of Social Security. There are currently six vehicles available to regular travellers. The annual stationery budget pre and post Agency status remains at £110,000 per annum. The Agency does not have a corporate clothing policy but on launch 22 messengerial staff were provided with replacement uniforms needed because of the nature of their work. This is a continuation of pre Agency practice.

Letter from Alan Kent to Mr. Gerald Kaufman, dated 26 January 1995:

The Secretary of State for Health has asked me to reply to your recent question insofar as it relates to the Medical Devices Agency.

The Medical Devices Agency was established in September 1994 with the primary purpose of protecting the public health and safeguarding the interests of patients and users by ensuring that medical devices meet appropriate standards of safety, quality and performance.

The Agency remains in the same premises it occupied as the Medical Devices Directorate of the Department of Health. In May 1995 we will move to another building on the civil estate, sharing facilities with other staff of the Department of Health and making an estimated saving on Departmental budgets of about £4.5 million over the four years to 1998–99.

The Agency employs the same number of support staff now as before its establishment. We have accommodated within existing resources work on personnel and finance services previously provided centrally by the Department.

The Agency does not publish periodical journals and has neither executive cars nor corporate clothing.

The Agency logo and stationery were designed together at a cost of just over £12,000. The extra cost of printing the stationery was just under £6,000. The new logo and stationery have improved our communication with manufacturers and users of medical devices and so contributed to the Agency's primary purpose of safeguarding public health.

Letter from Dr. K. H. Jones to Mr. Gerald Kaufman, dated 24 January 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to the points of detail in your Parliamentary Question with respect to Medicines Control Agency (MCA).

You may be aware that the MCA has been fully funded by fees from the pharmaceutical industry since it became a Next Steps agency in July 1991.

We have remained in our original accommodation on the civil estate. No additional support staff have been employed other than those required to handle functions conducted now by MCA that were previously the responsibility of the Department of Health or to service the Agency's growing workload from the pharmaceutical industry.

We publish a bi-monthly newsletter, MAIL, which has been in publication since June 1973. The annual cost is £18,000 and, while it is supplied free of charge to all licence holders, a small annual fee is paid by subscribers who are not licence holders and who are not directly involved in regulatory affairs. The Agency also publishes, three or four times a year, "Current Problems", first produced in 1975, which is a newsletter to all doctors and pharmacists in the UK, updating them on issues in the field of drug safety. The cost of each bulletin is £55,000, the bulk of which relates to distribution costs. Like MAIL and all MCA activities, it is fully funded by fees from the pharmaceutical industry.

The Agency has no executive cars or corporate clothing. Our logo was designed in-house by a member of staff at no additional cost and our stationery is of a similar weight and quality to that used by other parts of the Department of Health.

Letter from J. Locke to Mr. Gerald Kaufman, dated 27 January 1995:

Further to the Secretary for States written answer to you on the 24th January 1995, I detail below the information requested:

NHS Estates was established as a Next Steps Agency on the 1st April 1991. From that date until the 28th March 1993 its staff were mainly based in London using existing Department of Health accommodation. The notional cost of the accommodation was £1,617,000. From the 1st April 1993 the Agency moved to offices in Trevelyan Square Leeds for which the Agency pays a current annual rent of £370,000.

Currently the Agency has 9 support staff who were not required when the Agency was part of the Department. These generally represent Finance and Personnel functions taken over from the Department. The total cost of services provided by the Department to the Agency has dropped from £999,000 in 1991–92 to £347,000 in 1994–95.

We publish one periodical every quarter known as "Newslink", a review of the latest developments affecting the healthcare estate. In 1994–95 its production costs were £18,786. Prior to this the Department published "Health Service Estate", a more substantial and expensive publication, until April 1991.

We do not provide a fleet of executive or individual cars. Providing they meet the normal Government usage criteria, our staff may apply for vehicles provided by the Department's transport section.

The Agency has a logo that was designed in parallel with the NHS Management Executive logo, before it was established in 1991. The costs of producing the logo were paid by the Department.

The only item of corporate clothing commissioned by the Agency was a bulk purchase of specially designed ties at a cost of £931.

Our stationery incorporates the Agency logo and office address details to a similar specification and cost as the Department of Health. No extra costs are incurred by their inclusion.

I hope this answer provides you with the information requested.

NHS Beds

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS beds, overall and by region, have been closed since 1979; and how many NHS beds there are at present.

Mr. Sackville: Information on bed closures is not available centrally. The latest information on the average number of available national health service beds is published in "Beds availability for England, Financial Year 1993–94", copies of which are available in the Library.

Tranquillisers

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence her Department has of the effect of the use of the benzodiazepine group of tranquillisers upon patients to whom they have been prescribed by their general practitioner.

Mr. Bowis: The effects of benzodiazepines on patients are described in the British National Formulary, a copy of which is available in the Library, which is issued by the Department to all general practitioners free of charge. The main effects include reduction in anxiety and induction of sleep. The British National Formulary also gives details of the side effects which some patients may experience from using benzodiazepines.

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been done by her Department into involuntary tranquilliser addiction.

Mr. Bowis: None.

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to encourage the development of non-addictive tranquillisers.

Mr. Bowis: None. We are seeking to reduce tranquilliser dependency by encouraging general practitioners to review use of benzodiazepines and replace them, as necessary, with behavioural, cognitive and other psychotherapeutic methods of treatment and, if appropriate, antidepressants. Family health services authorities have been asked to discuss with GPs local targets for reductions in benzodiazepine prescribing. To assist with this process, the Department has distributed copies of the Mental Health Foundation's booklet "Guidelines for the Prevention and Treatment of Benzodiazepine Dependence" to every family health services authority, copies of which are available in the Library.

Air Fresheners (Allergies)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each regional health authority, the number of patients diagnosed as suffering from an allergy to air fresheners for the latest year she has figures; and what were the figures (a) five and (b) 10 years ago.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available.

Waiting Lists

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the correlation between specialties that have the longest waiting lists in the NHS and the level of private sector earnings of the consultant concerned.

Mr. Malone: None.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what correlation she has made between the English regions with the most private sector beds and the length of their waiting lists.

Mr. Malone: We have no evidence of a causal connection between the number of private sector beds in a region and length of waiting lists.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of private patients see an orthopaedic surgeon in under a month; what is the figure for NHS patients; and what assessment she has made of the reason.

Mr. Malone: Waiting times for private patients are not identifiable from information available centrally. In the quarter ended 30 September 1994 approximately 44 per cent. of patients seen in the trauma and orthopaedics specialty, which includes orthopaedic surgery, were seen within four weeks of written referral by a general practitioner.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those NHS trusts where over the past 12 months patients have reportedly been kept waiting on a trolley for longer than two hours.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Patients Charter

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost to public funds of the production, printing, distribution and advertising of the patients charter when launched (a) in 1991 and (b) in 1995; and how many copies were printed in each case.

Mr. Malone: The cost of producing, printing, distributing and advertising the original patients charter when launched was just over £2.8 million. Twenty three million copies of a summary version were printed, and half a million copies of the full charter. The cost of launching the new charter is estimated as £535,000 and 3.25 million copies have been printed.

Blood Transfusion Centres

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions she has had with the National Blood Authority regarding the future of regional blood transfusion centres;

(2) what response she has made to the Keith Jerrome report on the future of the national blood transfusion centres; and what plans she has for implementing its recommendations.

Mr. Sackville: The National Blood Authority has undertaken a thorough and widespread consultation on its proposals for reorganisation. It is currently considering the comments received during the consultation, including those received from trades unions. The authority has announced the establishment of an independent panel which will ensure that the comments received during the consultation have received full and objective consideration. The authority hopes to produce final proposals in around three months.

Central Heating

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will commission research into the links between central heating and long-term illness and disability;

(2) whether possible links between central heating and long-term illness and disability have been taken into account in setting "The Health of the Nation" targets.

Mr. Bowis: The relationship between central heating and health is complex. For this reason no account was taken of such a postulated link in setting "The Health of the Nation" targets. The Department has no plans to commission research specifically on central heating and long-term illness and disability.

Drug Treatment Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to complete and publish her review of the drug treatment service.

Mr. Bowis: The task force to review the effectiveness of treatment services for drug misusers is due to report to Ministers in January 1996.

Advertisements

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in her Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Sackville: None. In the last five years, the Department has where necessary used the description Department of Health or Departments of Health.

Elderly People

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for improving care given to the elderly in need of health care.

Mr. Bowis: We have made substantial improvements to services for elderly people and will continue to do so. The priorities and planning guidance for the NHS: 1995–96 requires authorities to identify needs and put specific actions in hand to ensure further improvements, and to secure care in the community, including continuing health care, in effective collaboration with local authorities and other agencies.

Physiotherapy

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified and unqualified physiotherapists are practising in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sackville: At 30 September 1993 there were 10,460 state registered physiotherapists practising in the national health service in England. Legislation provides that for direct employment in the NHS and local authorities, practitioners must be "state registered". No figures are available centrally on the number of physiotherapists practising in the private sector.

Information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Note:

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the absenteeism rates for (a) the Medicines Control Agency, (b) National Health Service Estates, (c) the NHS Pensions Agency and (d) her Department.

Mr. Sackville: The absenteeism rate for the Department including the Medicines Control Agency, National Health Service Estates and NHS Pensions Agency for 1994 is not yet available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many parliamentary answers have been refused on the grounds of disproportionate cost or information not being held centrally (a) as a total and (b) as a percentage of all answers in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) and the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 12 December 1994, Official Report, columns 470-71 for information on replies stating that information is not held centrally for the 1989–90 to 1993–94 sessions. A search on POLIS has shown that, up to 26 January, 50 questions have been replied to in this form which is 3.7 per cent. of replies given so far in the 1994–95 Session.

Information on disproportionate costs replies is shown in the table.

Session	Number	Percentage of total answered
1989–90	11	0.24
1990–91	21	0.68
1991–92	5	0.33

Long-term Care

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on whom do the costs fall when a long-stay stroke patient is transferred from a hospital bed to a nursing home but requires continued nursing.

Mr. Bowis: The decision would depend on the results of an assessment of the patient's health and social care needs.

Hospitals, Bolton

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many long-stay beds for the elderly are available in Bolton hospitals;

(2) if Hulton hospital is planned to continue as a hospital for the long-stay elderly;

(3) what plans there are to close Hulton hospital without replacement.

Mr. Bowis: The provision of health services in Bolton is a matter for Wigan and Bolton health authority, and the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman for details of hospital services for the elderly and its plans for the future.

Resident Accommodation Charges

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the position of the spouse of an elderly person contributing to nursing home care whose sole asset is part ownership with the spouse of the marital home in respect of continued residence in that home;

(2) if she will make it her policy that in no case the spouse of an elderly person contributing to nursing home care whose sole asset is part ownership of the marital home will have to leave that home against his or her wish.

Mr. Bowis: When assessing a resident's ability to contribute towards the costs of nursing home care, the legislation already requires local authorities to ignore the value of property when the spouse continues to live there.

Intensive Therapy Beds

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many intensive therapy unit beds there were in each region in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 13 January 1995]: Information is provided in the table on the average daily number of available designated intensive therapy beds for England, excluding neonatal intensive care, and for each regional health authority area, in the years 1989–90 to 1993–94. However, in addition to these services provided in units designated as intensive therapy units, intensive therapy can also be delivered in a variety of hospital departments, such as neonatal intensive care, coronary care units, accident and emergency departments, renal units and high dependency units. It is for each purchasing authority to determine the appropriate level and type of provision of intensive therapy based on an assessment of the needs of their population, taking account of local priorities.

EDUCATION

Surplus School Places

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her latest estimate of the cost of a surplus primary and secondary school place.

Mr. Robin Squire: The average premises-related cost of maintaining a surplus place is estimated to be £182 a year for a primary school and £303 a year for a secondary school at 1995–96 prices. The actual cost and the scope for realising savings from removal of surplus places in practice will depend on local circumstances.

National Curriculum

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if she will list for each subject on the national curriculum, except English, history and mathematics, the publications, guidance and teaching material which has been sent to schools since 1988; if she will give the cost for each subject; and whether the publications are pertinent to the revised national curriculum;

(2) pursuant to her answer on 24 January, Official Report, columns 169–72, if she will list for each of (a) English, (b) mathematics and (c) history which publications, guidance and teaching material sent to schools are pertinent to the revised national curriculum.

Mr. Forth: The documents listed under the first heading in the answer of 24 January set out the requirements of the current or previous national curriculum for English, mathematics and history; and the curriculum guidance listed under heading 3a related to these requirements. The current requirements will be superseded by those of the revised national curriculum as set out in the documents listed under the second heading, but the guidance listed under heading 3a will continue to be relevant to the revised national curriculum in as much as this is essentially a slimmed down version of the existing curriculum.

The documents listed under heading 3b are in the main annual publications relating to each year's assessment arrangements and are directly relevant therefore only to the year to which they relate, though teachers may use a previous year's tests in their teaching and, as with the curriculum materials, the content remains relevant because the tests assess core elements of the curriculum which are largely unchanged.

The following list shows the publications relating to national curriculum subjects other than English, mathematics and history, arranged under similar headings to those used in the answer of 24 January. The separate costs of the documents listed under the second heading cannot be disaggregated for the reason given in the answer of 24 January, but the total costs of the revised national curriculum documents were included in that answer. I will write the hon. Member as soon as possible with the costs of the documents listed under the third and fourth headings. The relevance of the documents listed to the revised national curriculum is as explained above.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total income received since 1988 for the sale of documentation relating to changes in the national curriculum.

Mr. Forth: Information on income from the sale of documents relating specifically to changes to the national curriculum is not available. Income from the sale of all documents relating to the national curriculum and its assessment since 1988 by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority and its predecessors is estimated at around £0.9 million. In addition the Department for Education has received royalties from Her Majesty's Stationery Office as a result of its sales of national curriculum documents estimated at £0.2 million since 1988.

Bradford University (Bursaries)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received about her decision to cease offering bursaries for those wishing to undertake postgraduate language training at Bradford university; what consultation took place with Bradford university prior to her decision being announced; what evidence she has that bursaries for such courses are available from alternative sources; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend has received correspondence from Professor David Johns. vice chancellor and principal of Bradford university, and five other letters about the withdrawal of bursary support for students undertaking the postgraduate diploma in interpreting and translating course at Bradford university. The decision was taken as part of the review of public expenditure for 1995–96 in which my right hon. Friend takes account of demands and priorities for spending.

A survey undertaken in January 1994 by the Department indicated that more than 60 per cent. of students on the interpreting and translation courses at the four institutions receiving bursaries through the scheme were undertaking their studies without support from the Department.

Schools (Special Measures)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list those schools which have been identified by Her Majesty's chief inspector as in need of special measures.

Mr. Forth: The following schools have been identified as failing or likely to fail to provide an acceptable standard of education, and hence as in need of special measures:

LEA maintained secondary schools
Battersea Technology College, Wandsworth
Cross Green High School, Leeds
Dick Sheppard School, Lambeth
Fairfax Community School, Bradford
Hackney Downs School, Hackney
Lilian Baylis School, Lambeth
Northicote School, Wolverhampton
St. Mark's School, Hammersmith and Fulham
St. Joseph's Academy, Lewisham
St. Richard of Chichester School, Camden
Tamarside Community College, Devon
The Hammersmith School, Hammersmith and Fulham

Grant maintained secondary schools
Stratford School, Newham

LEA maintained middle schools
Abbey Farm Middle School, Norfolk

LEA maintained primary schools
Crook Primary School, Durham
Earlsmead Primary School, Haringey
Francis Askew Primary School, Humberside
Hockwold Primary School, Norfolk
Morningside Primary School, Hackney
Norbridge Primary School, Nottinghamshire
Rough Hay Primary School, Walsall
Roundthorn Primary School, Oldham
St. John the Divine C of E Primary School, Lambeth
St. Stephen's C of E Primary School, Lambeth
South Park Infants School, Redbridge
The Drive County Primary School, Gateshead

LEA maintained special schools
Brookside Special School, Derbyshire
Fred Nicholson Special School, Norfolk

Secondary School Performance Tables

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the cost of circulating a copy of the secondary school performance tables for 1994 to every school.

Mr. Forth: The secondary schools performance tables 1994 were distributed to schools as part of the same exercise as the distribution of 1994 tables of school and college performance 16 to 18 age group. It is not possible to disaggregate these costs. Single photocopied pre-publication tables were mailed to all schools and colleges listed in the tables at an estimated cost of £4,500. Further printed copies, to pass on to parents, were sent to all schools and colleges for an additional cost estimated at £106,000.

Nursery Education

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many three-year-olds and four-year-olds there are in nursery classes in schools, not including primary reception classes, in each local education authority in England and Wales; and what percentage this represents of the population in those age groups for the latest figures available.

Mr. Forth: Information about the number of pupils under five years of age being taught in nursery classes in maintained primary schools in each local education authority area in England in January 1994 is shown in the table. Under fives provision in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Schools, Warwickshire

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much Warwickshire is spending on non-statutory areas of education.

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not collected centrally. Local education authorities' returns of their expenditure do not distinguish between expenditure on pupils of statutory and non-statutory school age. However, I understand that Warkwickshire LEA may be able to provide this information, and I suggest that the hon. Member writes to the chief education officer.

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) her Department and (b) her agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by the Department or agency.

Mr. Boswell: Only one course costing £5,000 or more was attended by a member of DFE staff in the last 12 months. The course was "Challenges for Change" organised by Shell International Petroleum Company Ltd. group training. The cost of the course was £5,136 plus VAT. The main course objective was:

"to identify emerging social, political, economic and technological trends".

The officer concerned was responsible for providing advice on schools policy for a region of England. The officer was required to report on the value of the course both to himself and to the Department.

Education Committee, Warwickshire

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the current number of officers employed by the Warwickshire county council's education committee; and what the number was in 1990.

Mr. Robin Squire: The employment of LEA officers is entirely a matter for the LEA concerned. The Department does not collect such information.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many further education colleges have achieved their student targets;

(2) how many further education colleges have had their budgets cut because of non-attainment of student targets;

(3) if the methodology used by the Further Education Funding Council in allocating money to further education colleges includes criteria covering socio-economic factors.

Mr. Boswell: Details of individual colleges' student targets, the funding of individual colleges, and the funding methodology, are matters for the Further Education Funding Council. I am asking the council's chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Severance Payments

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what advice and guidance she offers to universities and other institutions of higher and further education concerning severance payment to senior staff.

Mr. Boswell: The Secretary of State does not offer advice and guidance on severance payments to institutions within the higher and further education sectors. However, the Further Education Funding Council has required its institutions, from their first accounting period in 1993–94, to disclose in their final accounts emoluments of senior postholders, showing the principal separately; and the aggregate amount paid to senior postholders as compensation, together with the number of persons receiving such compensation.

The Higher Education Funding Council for England requires the institutions for which it is responsible to disclose separately details of any compensation for loss of office to the vice-chancellor, or equivalent, and higher paid staff whose annual remuneration exceeds £50,000, together with the salaries of senior staff and vice-chancellor's emoluments. This requirement will be effective for institutions' 1994–95 accounts.

Patent Royalties

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list for each university the amount of patent royalties received for each year since 1986; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: This information is not currently available centrally.

Religious Festivals

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what account has been taken of religious festivals in drawing up the 1995 GCSE timetable.

Mr. Forth: The construction of the GCSE common timetable is a matter for the examining groups, acting through the joint council for the GCSE.

Advertisements

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in her Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Forth: In the last five years all departmental advertisements have been issued under the Department's name.

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list for each local education authority (a) the education standard spending assessment per pupil for (i) primary, excluding non-statutory age pupils, (ii) secondary and (iii) post-16 and (b) the actual expenditure per sector and the percentage difference between the standard spending assessment and the actual expenditure.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information is not available in the form in which it has been requested. I will write to my hon. Friend.

Independent Schools

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many applications she has had from independent schools to join the grant-maintained sector.

Mr. Robin Squire: To date, applications have been received from three independent schools to join the grant-maintained sector. One is from an interdenominational Christian school in Bradley Stoke, Avon. The other two are from independent Catholic grammar schools in Wirral. Other schools have expressed interest or sought further information.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what account is taken of savings, investments or value of property in determining who is eligible for assisted places at independent schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 20 January, Official Report column 722. Eligibility for an assisted place is determined by reference to parents' gross income from all sources. No account is taken of capital and other assets or the value of property in assessing parental means.

Direct Grant Schools

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education from which former direct grant schools she has received applications to enter the grant-maintained sector.

Mr. Robin Squire: The following grant-maintained schools were formerly direct grant schools:

Canon Slade School, Bolton
Notre Dame School, Sheffield
St. Boniface's College, Devon
St. Anne's Convent School, Hampshire
St. Francis Xavier's College, Liverpool
Ursuline Convent High School, Essex

National Youth Agency

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what have been the main components of the cost of the National Youth Agency in each year since its establishment, including (a) the yearly Government grant and (b) the initial start-up costs.

Mr. Boswell: Grants paid or allocated to the National Youth Agency by the Department for Education in the period 1991–92 to 1995–96 were as follows:

£ million

	Core grant	Additional grants	Total grant
1991–92	1.165	0.180	1.345
1992–93	1.236	0.068	1.304
1993–94	1.287	0.399	1.686
1994–95	1.336	0.380	1.716
1995–96	1.297	0.358	1.655

Core grant provides funding for the agency's agreed annual work programme including internal audit and the administration of youth work development grants. Additional grant covers funding for initial start-up costs, special initiatives, and grants for disbursement to other bodies.

In addition to these grants, the agency received in 1991– 92 grants from the Home Office—£232,640—the Department of Health—£69,000—and the Welsh Office—£18,000. It received further grants from the Home Office in 1992–93—£143,834—1993–94—£149,000 and 1994–95—£151,111.

SCOTLAND

NHS Supplies Division

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to ensure that the redundancies announced at the NHS supplies division of the Common Services Agency do not impair that division's ability to monitor and advise trusts on potential hazards in equipment involved in patient care.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The restructuring of the supplies division makes provision for the continued availability of the defects and hazards service. A service level contract with the management executive of the NHS will provide for defects in equipment and other items to be fully investigated and the outcomes reported to the NHS in Scotland.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff were employed in each of the past five years in the NHS supplies division of the Common Services Agency.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of staff— whole–time equivalent—employed was:

1991: 139
1992: 139
1993: 137
1994: 106

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the turnover of the NHS supplies division of the Common Services Agency in the most recent year; and what is his estimate of the savings it achieved through discounts for bulk purchase.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The turnover in 1993–94—the latest year for which information is available—was £201 million.

Savings through discount on bulk purchases are estimated to be in the region of £23 million per annum. This level of savings is expected to continue to be achieved through the mechanism of central contracts.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many NHS trusts in Scotland (a) have contracts with the NHS supplies division of the Common Services Agency for equipment service and (b) have switched such contracts to alternative suppliers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Six trusts have entered into firm contracts for equipping work for the next year. Information is not available on alternative contracts which trusts may have entered into with other providers. Not all trusts will require an equipping service in the course of the coming year and in the past some directly managed units who have since become trusts provided their own in-house equipping service.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the meeting took place between Mr. Dunmore, the director of the NHS supplies division of the Common Services Agency, and the NHS executive in Scotland to discuss the future of the division; if he will place copies of the minutes of that meeting in the Library; and what guidance was issued to NHS trusts in Scotland relating to purchasing of equipment through the NHS supplies division.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Staffing and organisation of the supplies division is a matter for the board of the Common Services Agency.

There have been no meetings between the NHS management executive and Mr. Dunmore, the director. No specific guidance has been given to NHS Trusts, but they are expected to obtain best value for money in purchasing.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what studies he has undertaken to assess the additional administrative costs to the NHS in Scotland if NHS trusts cease to purchase equipment in common through the NHS supplies division of the Common Services Agency, and instead enter into separate contracts with individual suppliers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No studies are required since in making purchasing decisions NHS trusts will ensure that best value for money is achieved.

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the Departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document "Focus on Ability".

Mr. Lang: The number and proportion of non-industrial staff who were registered disabled in the Departments and agencies for which I have responsibility are set out in the table that follows. The table records the position as at 1 July 1994. The table also lists those cases where central personnel records indicate that an individual is disabled although not registered.

The Scottish Office, moreover, recently undertook a survey of disability and long-term health conditions in the workplace, which covered staff in the Scottish Office and its agencies—for the Scottish Prison Service only headquarters staff were covered. The survey of some 7,680 staff—including 493 industrial staff—revealed that 97 felt that they were affected "a great deal" and a further 300 "to some extent" by a disability or long-term health condition in the workplace. This represented a total of 5.2 per cent. of all staff. These results suggest that there may be at least as many non-registered disabled people in Departments as there are registered.

School Class Sizes

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the number and percentage of pupils in primary schools in (a) January 1992 and (b) January 1994, being taught in classes of over 30 in (i) each local education authority and (ii) in total; and what was the percentage change;

(2) what was the number and percentage of pupils in secondary schools in (a) January 1992 and (b) January 1994, being taught in classes of over 30 in (i) each local education authority and (ii) in total; and what was the percentage change.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information on class size is that which is collected biennially in the September school census. The information requested, for education authority primary and secondary schools at September 1991 and September 1993, is given:

Countryside Commission

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of remuneration and expenses for the board members of the Countryside Commission for Scotland during its last full year of existence.

Sir Hector Monro: The chairman and vice-chairman of the Countryside Commission for Scotland received remuneration and reimbursed expenses. The other 12 board members received reimbursed expenses only. The annual report of the commission for 1991–92 shows that total remuneration was £23,793 and the total of reimbursed expenses was £28,216.

Civil Servants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff have (a) retired at age 60 years or (b) retired early before age 60 years in each of the department's and agencies for which he is responsible, in each of the past five years; and what was the cost to the public purse of retirement packages in each case in each of these years.

Mr. Lang: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of remuneration and expenses for the board members of the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland during its year of existence.

Sir Hector Monro: Members of the main board, the regional boards and of the science, research and development board of the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland received remuneration, according to their time commitment, and reimbursed expenses. The annual report for the council for 1991–92 shows that total remuneration for the 67 people involved for all or part of the year was £418,000 and the total of reimbursed expenses was £80,000.

Patients Charter

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost to public funds of the production, printing, distribution and advertising of the patients charter when launched in 1991; and how many copies were printed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total cost of launching the patient's charter in Scotland in 1991, was £32,550. This included printing and distributing 16,000 copies.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of admissions for each health board for the last five years for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs there were in (a) the manufacturing industry, (b) the engineering industry and (c) the aerospace industry in Scotland in each year since 1979; and what those figures represented in percentage terms of the total Scottish work-force.

Mr. Stewart: The information is given in the table.

Private Health Contracts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South can expect a reply to his letter of 9 November 1994 to the general manager of Orkney health board concerning private contracts for non-NHS facilities entered into by the health board;

(2) when the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South can expect a reply to his letter of 9 November 1994 acknowledged on 10 November 1994, to the general manager of Greater Glasgow health board concerning private contracts for non-NHS facilities entered into by the health board.

(3) when the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South can expect a reply to his letter of 9 November 1994 to the general manager of Highland health board concerning private contracts for non-NHS facilities entered into by the health board.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The acting general manager of Greater Glasgow health board replied to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South on 2 December 1994. Replies to his letters to the general managers of Orkney and Highland health boards are for these boards to consider.

Scottish Homes

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many properties have been transferred by Scottish Homes from its ownership to that of other landlords; if he will indicate (a) when these properties were transferred, (b) the results of the ballots undertaken among the tenants prior to these properties being transferred, (c) the numbers of tenants in each case transferred against their expressed wishes to another landlord and (d) the name of the landlord to whom the properties in these cases were transferred;

(2) how much Scottish Homes has spent on its public relations function during the financial year 1993–94; how much it has set aside for tenant information relating to its stock transfer proposals; and how much money has been spent up until this point on publicising its stock transfer proposals.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked the chairman of Scottish Homes, Sir James Mellon, to write to the hon. Member with the relevant information.

National Library

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to ensure the sound use of available resources at the national library of Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: The national library of Scotland is an important natational institution which provides valuable services to users in Scotland and beyond. My officials and I take a close and regular interest in the effectiveness of the corporate planning and financial management systems in the library. In keeping with the Government's policy towards non-departmental public bodies, the Scottish Office Education Department will now undertake a regular policy and financial management review of the library, focusing on key issues which will have a bearing on future policy developments at the library. The review will be conducted by Mr. Colin Imrie, a principal at the Scottish Office attached to the Scottish Office Education Department for the purpose of this review. I expect his report, including recommendations, to be completed this spring. Interested parties can contact Mr. Imrie at the following address:

M74

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contractors are responsible for upgrading the M74; what is the deadline for improvements by contractors upgrading the M74; what are the daily financial penalties incurred by the contractors for work completed after the deadline on the M74; and what changes have been made to the contract concerning completion by the deadline on the M74.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 January 1995]: At present, there are two contractors working on the upgrading of the A74 to motorway: Morrison Construction on the length between Ecclefechan and Eaglesfield and Castelli-Girola between Eaglesfield and Kirkpatrick Fleming. Contracts have recently been completed by Barr, Balfour Beatty and Miller Civil Engineering. A contract to divert the Evan Water in advance of the main works has been let to Barr very recently; but work has not yet started.

When bidding for the Scottish Office road contracts, contractors submit their own completion dates with their tenders and these are taken into account when deciding which firm should be awarded the contract. The completion date becomes part of the contract, and the contractor becomes liable for liquidated damages if he is late. There is provision in such contracts to extend the time for completion—for example, due to exceptional weather conditions, which would delay the onset of liquidated damages.

The Ecclefechan to Eaglesfield contract is due to be completed on 3 December 1995, and the liquidated damages payable for late completion are £5,500 per day. The contract is on programme.

The Eaglesfield to Kirkpatrick Fleming contract was due for completion on 26 November 1994, and liquidated damages of £8,200 per day will be due, calculated from that date, except to the extent that the contract conditions relating to an extension of time apply. The appropriate application of these conditions to the circumstances of this contract is currently being considered. The terms of the contract therefore render it unnecessary to make changes concerning the completion date. The road is expected to open to traffic in mid-1995.

DEFENCE

Regimental Mascots

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost of regimental mascots in each of the last five years.

Mr. Soames: The costs of purchasing officially recognised mascots, together with the cost of food, accommodation and ceremonial accoutrements, are met privately by regimental associations. Their travel and veterinary costs are met by my Department, but these are minimal and are not therefore separately identifiable.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the bids he received for the sale of houses at RAF Finningley, near Doncaster, (b) the criteria for determining the successful bid, (c) the name of the successful organisation and (d) the agreed purchase price.

Mr. Soames: Bids for the sale of 93 houses at RAF Finningley were received from the following:

Bassinder Dapo Housing Association
Ellinson
Five Jays
Gerrard Lewis
Glaister
Hetton Properties
Hodge and Co.
JSM Properties
G.A. Mell
R. Northgreaves
J. B. Pettifer
Sable Properties
South Yorkshire Housing Association
Woodwiss
Yorkshire Metropolitan Housing Association

The highest compliant bid was accepted once it had been determined that the bidder was capable of honouring the conditions of sale. The successful bidder was Hodge and Co. The agreed purchase price is commercial in confidence.

Executive and Advisory Bodies

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by name and rank those personnel who have left his Department in the last two years and who now serve on his Department's executive or advisory bodies; if he will identify the advisory or executive body in each case; and if he will give the remuneration received in each case.

Mr. Soames: Four appointees have retired from my Department in the last two years and currently serve on a Ministry of Defence non-departmental public body. These are detailed:

Executive body

Vice Admiral Sir Barry Wilson KCB, appointed as Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Royal Naval Museum.

Captain B. Gibbs RM, appointed as a Trustee of the Royal Marines Museum.

Advisory body

Flight Lieutenant Z. Gunn, appointed as member of the Anglo-American Community Relations Committee.

Major P. Lawson, appointed as member of the Anglo-American Community Relations Committee.

None receives any remuneration.

Recruitment Applications

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications to join defence or defence-related companies from his Department's personnel have been refused in the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: None. The purpose of the rules on the acceptance of outside appointments is to ensure that no cause of suspicion or impropriety exists. All applicants are therefore approved either unconditionally or subject to a waiting period of up to two years, or with a ban on the involvement of the applicant in a specific project or area of work on behalf of the employer.

Property Sales

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Department have been sold to (a) local authorities, (b) housing associations and (c) other buyers since 1 January 1994.

Mr. Soames: The number of dwellings sold to local authorities, housing associations and other buyers between 1 January and 31 December 1994 was as follows:

Local Authorities: Nil
Housing Associations: 231
Other Buyers: 1,315

Unfortunately, my answer of 15 December, Official Report, column 814, contained an error. The number of dwellings sold to housing associations during financial year 1994–95 should have read 229, not 237.

Housing Offices

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) in which city the Crown housing trust has its offices; and what has been the total cost of building and leasing the offices since 1 January 1994;

(2) in which city the defence housing executive has its offices; and what has been the total cost of building and leasing the offices.

Mr. Soames: The staff initially recruited for a housing trust and now employed on setting up the defence housing executive were originally accommodated in Ministry of Defence offices in London. Since August 1994, they have occupied other Government offices in central London at a cost to my Department of approximately £165,000.

Eurofighter 2000

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest estimate for the cost of the Eurofighter 2000 project; what was the original estimated cost; when the Eurofighter is due in service; and when it was originally due in service.

Mr. Freeman: The estimated total cost of EF2000, comprising the costs of development, production and integrated logistic support, to the United Kingdom is £14.9 billion. The original estimated total cost in 1986 was £12.7 billion at today's prices.

At the time of the original approval, the EF2000 entry into service date was December 1998. Reorientation of the project, agreed by the Defence Ministers of the EF2000 partner nations in December 1992, has changed this to December 2000.

Bowman Combat Radio System

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest estimate for the cost of the Bowman combat radio system; what was the original estimated cost; when the Bowman system is expected to be in service; and what was the original in-service date of the project.

Mr. Freeman: The latest estimate for the cost of the Bowman combat radio system is £1.9 billion. The original estimated cost in 1988 was £1.5 billion, which equates to £2.1 billion at current prices. The in-service date for Bowman is January 2000. The original in-service date was 1995.

EH101 Helicopters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest estimate for the cost of the EH101 Merlin; what was the original estimated cost; when the EH101 is expected to be in service; and what was the original in-service date of the project.

Mr. Freeman: The Department's latest estimate for the cost of the EH101 Merlin is £3,925 million. The estimated cost in 1991, at the time the Merlin prime contract was placed on Loral-ASIC—then IBM-ASIC—was £3,799 million, at 1994–95 prices. The Merlin is expected to be in service in 1998; the original in-service date, upon the approval of development in 1982, was 1993.

Boxer Communications System

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest estimate for the cost of the Boxer communications system; what was the original estimated cost; when the Boxer communications system is expected to be in service; and what was the original in-service date of the project.

Mr. Freeman: The latest estimate for the cost of Boxer is £337 million at 1994–95 prices. The original cost was £211.3 million at 1994–95 prices. Boxer is planned to be in service on 30 June 1996. The original in-service date was 31 December 1992.

Facsimile Messages

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will prohibit the use of facsimile messages between royal naval establishments unless the telephones used have automatic memory dialling facilities to avoid mis-dialling errors.

Mr. Soames: No. Automatic memory dialling is already widely used where appropriate.

Electric-shock Equipment

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with BAe Royal Ordnance about the sale of electric-shock batons to (a) Saudi Arabia and (b) other countries.

Mr. Freeman: None, prior to the recent publicity regarding the alleged supply of such equipment. The company has denied both publicly and to my officials that it has ever supplied such equipment.

Infantry Regiments

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name each of the front-line infantry regiments.

Mr. Soames: A list of current Regular infantry regiments is as follows:

Regular Infantry Regiments
The Guards Division
Grenadier Guards
Coldstream Guards
Scots Guards
Irish Guards
Welsh Guards

The Scottish Division
The Royal Scots
The Royal Highland Fusiliers
The King's Own Scottish Borderers
The Black Watch
The Highlanders
The Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders

The Queen's Division
The Princess of Wales's Royal Regiment (First and Second Battalion)
The Royal Regiment of Fusiliers (First and Second Battalion)
The Royal Anglian Regiment (First and Second Battalion)

The King's Division
The King's Own Border Regiment
The King's Regiment
The Prince of Wales's Own Regiment of Yorkshire
The Green Howards
The Royal Irish Regiment
The Queen's Lancashire Regiment
The Duke of Wellington's Regiment

The Prince of Wales's Division
The Devonshire and Dorset Regiment
The Cheshire Regiment
The Royal Welch Fusiliers
The Royal Regiment of Wales
The Royal Gloucestershire, Wiltshire and Berkshire Regiment
The Worcestershire and Sherwood Foresters Regiment
The Staffordshire Regiment

The Light Division
The Light Infantry (First and Second Battalion)
The Royal Green Jackets (First and Second Battalion)
The Parachute Regiment (First, Second and Third Battalion)

The Brigade of Gurkas
The Royal Gurkha Rifles (First, Second and Third Battalion)

Residential Garrison Duty

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the known and foreseeable residential garrison duty tours; if the units on residential garrison duty are more or less than battalion size; and if he will name those units which are on residential garrison duty tours at present and planned to be in the future.

Mr. Soames: Apart from Germany, there are three overseas garrisons that include resident major units: Hong Kong, Brunei and Cyprus. In Hong Kong the only such unit is the 1st Battalion, Royal Gurkha Rifles. It is due to leave Hong Kong in October 1996 and will be replaced by two successive battalions on four month unaccompanied tours. In Brunei there is one Gurkha battalion, currently the 2nd Battalion, Royal Gurkha Rifles which is due to remain there until November 1996 when it will be replaced by the 3rd Battalion, Royal Gurkha Rifles. In Cyprus there are two battalions resident at any one time. The current battalions are the 1st Battalion; the Royal Irish Regiment, which will be replaced by the 1st Battalion Royal Gloucester, Wiltshire and Berkshire Regiment in May 1995, and the 1st Battalion, Royal Green Jackets, which will be replaced by the 1st Battalion, Royal Kings Regiment in January 1996. Each garrison also includes minor units from non-infantry arms and services.

WALES

Teenage Pregnancies

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the trend in the number of unwanted teenage pregnancies in Wales.

Mr. Richards: The number of teenage pregnancies in Wales fell from 7,300 in 1984, to 6,400 in 1991—the earliest and most recent years for which figures are available. Over the same period the rate of conceptions per 1,000 women aged 15 to 19 increased from 64.5 to 70.4. It is not known how many of these pregnancies were unwanted.

Civil Servants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document, "Focus on Ability."

Mr. Redwood: There are 48 registered disabled people amongst the non-industrial staff in the Welsh Office, representing 2 per cent. of the total. Figures for the number and proportion of all disabled people employed in the Welsh Office are not available. A survey of staff using self-categorisation of disability suggested that there were a further 53 staff with a disability who have chosen not to register.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients by general practitioner practice are waiting to be seen for in-patient treatment for orthopaedics and ophthalmology in South Glamorgan.

Mr. Richards: The requested information is not held centrally.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average waiting time of patients, by general practitioner practice, for in-patient treatment for orthopaedics and ophthalmology in South Glamorgan.

Mr. Richards: The information requested could be provided only with the consent of individual general practitioners. The consent could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Consultants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what average hours consultants on maximum part-time contracts work for the NHS and how many hours in the private sector.

Mr. Richards: Maximum part-time consultants are expected to devote substantially the whole of their professional time to their NHS work. Information is not available centrally on the average number of hours such consultants work in the private sector.

Language Units, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make new funds available for language units in Clwyd local education authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend announced final decisions on the local government revenue settlement for 1995–96 for Wales on Monday 30 January. It will be for Clwyd local education authority to decide how much they spend on the services for which they are responsible, including language units.

In addition to the above, Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales is to report to my right hon. Friend on the recording, monitoring and follow-up of absence by schools, evaluating the strengths and weaknesses of current practices. This is expected shortly.

School Repairs Programmes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to assist those local education authorities that have initiated programmes of major repairs to schools.

Mr. Richards: My support for local authority expenditure is in the form of revenue support grant and permission to borrow. It is for each local authority to determine how its available resources are allocated between the services it provides, in the light of its statutory responsibilities and its perception of local needs and priorities.

Local Authority Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many local education authority schools there are in Wales.

Mr. Richards: A total of 2,021 as at January 1994.

School Staff Redundancies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from schools concerned about teaching and staffing redundancies in 1995–96 following consultations on revenue support allocations for education in the next financial year.

Mr. Richards: The Department has received a number of representations from schools concerned about staffing levels in 1995–96. My right hon. Friend does not make revenue support allocations for education. It is for each local authority to determine how much of its available resources to direct to the services it provides, including education, in the light of its statutory responsibilities and its perception of local needs and priorities.

School Class Sizes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning class sizes.

Mr. Richards: Class sizes are a matter for individual school governing bodies.

Consultants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of whether hospital consultants are complying with the terms of their NHS contracts and whether private practice interferes with the function of the NHS or disadvantages non-paying patients.

Mr. Richards: It is a matter for individual health authorities and NHS trusts to satisfy themselves that hospital consultants are fulfilling the terms of their NHS contracts. Consultants who undertake private practice accept that their NHS work should receive priority at all times and employing authorities are entitled to expect no diminution in the level of service to NHS patients as a result of this arrangement.

Special Needs Children

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new funds he proposes to assist special needs children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Richards: Local authority expenditure on education, including provision for special needs children, is funded through the local government revenue settlement. It is for individual local authorities to determine how much is allocated to education, in the light of local needs and priorities.

Upland Farm Incomes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what were the net income figures for upland cattle and sheep farms in each year from 1988–89 to 1993–94; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what were the net farm incomes for hill sheep farms in each year from 1988–89 to 1992–93; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what were the net income figures for hill cattle and sheep farms in each year from 1988–89 to 1993–94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is included in the statistical tables which were released when the results of the autumn hill review were announced on 29 November. A copy of these tables is available in the Library of the House.

Public Bodies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people sit on two or more non-departmental public bodies in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: As at 1 December 1994, there were 59 people appointed to two or more non-departmental public bodies in Wales.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people sit on non-departmental public bodies in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: As at 1 December 1994, 1,377 people sat on non-departmental public bodies in Wales. Of these, 761 have been appointed by me or my predecessors. Details are given in "Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales, 1 December 1994" which is available in the Library of the House.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many general practitioner fundholders there are in the county of Gwynedd;

(2) how many general practitioner fundholders there are in the county of Clwyd.

Mr. Richards: In Gwynedd there are nine general practitioner fundholding practices—one third wave and eight fourth wave; these include five practices in one group of three and one group of two. A further two practices are preparing to become fundholders from 1 April 1995.

There at 19 general practitioner fundholding practices in Clwyd—one first wave, nine second wave, eight third wave and one fourth wave; these include four practices in two groups. Another practice is preparing to become a fundholder from 1 April 1995.

Education Spending

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how much was spent per pupil on (a) primary and (b) secondary education in the counties of (i) Dyfed, (ii) Mid Glamorgan, (iii) South Glamorgan and (iv) Gwent in 1990, 1991, 1992 and 1993; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how much was spent per pupil on (a) secondary and (b) primary education in the county of Gwynedd in each year from 1990 to 1993; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how much was spent per pupil on (a) primary and (b) secondary education in the county of Clwyd in each year from 1990 to 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Richards: The information requested for 1993–94 is not yet available. Figures for earlier years are available in tables 10 and 14 in the Welsh Office "Education Finance Bulletin" produced by the training and education intelligence unit, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the figures for net product and farming income in Wales in each year from 1981 to 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is as follows:

	Net product £000	Farming income £000
1981	202,645	60,035
1982	228,274	78,856

Truancy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he is taking to eradicate truancy.

Mr. Richards: We attach great importance to the elimination of truancy and are continually looking at ways in which to effect this. Over the past 12 months or so we have; issued guidance to schools and LEAs on the policy and practice on categorisation of absence; published details of absence levels at individual secondary schools for the first time; encouraged LEAs to look more closely at individual pupils' absence rates and the reasons for them, and urged them to make more use of school attendance orders where appropriate;

reminded parents through the revised Charter for Parents in Wales of their duty to ensure that their children attend school regularly; and supported projects totalling £663,500 on pupil discipline, bullying, and attendance including initiatives to combat truancy. The level of funding for 1995–96 has increased to £800,000 and the successful projects will be announced shortly.

Nursery Education

Mr Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) four-year-olds and (b) three and four-year-olds are in receipt of nursery education; what percentage of the total number of children in that age group that constituted; and if he will give the figures by each education authority.

Mr. Richards: The figures in the following table relate to children in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools. Children in reception or ordinary classes in maintained primary or special schools are not included, neither are children in non-maintained schools, nurseries and playgroups.

Ysgol y Berwyn, Y Bala

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when a decision will be made on the application by Ysgol y Berwyn, Y Bala for the reinstatement of its sixth form; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Richards: As soon as possible.

Quarrymen

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will now take steps to facilitate a study into the incidence of emphysema and chronic bronchitis amongst slate quarrymen and former quarrymen, compared to the whole population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Oppenheim: I have been asked to reply.

There are no plans to set up such a study.

Housing

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 25 January, Official Report, column 155, on the Department of the Environment's consultation document on a licensing system for houses in multiple occupation in England and Wales, if he has anything to add to his answer.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This document was issued in England only. The separate consultation arrangements, I described in my last answer, apply in Wales. The Welsh Office and the Department of the Environment will, of course, be discussing the outcomes of our separate consultations.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many parliamentary answers on health issues have been refused on the grounds of disproportionate cost or information not being held centrally (a) as a total and (b) as a percentage of all health answers in each of the last five years.

Mr. Redwood: Following a general search on POLIS, answers which contained the words "Health" or "NHS" are shown in the following table:

Session	Total number	Not answered on the grounds of disproportionate costs or information not held centrally	Per cent.
1989–90	63	4	2.52
1990–91	37	3	1.11
1991–92	23	2	0.46

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Cash Limits

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals there are to change the 1994–95 cash limit for Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for Her Majesty's Stationery Office, class XVIII, vote 4, will be increased by £59,000 from £2,093,000 to £2,152,000. The increase is necessary to meet a higher than expected level of demand for official publications from United Kingdom Members of the European Parliament, and to restore a shortfall in compensation for the public library discount on official publications, which was occasioned in 1993–94 by excess expenditure on behalf of Members of the European Parliament. The increase will be offset by savings on class XVIII, vote 1, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mrs Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals he has to change the 1994–95 cash limit or running costs limit for the Office of Public Service and Science.

Mr. David Hunt: The cash limit for the Office of Public Service and Science, class XVIII, vote 1 will be decreased by £1,556,000 from £66,428,000 to £64,872,000 and the gross running cost limit will also be decreased by £1,556,000 from £85,506,000 to £83,950,000. The majority of this decrease, £1,500,000, is in effect a transfer to Cabinet Office other services, class XIX, vote 1, in final settlement of an earlier transfer of functions. The remaining £56,000 is being transferred to HMSO, class XVIII, vote 4, to cover the increase in Members of the European Parliament supplies. The decrease is offset by increases to other Government Departments and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Science Budget

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes he proposes to the estimates, class XVIII, vote 2—Science—for 1994–95.

Mr. David Hunt: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVIII, vote 2 will be increased by £840,000 from £1,225,527,000 to £1,226,367,000 to enable the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council to meet the cost of certain redundancies at Horticulture Research International. The increase is offset by a similar reduction in class III, vote 4 and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The opportunity of the supplementary estimate is also being taken to show changes to the appropriations in aid of the vote and to switch resources between certain subheads of the vote.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the distribution of the science budget in 1995–96.

Mr. David Hunt: I have discussed the allocations with the Director General of Research Councils and have decided that, subject to parliamentary approval of the supply estimates in due course, the science budget of £1,281.675 million should be allocated as follows.

Allocations for 1995–96	£ million
Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council	161.631
Economic and Social Research Council	61,232
Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council	365.702
Medical Research Council	277.809
Natural Environment Research Council	155.483
Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council	196.367
Council for the Central Laboratory of the Research Councils	1.500
Additional funding for LINK schemes (to be allocated to Research Councils in due course)	3.000
Royal Society	20.786
Royal Academy of Engineering	2.617
OST initiatives	2.250
Research Councils' Pension Scheme	33.298
Total	1,281.675

In making these allocations, I need to ensure that momentum is maintained with implementing the science, engineering and technology White Paper "Realising Our Potential". I have therefore decided that some 5 per cent. of the science budget should be targeted to priority initiatives aimed specifically at taking White Paper issues forward. Further details are set out in the paper "Allocation of the Science Budget 1995–96" which I have placed in the Library of the House.

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the absenteeism rate for (a) the Central Office of Information, (b) the Office of Public Service and Science, (c) the Chessington Computer Centre, (d) the Civil Service college, (e) HMSO, (f) the occupational health service and (g) the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency in each year since 1991.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: The average number of days sick leave taken by members of the staff of OPSS in each of the last four years was:

	1991	1992	1993	1994
Office of Public Service and Science	3.2	4.5	4.3	3.3

These figures include any weekends and public holidays which occurred within a single period of sickness absence.

I have asked the chief executives of each of the other Departments and agencies the hon. Member mentions to write to him with the information he seeks as they are responsible for operational matters within their organisations.

Letter from Michael D. Geddes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 30 January 1995:

Mr. Robert Hughes has asked me to let you have the following information in respect of the average number of days sick leave taken by the staff in the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency; it was:

1994: 15.1

I hope that this information is useful to you.

Letter from Dr. Stephen Hickey to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 26 January 1995:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the absenteeism rate for the Civil Service College in each year since 1991.

The average number of days sick leave taken by members of the staff in each of the last four years was:

1991	1992	1993	1994
4.6	5.3	8.2	7.4

These figures include any weekends and public holidays which occurred within a single period of sickness absence.

Letter from Paul Freeman to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 26 January 1995:

I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to reply to part of your question on absenteeism.

The average number of days sick leave taken by members of staff in HMSO in each of the last four years was:

1991	1992	1993	1994
10.0	9.2	10.4	7.2

Letter from Dr. E. C. McCloy to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 27 January 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service and Science (Mr. Robert Hughes) has asked me to provide for my Agency, the information requested in your Parliamentary Question to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster about the absenteeism rate since 1991.

The average number of days sick leave taken by members of the staff of the Agency in each of the years since 1991 was:

4.9	6.2	9.5	11.4

This information has been taken from records produced by Chessington Computer Centre and is provided on the same basis as that given for the Office of Public Service.

The figures therefore include any weekends and public holidays which occurred within a single period of sickness, and do not necessarily reflect days absent from the office due to sickness.

Letter from R. N. Edwards to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 26 January 1995:

SICK ABSENCE AT CHESSINGTON COMPUTER CENTRE

I refer to your enquiry of 19 January to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster regarding absenteeism at Chessington Computer Centre.

The average number of days sick leave taken by members of staff at Chessington Computer Centre in each of the last four years was:

1991	1992	1993	1994
8.6	9.3	11.5	10.8

The figures include any weekends and public holidays which occurred within a single period of sickness absence.

Letter from Mike Devereau to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 26 January 1995:

In response to your PQ addressed to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the absenteeism rates for the Central Office of Information in each of the last four years were as follows:

Year	Number of staff	Total number of days sick	Average rate (days)
1991	669.5	4,776	7.1
1992	620.5	3,632	5.9
1993	541.5	5,467	10.1
1994	498.0	5,033	10.1

These figures include any weekends and public holidays which occurred within a single period of sickness absence, so do not necessarily indicate the number of days absence from the office.

Scientific Researchers

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proportion of the total number of scientific researchers employed in Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries was employed in the United Kingdom in each year since 1975.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: The only available data are for the years 1981, 1985 and 1989 and are shown in the table.

Total number of scientific researchers employed in the UK as a percentage of the total employed in OECD countries

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Cash Limits

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what changes he plans to the 1994–95 cash limits for the votes of the Lord Chancellor's Department, class IX, vote 1 and the Public Record Office, class IX, vote 5.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IX, vote 1 has been increased by £18,175,000 from £760,918,000 to £779,093,000 as a result of a shortfall in civil court fee income. The running cost limit has been reduced by £2,884,000 from £431,330,000 to £428,446,000.

The cash limit for class IX, vote 5 has been reduced by £3,000,000 from £53,993,000 to £50,993,000 as a result of reduced expenditure on a major capital project. The running costs limit has been increased by £199,000 from £25,246,000 to £25,445,000. Some £196,000 is for take-up of end-year flexibility entitlement as announced by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 729-34. The remaining £3,000 has been transferred from HM Treasury for the move to repayment of the average property price lists for calculating additional housing cost allowance. The additional running cost provision is covered by savings in capital provision.

The increase in the cash limit on class IX, vote 1 is partially offset by the cash limit reduction on class IX, vote 5. The remaining £15,175,000 will be charged to the reserve and will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) which advanced gas-cooled reactors owned by Nuclear Electric are affected by the cracking of welds in steam headers; which Scottish reactors are affected by the same problem; and what changes have been made in their position on privatisation following these problems;

(2) what considerations his Department is giving within the nuclear review to generic cracking faults in welds on steam leaders of advanced gas-cooled reactors.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The answer I gave to the hon. Member for Leyton on 19 January 1995, Official Report, column 589, explained that cracks had been identified in some of the steam header welds at Heysham 1 and Dungeness B advanced gas-cooled reactor power stations. The power stations owned and operated by Scottish Nuclear Ltd. are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland but I understand that no such cracks have been identified in any Scottish nuclear power station. The matter of the cracks does not fall within the scope of the terms of reference of the nuclear review.

China (Import Quotas)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans next to meet representatives from the People's Republic of China to discuss import quotas.

Mr. Needham: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has no such plans.

Oxygenated Petrol

Mr. Dowd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research his Department has carried out into oxygenated petrol; what plans for research into the environmental suitability of oxygenated petrol he has.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Government are supporting the tri-partite programme, sponsored by the European Commission and the oil and motor industries, which is looking into the effects of motor fuel quality, including the use of oxygenates in petrol, and engine technology on air quality. A report is expected by mid-1995.

Tenant Farmers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he proposes to take to protect tenant farmers whose farms are being sold by British Coal.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The sale of British Coal's property is a matter for the corporation.

However, British Coal, in considering potential purchasers of the proposed agricultural land, will take every step to satisfy itself that they meet appropriate tests on viability and commitment to the future of the property which they are purchasing. Tenants' rights of tenure are also protected by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986.

Iraq Trade Delegation

Mr. Worthington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what grounds he has given authorisation for a British trade delegation to Iraq on 15 February.

Mr. Needham: I have not given authorisation for a British trade delegation to visit Iraq, nor has such authorisation been sought.

Coal Privatisation

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will detail the present involvement of former employees of British Coal in the ownership and management of new companies formed following the privatisation of British Coal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Tower Colliery was purchased by a team of its former employees and the South Wales regional coal company was purchased by a management buy-out team. Bidders' proposals for employee participation were taken into account in the selection of preferred bidders for the regional coal companies and care and maintenance collieries. The purchasers of the regional coal companies have all undertaken to provide the opportunity for employees to acquire shares.

Video Games

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 5 December 1994, Official Report, column 105, on the publication of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of video games received on 14 November 1994, when he now expects the report to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Publication will take place as soon as possible. As related in my previous answer, I shall make an announcement once the report has been published.

Departmental Funding

Mr. Gale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent changes have been made and what future changes are planned to his Department's cash and running costs limits for 1994–95.

Mr. Ian Taylor: The cash limit for class IV, vote 1—support for business, consumer and investor protection, energy programmes and administration—has been reduced by £710,000 from £1,185,602,000 to £1,184,892,000. This reduction results from the transfer of responsibility for consultancy initiatives to the Scottish—£400,000—and Welsh—£310,000—Offices for their respective territories.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the same vote will be increased by a token £1,000 to £1,184,893,000.

The gross running cost limit for the Department of Trade and Industry will be reduced by £2,758,000 from £342,217,000 to £339,459,000. This reduction will be offset by an increase of £2,759,000 to cover the expected shortfalls against the Department's research laboratories' original net voted provisions.

In addition, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IV, vote 4—privatisation of the coal industry—will be increased by £2,000,000 from £15,897,000 to £17,897,000. The increase mainly covers additional costs of privatisation advisers' fees.

N. M. Rothschild and Son Ltd.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the decision was taken to award the contract to advise the Department of Energy on the future of the coal industry to N. M Rothschild and Son Ltd.; who took the decision; what other companies were invited to tender; what criteria were used for awarding the contract; what was the value of the contract; and if the contract was awarded to the lowest tenderer.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 31 January 1995]: N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. was appointed on 31 May 1991. The decision to appoint the company was taken by the then Secretary of State for Energy after receiving recommendations from an interdepartmental panel of officials. In addition to N. M. Rothschild, a further seven companies were invited to tender. Their identity is commercially confidential. The contract was awarded to the tenderer offering the best value for money. The value of the contract, which is still continuing, is commercially confidential.

Nitric Acid

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has authorised the importation of nitric acid from the United States Hanford plant for use in the reprocessing at Sellafield.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 30 January 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry has responsibility for granting import licences. The import of nitric acid from the United States Hanford plant will be subject to import licensing. Applications for import licences are commercially confidential.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Attorney-General what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the Departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office document, "Focus on Ability".

The Attorney-General: The information for the Departments for which I am responsible as at 1 July 1994 is set out in the table.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department also employs people with disabilities who are not registered, but the numbers are not readily available.

Each of the Law Officers' Departments is an equal opportunities employer.

	Registered disabled staff		Non-registered disabled staff
	Proportion Per cent.	Number	Proportion Per cent.	Number

ENVIRONMENT

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government are planning to complete its review of radioactive waste policy.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) on Tuesday 6 December, Official Report, column 132.

Greenpeace

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, columns 109-10, what possible causes of Greenpeace's high readings were investigated apart from the misuse of equipment.

Mr Atkins: The radiological measurements made by Greenpeace personnel at the Drigg low level radioactive waste disposal site were just one component of the complaints made by Greenpeace following its illegal entry. Each component was investigated thoroughly by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

The Greenpeace complaint provided no reliable evidence of unauthorised disposals of low level radioactive waste, least of all from its radiological monitoring of waste in the disposal trench.

HMIP considered the breadth of the findings from its investigations and found no evidence to support the Greenpeace contention that radioactive waste of levels in excess of those permitted had been disposed of at Drigg.

Energy Efficiency Advertising

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 109, who carried out the monitoring of the advertising campaigns run by his Department; and what were the conclusions of this monitoring, with particular regard to projected energy savings flowing from the campaigns and cost-effectiveness of the campaigns.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The "Helping the Earth Begins At Home" campaign was monitored by BMRB International, which tracked significant changes in public knowledge, attitudes and intended energy saving behaviour. The current "Wasting Energy Costs The Earth" campaign, which is closely synchronised with the private sector, therefore places more emphasis on individual actions and is being monitored by National Opinion Poll.

Consultants

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 112, if he will list those firms of consultants which are known centrally by his Department to have worked for his Department in 1992–93 and 1993–94.

Sir Paul Beresford: Firms of consultants known centrally to have worked for the Department in 1992–93 and 1993–94 are those employed specifically in connection with the market testing programme.

The list, excluding those employed direct by the agencies, is as follows:

Amtec Consulting Andersen Consulting Capita Management Consultancy Ltd.
Castle Management Consultants
Civil Service College
Coopers and Lybrand
CSL Group
Dun and Bradstreet
Mr P. Dworkin
Hoskyns Group plc
PA Consulting Group
Prime Strategy Consultants
Ray Tilly Associates
Shreeveport Limited
Smith and Williamson
SPT (Simon Thorpe)
Symonds Facilities Management plc
Mr. J. Wormald

Planning (Funds)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what controls exist on the use to which local authorities may put planning gain money and on the geographical area in which it may be spent; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Paul Beresford: The use to which local planning authorities put money received in connection with agreements under section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990, and the geographical area in which such money may be spent, will largely depend on the precise terms of the agreement, which will be registered as a local land charge.

Recycling

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what considerations he proposes to bear in mind in formulating an approach to legislation to increase the recovery and recycling of packaging waste.

Mr. Atkins: Clauses 76 to 78 of the Environment Bill, which is currently before Parliament, empower the Secretary of State, subject to certain conditions, to make regulations placing on particular industry sectors a producer responsibility obligation in relation to the waste which arises from their products, and the packaging around them. Individual companies may choose to discharge the obligation by acting alone or by joining an "exemption scheme" which will organise recovery and recycling operations on their behalf.

The Government propose to legislate using these powers to provide a framework for an industry-led approach to increase the recovery and recycling of packaging waste. This is in response to requests from industry to overcome the potential problem of "free-riders" who might seek to avoid their share of the responsibility to act. The legislative framework will serve to deliver our recovery and recycling obligations under the EC directive on packaging and packaging waste. It will build on the work of the former producer responsibility group and the working representative advisory group, which has now been formed with the backing of some 50 major companies.

The proposed powers are wide in scope and allow a variety of different approaches to suit the circumstances of different waste streams, should legislation be necessary or appropriate. In reaching a conclusion on the best approach for packaging waste, we propose to bear in mind the following considerations:

(i) the need to be confident that the available options can ensure that the targets set by the packaging directive will be met;

(ii) the practicality, cost-effectiveness, potential benefits as against the likely costs, taking account of environmental and economic considerations, and fairness of the available options;

(iii) the desirability of minimising regulatory burdens on business;

(iv) the desirability of business choice in the manner in which the obligation is satisfied, both in terms of the provision of an individual compliance route which is reasonable and practicable, and the potential for multiple exemption schemes to co-exist;

(v) the compatibility of the available options with existing EC and domestic law, for example to ensure that they do not create a barrier to trade with other member states in the Community;

(vi) the need to take account of competition policy, for example to ensure that the regulations do not have the effect of distorting competition unnecessarily;

(vii) the desirability of business freedom and flexibility to control and administer collaborative schemes run on its behalf and of minimising the role of the public sector agencies, compatible with effective enforcement;

(vii) the desirability of targeting as closely as possible those responsible for determining the content, nature and amount of packaging used for a particular product.

In drawing up the statutory obligation for individual businesses, consistent with these considerations, the main issues concern the coverage and nature of the obligation. On the coverage of the obligation, there are options encompassing all those businesses which are involved in some way with packaging or packaged products; or a narrower obligation, perhaps on those who make use of packaging for products which they manufacture or control; or some combination of the two. In reaching a view, we will take into account market characteristics, the nature of the recovery and recycling operations, and evidence of the willingness of different business sectors to work together, as well as the need to minimise the extent of the legislative burden placed on industry. In the event that the regulations were found not to work there would, however, be scope for changing the obligation.

The second main issue concerns the nature of the legal obligation. Value from packaging waste is recovered in a variety of ways. Detailed involvement by an enforcement agency in monitoring a large number of processes for those businesses involved in packaging would require significant resources and is likely to prove expensive for the businesses concerned. We will therefore seek to define the producer responsibility obligation in a simple and straightforward way which:

(a) is intended to achieve our obligations under the packaging directive;

(b) allows wide discretion to industry as to how to respond;

(c) is amenable to external auditing. The scope for independent certification is an important objective in minimising the burdens of the regulatory approach.

Officials from my Department and the Department of Trade and Industry are continuing discussions with a wide range of interested parties in the packaging industry. Once we have formulated a set of proposals, we will bring forward a consultation paper on these issues.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to increase the funds available for the home energy efficiency scheme in the current financial year.

Mr. Gummer: I am pleased to announce that we have been able to increase the provision for the home energy efficiency scheme by £8.85 million, bringing the total available for grants in 1994–95 to about £77 million. This is a welcome boost to a successful and high quality scheme.

Departmental Funding

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1994–95.

Mr. Gummer: The Housing Corporation non-voted cash limit, covering grants and capital expenditure financed by the Housing Corporation in England, will be increased by £5,832,000 to £1,484,540,000. The increase will allow additional expenditure of £2,177,000 on city challenge projects, and of £3,655,000 on the corporation's approved development programme.

The regeneration initiatives non-voted cash limit will be increased by £2,612,000 from £292,853,000 to £1,295,465,000. The changes reflect a transfer of £2,177,000 to the Housing Corporation cash limit to cover additional expenditure on city challenge projects; a transfer of £715,000 from the regeneration initiative cash limit to allow increased payments on urban programme loan charges within class VII, vote 3, regeneration initiatives; and an increase of £5,504,000 to allow the issue of an all—purpose supplementary credit approval in respect of East Manchester regeneration programme expenditure. The increase is covered in full by take-up of part of the entitlement to capital end year flexibility announced by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 729–34.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 5—central environmental services and so on—will be reduced by £2,500,000 from £439,645,000 to £437,145,000. This change reflects a reduced requirement for grant in aid by the National Rivers Authority. The savings will be transferred to the Housing Corporation cash limit to cover increased expenditure on the Housing Corporation's approved development programme.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 6—property holdings and other services to Government—will be increased by £1,000 to £3,000. This reflects the token supplementary estimate for this vote. Property holdings gross running costs limit will be increased by £135,000 to £19,976,000.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 7—administration—will be reduced by £612,000 from £227,347,000 to £226,735,000. This reflects the net position after a number of small transfers, the most significant being transfers to the Department of National Heritage of £184,000 in respect of the conservation unit, and of £255,000 to the Housing Corporation cash limit to cover increased expenditure on the Housing Corporation's approved development programme. The Department of the Environment's gross running costs limit will be reduced by £2,316,000 from £227,465,000 to £225,149,000. In the main, this reduction is due to savings made to enable the Department to capitalise early retirement costs.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 8—revenue support grant, payments of non-domestic rates, Valuation Office services, and so on, England—will be reduced by £900,000 from £29,634,332,000 to £29,633,432,000 to reflect savings in expenditure by, and on behalf of, the Valuation Tribunals. The savings will be transferred to the Housing Corporation cash limit to cover increased expenditure on the Housing Corporation's approved development programme.

The local government reorganisation non-voted cash limit will be reduced by £9,540,000 from £54,200,000 to £44,660,000. This reduction consists of £9,440,000 for deemed debt supplementary credit approvals and £100,000 for local government residuary body borrowing provision.

The running costs limit for the Office of Water Services—class VII, vote 9—will be increased by £254,000 from £9,106,000 to £9,360,000 under end-year flexibility arrangements for running costs announced by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 729–34. This will be offset by reductions on capital expenditure so no overall increase in the cash limit is required.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 11—PSA Services—will be reduced by £40,000 from £98,661,000 to £98,621,000. This reflects a transfer to Property Holdings to cover senior staff costs. The net running cost limit on this vote will also be reduced by £40,000 from £98,261,000 to £98,221,000.

All increases will be offset by savings or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment Agencies

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many employment agencies provided social work or social care staff for each of the last five years;

(2) how many employment agencies provided domiciliary care staff for each of the last five years.

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is not available in the form requested. However, it is estimated that immediately prior to the abolition of licensing on 3 January 1995, there were about 3,000 licensed employment agencies which had indicated that their field of activity might include domiciliary or social care work.

I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State on 30 November 1992, Official Report, column 55.

Careers Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate he has of the cost of market testing the careers service; and if he will detail (a) the transaction costs and (b) the tendering costs.

Mr. Paice: The process by which my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State is meeting his duty to provide the careers service is competitive tendering, not market testing.

I have no information on the costs of compiling bids; they were met by the bidders. The costs to the Employment Department were about £300,000, which were found from existing resources. They included £220,000 on staff and associated costs for a small team of administrators—1994–95—and £74,000 on a prospectus and publicity for tendering in 1994–95. In addition, some staff from the 10 Government offices were involved. Further figures could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list which of the careers services that have gone out for tender have (a) remained in-house, (b) been won by the private sector and (c) are still outstanding.

Mr. Paice: This information is not yet available. No contracts have been awarded. Preferred bidders have been selected for post-tender negotiation and the contracts will be announced after negotiations are complete.

Tele-workers

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently employed as tele-workers; and what is his estimate of the number that will be employed in 2000.

Mr. Oppenheim: I regret that the requested information is not available.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the principal components of the league tables by which he measures the effectiveness of training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Paice: The most recent table of inter-TEC performance comparisons consisted of the following indicators:

1. The cost per output point for youth training and youth credits;
2. The number of national vocational qualifications per 100 leavers for youth training and youth credits;
3. The cost per output point for training for work;
4. The number of NVQs per 100 leavers for TfW;

5. The number of positive outcomes per 100 leavers for TfW;
6. The percentage achievement against the investors in people commitments target;
7. The performance of the TEC in relation to the Government's YT guarantee.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the rules for approving spending projects by the training and enterprise councils to spend surpluses earned in contracts with his Department.

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils are required to agree annual business plans and three-year corporate plans with the Department. Where an operating surplus occurs, a TEC is contractually required to use it solely on activities agreed with the Department to further the objectives of its corporate plan and business plan. Where projects have been specifically identified in an agreed business plan, a TEC may carry them out without further agreement. Separate approval is required for the use of surpluses on projects not specifically identified in the business plan, although meeting the plan's objectives. For such a project, the Department needs to be satisfied that it is in accordance with the aims of the plan and represents value for money. The TEC also needs to show that it has the authority to implement the project under its memorandum and articles of association, that the project is financially viable and that it is not in conflict with other parts of the TEC operating agreement or with Government policy. TECs are under a general contractual obligation to provide value for money on the expenditure of all funds which derive from the Government.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the principal elements of the debenture held against each of the training and enterprise councils at the commencement of each financial year.

Mr. Paice: The Department agreed the same debenture arrangements with all training and enterprise councils when they were first set up. The debenture gives the Department a charge over all of a TEC's fixed and floating assets. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Training Providers

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training providers will have to close as result of the reduction in expenditure on training for work announced in the Budget.

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils contract with training providers for the delivery of training for work. It is a matter for TECs to decide with whom they will contract according to the scale and nature of the training required locally. Government regional offices are currently negotiating with TECs for 1995–96 contracts.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list for (a) Islwyn, (b) Wales and (c) Great Britain the number of persons and percentage of persons in (i) full-time work and (ii) part-time work earning (1) less than £1.50 an hour, (2) between £1.50 and £2.50 an hour and (3) between £2.50 and £3.50 an hour breaking these figures down by gender;

(2) what is the (a) mean hourly rate of pay, (b) median hourly rate of pay and (c) modal hourly rate of pay for (i) full-time work and (ii) part-time work in Islwyn;

(3) if he will list the current average hourly pay rate in Islwyn for full-time work in (a) hairdressing, (b) retail trade, (c) clothing manufacturing and (d) hotel and catering sectors.

Mr. Oppenheim: Information for Islwyn is not available.

Information available from the new earnings survey for Wales and Great Britain is provided in the table:

Employees whose pay for the survey pay period was not affected by absence—distribution of gross hourly earnings showing numbers and percentages. April 1994

Labour Statistics

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of persons in Islwyn in full-time work in (a) hairdressing, (b) the retail trade, (c) clothing manufacturing and (d) hotel and catering sectors in the last five years, also expressing these numbers as a percentage of the work force.

Mr. Oppenheim: The available information is from the periodic censuses of employment and is shown in the table.

The information for hairdressing and clothing manufacturing, is confidential under the Statistics of Trade Act 1947.

Number of full-time jobs in the retail trade[1] in Islwyn, September of each year

Year	Number	Per cent.
1987	700	5.3
1989	400	3.3
1991	700	5.8

Departmental Funding

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits and running costs limits in 1994–95.

Mr. Portillo: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, these changes will be made:

(a) the cash limit for class V, vote 1, Department of Employment: programmes and central services, will be increased by £14,414,000 from £2,302,056,000 to £2,316,470,000. The increase in the cash limit arises from additional Employment Department group restructuring costs, training and enterprise councils' administrative costs and Skills Training Agency costs of £36,514,000 offset by programme underspends of £15,300,000 and running costs underspends of £6,800,000;

(b) the cash limit for class V, vote 2, Department of Employment: Employment Service, will be reduced by £15,300,000 from £738,529,000 to £723,229,000;

(c) the single running costs limit for class V, vote 1, Department of Employment: programmes and central services, and class V, vote 2, Department of Employment: Employment Service, will also be increased by £14,414,000 from £1,437,932,000 to £1,452,346,000. The increase reflects the take-up of £12,614,000 in respect of end-year flexibility arrangements for running costs expenditure, as announced by my right hon. Friend, the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 729–34, and a transfer of £1,800,000 from class V, vote 3, Health and Safety Executive;

(d) the cash limit on class V, vote 3, Health and Safety Executive and Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service, will be reduced £1,800,000 from £212,779,000 to £210,979,000 as a result of a transfer to class V, vote 1, Department of Employment: programmes and central services;

(e) the Health and Safety Executive running costs limit will be reduced by £1,800,000 from £179,124,000 to £177,324,000 as a result of a transfer to class V, vote 1, Department of Employment: programmes and central services.

The increases will be offset by savings, transfers or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Palestinian Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the actual or estimated level of funding from the Overseas Development Administration budget to Palestinian non-governmental organisations in each of the years 1991 to 1995; and if he will list the organisations funded.

Mr. Baldry: We fund the programmes of a number of British non-governmental organisations which provide assistance to Palestinians. The majority of these work with Palestinian partner organisations. We estimate that since 1991–92, our expenditure through such agencies operating in the occupied territories has been:

Year	£
1991–92	953,000
1992–93	1,271,000
1993–94	1,280,000
1994–95 (to date)	845,000

In addition, Palestinians have benefited from assistance provided through non-governmental organisations working in the Lebanon.

Overseas Aid

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the European Community attribution of overseas aid by recipient country in 1993–94.

Mr. Baldry: Country by country figures for EC aid spending in 1993-94 are not readily available.

For the calendar year 1993, total payments on aid from EC budget, as set out in the draft EC general budget for 1995, were:

	mecu
Food aid and humanitarian aid	774.7
Asia and Latin America	354.0
Mediterranean	351.5
Eastern and central europe	719.5
Other co-operation measures (includes co-operation with NGOs and aid to South Africa)	338.3
Total	2,538.0

The cost to the United Kingdom of this expenditure was as shown in the table, based on an average exchange rate for 1993 of £1 = ecu 1.2829, and a United Kingdom share of the EC budget for 1993 of 16.52 per cent.

	£ million
Food aid and humanitarian aid	99.8
Asia and Latin America	45.6

	£ million
Mediterranean	45.3
Eastern and central europe	92.7
Other co-operation measures	43.6
Total	327.0

World Health Organisation

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms exist for the Government to review the value for money of contributions to the World Health Organisation for its work in the developing world.

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom has been active in seeking reforms necessary to ensure that its assessed and voluntary contributions to the World Health Organisation achieve the optimum value for money. For instance, the United Kingdom has chaired the committee of the WHO executive board set up to review the role of WHO. In addition, the United Kingdom targets its voluntary contributions to specific WHO-managed programmes on those that tackle priority problems in developing countries and has established a set of procedures by which to assess their effectiveness.

International Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was given to the International Atomic Energy Authority out of the overseas aid budget in 1993–94; and on what grounds.

Mr. Baldry: In 1993–94, the Overseas Development Administration gave the IAEA an accountable grant of £500,000 to cover the cost of selected projects, aimed at sustainable development, in developing countries who are signatories of the non proliferation treaty. This grant was paid as part of the £2.5 million pledged by the UK over five years commencing 1991–92 to encourage countries who are signatories of the non-proliferation treaty in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Bilateral Emergency Aid

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which 10 countries have received most out of the bilateral emergency aid budget in the last 10 years; and what amounts they have received.

Mr. Baldry: It is not possible to provide comparable country-specific information on the bilateral emergency aid programme for years before 1987–88. The top 10 bilateral emergency aid recipients between 1987–88 and 1993–94 are given in the table.

Top 10 ODA bilateral emergency aid recipients 1987–88 to 1993–94

Country	Expenditure (£ million)
Ethiopia	100.8
States of ex-Yugoslavia	89.9
Sudan	78.0
Mozambique	59.3
Iraq	47.3
Pakistan	30.2
Malawi	29.3

Top 10 ODA bilateral emergency aid recipients 1987–88 to 1993–94

Country	Expenditure (£ million)
Somalia	25.5
Bangladesh	21.1
Angola	17.8

Note: There is no United Kingdom aid to the Government of Iraq. The amounts recorded as emergency aid to Iraq are provided through UN agencies and NGOs for Iraqi citizens.

Aid and Trade Provision

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which 10 countries have received most out of the aid and trade provision of the overseas aid budget in the last 10 years; and what amounts they have received.

Mr. Baldry: The top 10 recipients of the aid and trade provision expenditure between 1984 and 1993–94 are given in the table:

Country	Expenditure (£ million)
China	117.6
Malaysia	82.2
Indonesia	44.5
Turkey	43.2
Zimbabwe	40.9
Kenya	31.4
India	30.9
Philippines	25.0
Morocco	21.9
Ghana	19.7

Nigeria

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what British aid to Nigeria was spent in 1993 to 1995.

Mr. Baldry: At the time of the annulment of democratic elections in June 1993, British aid to Nigeria was supporting projects in education, agriculture, forestry, health, energy and public administration. There was also residual expenditure from balance of payments agreements signed in 1989 and 1990. Since June 1993, new aid has been confined to projects bringing direct benefits to poor Nigerians in the health/water, education and natural resources sectors. This accords with EU guidelines agreed last year. We have also met outstanding commitments to projects already under way in June 1993.

Africa

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the European Community's attribution of overseas aid to Africa in 1993–94.

Mr. Baldry: For the calendar year 1993, total payments from the European Development Fund—most of the beneficiaries of which are in sub-Saharan Africa—were 1,337 million ecu or £1,042 million[1]. A country by country breakdown of cumulative expenditure from successive European development funds is available in the Commission report "EU-ACP Co-operation", a copy of which has been placed in the library.'

United Kingdom contributions to the European Development Fund totalled £172 million in the UK financial year 1993–94.

Expenditure from the European Community budget in 1993 on the "Programme of positive measures regarding South Africa" amounted to 60.4 million ecu or £47.1 million.

[1]At an average exchange rate for the year of £1 = 1.2829 ecu.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made in the 1994–95 cash limit for expenditure by the Overseas Development Administration.

Mr. Baldry: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit on the external assistance vote-class II, vote 5—will be reduced overall by £24,176,000 from £1,923,943,000 to £1,899,767,000. The overall reduction is the net effect of a decrease of £30,500,000 due to overspend on European Community budgetary spending on aid for developing countries in 1993; a decrease of £2,700,000 under roll-over arrangements in respect of the Commonwealth Development Corporation's excess cash holding at the end of 1993–94; an increase of £8,964,000 in respect of new provision for certain aid and trade provision projects which are no longer being financed under the authority of the Overseas Development and Co-operation Act 1980; and an increase of £59,000 in respect of the eventual transfer of the Crown Agents to an independent foundation. Pending parliamentary approval of the new provision for certain aid and trade provision projects, urgent expenditure, estimated at £4,627,000, will be met by a repayable advance from the contingencies fund.

Zambia and Zimbabwe

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give figures for each of the last five years, including current expenditure plans, for balance of payments support for Zambia and Zimbabwe paid for from (a) the overseas aid budget and (b) any other source.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 1 February 1995]: Expenditure from the overseas aid budgets is as follows:

Bilateral programme aid to Zambia and Zimbabwe 1989–90 to 1993–94 (£000)

	Zambia	Zimbabwe
1989–90	—	53
1990–91	30,000	[1]–6
1991–92	12,500	7,500
1992–93	27,500	22,500
1993–94	25,000	15,000

[1] Undisbursed programme aid repaid by Crown Agents.

During the current financial year, 1994–95, for Zambia we have already spent £12.5 million and plan to disburse a further £12.5 million shortly, and for Zimbabwe we plan to disburse £15 million programme aid subject to confirmation from the IMF board that the Government's economic reform programme is on track.

We do not have figures for other donors' balance of payments support for Zimbabwe.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, for each year since 1988, including current expenditure plans, expenditure on aid to (a) Zimbabwe and (b) Zambia in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms, broken down according to the principal objectives for British aid as stated in the British aid overseas aid annual review 1994.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 1 February 1995]: Tables containing the information have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of publications produced by his Department assessing the performance of British aid in (a) Zambia and (b) Zimbabwe.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 1 February 1995]: Recent published reports on British aid projects in Zambia and Zimbabwe are listed in ODA's catalogue of evaluation studies, copies of which are in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, for each of the last five years, total aid expenditure to (a) Zambia and (b) Zimbabwe in support of structural adjustment programmes; and if he will give these figures as a proportion of total aid expenditure to these countries.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 1 February 1995]: A table showing support for economic reform has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by his Department or agency.

Mr. Newton: No training course undertaken by staff of the Privy Council Office in the last 12 months has cost in excess of £5,000. I am not responsible for any agencies.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Visits

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has to visit Belfast, South.

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 26 January, Official Report, column 300, to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan), if he will list the representations he has received concerning the impact of reduced activity by the Countryside Council for Wales on the commitment arising from the biodiversity convention under the Rio treaty; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have now received three such representations—from the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, the Wales Wildlife and Countryside Link and a member of the public. My right hon. Friend has no plans to privatise the Countryside Council for Wales.

Cabinet Office Funding

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals there are to change the 1994–95 cash limit or running costs limit for the Cabinet Office: other service vote.

The Prime Minister: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the Cabinet Office: Other Services, class XIX, vote 1, will be increased by £1,500,000 from £44,833,000 to £46,333,000. At the same time the running costs limit will be increased by £1,000,000 from £43,214,000 to £44,214,000.

The increases reflect transfers from the Cabinet Office: Office of Public Service and Science, class XVIII, vote 1, of £500,000 for central services and £1,000,000 running costs coverage in respect of functions already transferred to class XIX, vote 1.

Both increases are offset by inter-departmental transfers and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by the Department or agency.

Mr. Dorrell: The breakdown of expenditure over the last 12 months by the Department of National Heritage, including its two executive agencies, Royal Parks and Historic Royal Palaces is as set out. The breakdown covers individual courses or series of courses where the total costs exceeds £5,000.

National Lottery

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the weekly revenue to the Football Trust and the Foundation for Sport and the Arts since 1 April 1994; what is his estimate of the national lottery's impact on the work of these two bodies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: Details of the weekly revenue to the Football Trust and the Foundation for Sport and the Arts since 1 April 1994 are shown in the table. It is for the foundation and the Football Trust to assess the extent of any impact that the national lottery may have on their operations. I understand that the foundation is considering how best to adjust its grant regime to complement the national lottery, in particular through a greater element of revenue funding. I welcome this.

[1] Funding received from the pools companies, representing a 2.5 per cent. reduction in pool betting duty.

[2] Funding received from the pools companies from spotting the ball and spot the ball competitions.

[3] Funding received from the pools companies, representing a further 2.5 per cent. RPBD; and from a 5p in the pound levy on pools coupons.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of (a) the revenue earned for the Exchequer to date by national lottery ticket sales, (b) the interest earned on the moneys lodged in the national lottery distribution fund prior to disbursement by the lottery distribution bodies and (c) the revenue accrued to the Exchequer from any of the funds under (b) above invested in gilt-edged securities.

Mr. Dorrell: Lottery duty collected by Customs and Excise for the period to the end of December 1994 was £44,348,381. Interest earned to date by the national lottery distribution fund through investment of the proceeds of the lottery, and which accrues to the good causes, totals £661,699. No revenue accrues to the Exchequer from the investment of the NLDF in gilt-edged securities; all gains are for the benefit of the good causes.

Electricity Companies (Sponsorship)

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his estimate of the amount spent on sponsorship of arts, sporting and other local community events by (a) Northern Electric and (b) the other regional electricity companies.

Mr. Dorrell: Detailed information on the sponsorship activities of individual companies is not held by my Department.

Departmental Funding

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what changes he proposes to make to his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1994–95.

Mr. Dorrell: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

(i) The cash limit of class XI, vote 1, museums and galleries, will be increased by £4,226,000 from £223,122,000 to £227,348,000 to increase provision for the Government indemnity scheme by £200,000 and for assets accepted in lieu of tax by £4,160,000.

(ii) The cash limit for class XI, vote 3, libraries, will be increased by £6,500,000 from £139,303,000 to £145,803,000 to increase provision for British Library St. Pancras project.

(iii) The provision for class XI, vote 4, home broadcasting, will be increased by £8,438,000 from £1,826,205,000 to £1,834,643,000 to provide extra funds for the British Broadcasting Corporation of £10,107,000, additional provision for the Independent Television Commission to reimburse certain independent television companies who paid excess levy to the consolidated fund in 1992 of £330,000, and to meet certain reimbursement costs in respect of the overpayment of television broadcasting licence fees of £390,000.

(iv) The cash limit for class XI, vote 5, film, tourism, sport and broadcasting, will be increased by £3,122,000 from £129,653,000 to £132,775,000 to reflect the increased receipts in respect of tourism grant repayments of £250,000, the appropriation in aid of certain receipts from the Sports Council of £459,000, increased provision for the Broadcasting Standards Council and for broadcasting regulatory services of £1,244,000, and to provide provision for the commemorations to mark the 50th anniversary of the end of world war II of £3,000,000.

(v) The cash limit for class XI, vote 6, royal palaces, Historic Royal Palaces Agency, Royal Parks Agency, historic buildings, ancient monuments and national heritage, will be increased by £2,154,000 from £194,962,000 to £197,116,000. The increase is the net result of additional provision of £1,438,000 for urgent capital works and maintenance expenditure on certain historic buildings and £100,000 in the Royal Parks; and to cover the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England superannuation costs of £675,000.

(vi) The cash limit for class XI, vote 7, administration, has been increased by £283,000 from £21,600,000 to £21,883,000. This is required to provide for the transfer of functions of the conservation unit from the Department of the Environment to the Department of National Heritage. As a result, the Department's gross running cost limit will be increased by £281,000 from £27,928,000 to £28,209,000.

(vii) The cash limit for class XI, vote 8, Office of the National Lottery, has been increased by £500,000 from £2,500,000 to £3,000,000. This is required to meet the capital costs of setting up Oflot's new offices and as a result of firmer costs being produced for consultancy, professional and legal advice associated with the grant of licences. Consequently, the Departments running costs limit will be increased by £266,000 from £2,070,000 to £2,336,000. A sum equal to the net provision required will be paid from the national lottery distribution fund to the consolidated fund as extra receipts.

(viii) The increases will be offset by savings and charges to the reserve, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

EDUCATION

Private Schools

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Eduction how many and what percentage of the school-age population, aged five to 16 years, are being educated in private schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: In England in January 1994 there were 411,200 pupils aged five to 16 in independent schools. This represents 6.2 per cent. of pupils aged five to 16 in all schools.

Nursery Education

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many four-year-olds are in receipt of nursery education; and what percentage of the total number of children in that age group that constitutes.

Mr. Forth: In January 1994, 48,000 four-year-olds, who were also aged four at the previous 31 August in England were being taught in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools, representing 11 per cent. of the relevant age group. The number of pupils who reached age four during the autumn term is not collected centrally.

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what were the absenteeism rates for (a) her Department and (b) the Teachers' Pensions Agency in 1994.

Mr. Forth: Information about sickness absence rates for 1994 in the Department, including the Teachers' Pensions Agency, is not yet available.

Schools, Warwickshire

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the current number of children of statutory school age in Warwickshire schools other than grant-maintained schools; and what was it in 1990.

Mr. Robin Squire: In January 1994, 57,900 pupils aged five to 16 were being taught in primary, middle secondary and special schools maintained by Warwickshire local education authority. In January 1990, the corresponding figure was 60,100.

"The World at War"

Mr. Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will encourage all secondary schools in the public sector to show the Thames Television film "The World at War" every four years.

Mr. Forth: Decisions on the use of any particular television programme or other source material as a teaching aid in schools are a matter for individual schools and teachers. However, the Government have taken steps to ensure that pupils are taught about the second world war by ensuring that it remains a compulsory part of the history curriculum taught to pupils aged 11 to 14 in maintained schools in England and Wales. In addition, and in view of the importance of the forthcoming national commemorations of the end of the second world war, the Department has commissioned the production of educational packs for all primary and secondary schools on the ending of the second world war and the significance of VE and VJ days.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what information he has (a) on the capital borrowing allocation given to each local education authority, the bid submitted by each authority and the number of pupils in the area and (b) the same information for grant-maintained schools within each local education authority area.

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on local education authority capital bids for 1995–96 was given in the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) on 1 December 1994, Official Report, columns 955–58. Information on capital borrowing allocations for 1995–96 was given in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) on 20 December 1994, Official Report, columns 119–20. Information on numbers of pupils in maintained schools and grant-maintained schools by local authority area, as at January 1994, is attached.

The information requested on capital bids and allocations for grant-maintained schools are a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools. I have asked the chairman of the Funding Agency for Schools to write to the hon. Member with this information.

The numbers of pupils are a headcount of pupils of all ages on roll. Information on pupils is derived from returns made by the schools to the Department in January each year (annual schools census—form 7).

Does not include special schools.

Head Lice

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment she has made of the incidence of the problem of head lice in schools; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Neither the Department for Education nor the Department of Health, which leads in this subject, conducts surveys of the incidence of head lice in schools. There are limited benefits in holding such information centrally because the incidence fluctuates so quickly and widely. However, figures maintained by the pharmaceutical industry show that around 2.5 million units of head lice treatment are supplied through retail pharmacies each year.

The Government seek to combat this distressing problem through advice to teachers, children and parents as part of health promotion in schools.

Departmental Funding

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what changes she has to announce to cash limits and running costs on votes within her responsibility for 1994–95.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limits for class X, vote 1—schools, research and miscellaneous services—vote 2—higher and further education—and vote 6—Office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in England—will be amended. The changes are as set out:

Class and vote	Current cash limit £	Change £	Revised cash limit £
X.1	800,296,000	−12,500.000	787,796,000
X.2	5,672,793,000	+3,415,000	5,676,208,000
X.6	76,901,000	−12,500,000	64,401,000

The reduction in cash limits on class X, vote 1 and vote 6 are made as a contribution towards offsetting the increase of £117.5 million sought via a supplementary estimate for class X, vote 3—student awards, loans and compensation payments—which is not cash limited.

The opportunity is being taken to provide for the appropriation in aid to class X, vote 1 of additional receipts from the Welsh office, representing contributions to the Centre for Information on Language Teaching, and from OFSTED, representing their contribution to the costs of the third international maths and science study. There will be no increase in net provision on the vote as a result.

The increase of £3,415,000 on class X, vote 2 is to be made available to the Higher Education Funding Council for the costs of students attending diploma in social work courses and funding of probation training. The opportunity has also been taken to provide for the appropriation in aid of additional receipts from the scale of properties by the Royal College of Art to support increased capital expenditure by the Higher Education Funding Council for England. This increase will be offset by transfers of £2,946,000 from the Department of Health and £469,000 from the Home Office and increased receipts, and will not therefore add to the planned total for public expenditure.

The reduction to the cash limit on class X, vote 6 arises principally because fewer independent registered inspectors than expected put themselves forward to lead primary and special school inspections. A number of the inspections planned for 1994–95 have therefore been postponed.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Rwanda

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made by the United Nations towards achieving its target of human rights monitors in Rwanda.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 26 January, 79 human rights monitors were in Rwanda. The eventual target is 147. We expect more to be deployed shortly.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has had with representatives of the United Nations in regard to assisting the Rwandan authorities in bringing those responsible for human rights violations to justice;

(2) what discussions he has had with the United Nations regarding the establishment of an international criminal tribunal for Rwanda.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 30 January, Official Report, column 490.

Kenya

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Kenyan Government about events in Nakuru just before Christmas involving compulsory dispersal of victims of ethnic clashes;

(2) if he will seek a report from the United Nations Development Programme in Kenya about the forced closure of Maela camps, in Nakuru on 23 December, and place that report in the Library;

(3) if he will ask the high commission in Nairobi for a report on the forced closure of Maela camps on Friday 23 December, and the number of people removed and their destination; and if he will place that report in the Library.

Mr. Baldry: The UNDP has not published a report on the dispersal at Maela. However figures from them, confirmed by the British High Commission in Nairobi, indicate that up to 2,500 displaced people were moved from Maela, on or soon after 23 December 1994. Of these, some 1,200 were resettled on Agricultural Development Corporation land in the area; the rest were taken to locations in central province.

We have made clear to the Kenyan Government at high level our concerns about the way in which the dispersal was carried out. We support the joint Kenya Government-UNDP programme which is addressing the needs of displaced people in Kenya both financially and through the High Commission's participation in Nairobi in the National Committee for Displaced Persons. We are keen to see the programme continue in an orderly fashion.

European Council

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union.

Mr. Goodlad: The following meets are planned:

Human Rights

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has received from human rights organisations regarding human rights violations in Rwanda and Nigeria;

(2) what investigation he has made of human rights violations in Rwanda and Nigeria regarding (a) the welfare of refugees and (b) allegations of killings taken place.

Mr. Baldry: We have received many representations from human rights organisations, hon. Members and members of the public concerning human rights in Nigeria and Rwanda.

Britain fully supported the UN Commission of Experts' investigation into the atrocities committed in Rwanda last year and subsequently co-sponsored the resolution that established the International Criminal Tribunal which is now being set up in Rwanda and which aims to bring the organisers of the genocide to justice. We have also made it clear to the Rwandan authorities that we hold them responsible for the safety of returning refuges and internally displaced persons.

We are well aware of the recent reports of extra-judicial killings in Nigeria. The European Union has made efforts to establish the truth of the allegations, but the results have been inconclusive. We continue to watch the situation closely.

Departmental Funding

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further changes he proposes to make in his Department's diplomatic wing cash limits and running costs limits for 1994–95.

Mr. Goodlad: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for class II, vote 1, overseas representation, will be increased by a token amount of £1,000 from £688,207,000 to £688,208,000. Parliamentary authority will be sought for additional provision for higher than expected expenditure on running costs, other current expenditure and capital as a result of adverse overseas price expenditure and capital as a result of adverse overseas price movements; to take up capital provision of £13,940,000 under the end-year flexibility scheme, as announced by the then Chief Secretary of the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 729-34, and to reflect inter-departmental transfers totalling £239,000 net. These increases are offset by reduced running costs and by increased appropriations in aid.

The gross running costs limit on class II, vote 1 will be reduced by £12,715,000 from £512,892,000 to £500,177,000. This is a net decrease taking account of transfers between departments, adjustment for adverse overseas price movements and additional VAT receipts.

The cash limit for class II, vote 2, other external relations, will be increased by a token amount of £1,000 from £456,842,000 to £456,843,000. Parliamentary authority will be sought for additional expenditure in respect of certain international organisations and for adverse overseas price movements. The increase will be met by increased appropriations in aid and by provision from elsewhere in the vote.

The cash limit for class II, vote 4, the British Council, will be increased by £2,119,000 from £97,499,000 to £99,618,000 in respect of adverse overseas price movements. The increase will be met from the reserve.

All the increases will be offset by savings or charged to the reserve, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Primary School Pupils

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of pupils enrolled at each maintained primary school in the constituencies of Belfast, West and Belfast, North, in each of the past five years.

Mr. Ancram: Information requested is as set out:

Patients Charter

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost to public funds of the production, printing, distribution and advertising of the patients charter when launched in 1991; and how many copies were printed.

Mr. Moss: The total cost to public funds of the launch of the Northern Ireland charter for patients and clients in March 1992 was £85,328. This was made up of £17,900 for production, £49,318 for printing and £18,110 for distribution. There were no advertising costs. Some 17,000 copies of the full charter and 1 million copies of the summary guide were printed.

Super Dump, Magheramorne

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how objectors to the proposal for a super dump at Magheramorne, County Antrim former limestone quarry will be able to know that their response to the Blue Circle published planning application has been received at the Department of Environment Northern Ireland planning service if no acknowledgement is issued to each objector who writes to the Department of Environment, Northern Ireland.

Mr. Moss: All representations received will be acknowledged.

Fishing

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fishing boats over 10m there were at Portavogie harbour; how many persons were employed in the fishing industry in Portavogie in 1985; and what are the current figures.

Mr. Ancram: Information on the number of fishing boats at Portagovie harbour over 10m length in 1985 is not available but there were 62 vessels of 40ft and over in length at 31 December 1985. The comparable figure at 31 December 1994 was 68 vessels, six of which are to be taken out of the fleet under the decommissioning scheme. In February 1985 it was estimated there were 586 full-time and part-time persons employed at Portagovie in fish catching, processing and ancillary services. The comparable estimate in February 1994 was 454 persons.

Agricultural Land

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has showing the proportion of agricultural land which was tenanted in Northern Ireland for (a) 1965, (b) 1970, (c) 1980, (d) 1990 and (e) the latest available date.

Mr. Ancram: The requested information is not readily available. However, in general terms, tenancies do not feature to any meaningful extent as a basis of land tenure in Northern Ireland and the proportion of agricultural land involved in tenancies is therefore negligible.

TREASURY

Housing Benefit

12. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a 1 per cent. increase in interest rates increases Government expenditure on housing benefit.

Mr. Aitken: Interest rate changes do not affect expenditure on housing benefit which provides assistance towards rents.

Public Sector Debt

13. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current public sector debt and its forecast growth.

Mr. Aitken: Net public sector debt stood at 38.3 per cent. of GDP at end-March 1994. It is forecast to peak as a share of GDP at end-March 1996, and to decline thereafter.

Budget (Effects)

14. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of how much an individual on five times average earnings will gain from his last Budget.

Sir George Young: Tax measures taking effect over the next year are expected to cost the richest 20 per cent. of households an average of £3.90 a week compared to £2.30 a week averaged across all households. Pensioners, on average, will be no worse off. The effect for any particular individual will vary with their household composition and spending pattern.

Investment Levels

15. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the level of general and local government investment in 1997–98; and what it is currently, in real terms.

Mr. Aitken: General Government capital expenditure at 1993–94 prices is projected to be £15.2 billion in 1997–98 of which £5.9 billion is projected to be by local authorities. In the current year, we estimate the capital expenditure figure will be £16.8 billion of which local authorities will contribute £7.9 billion.

Private Finance Initiative

16. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on recent progress under the private finance initiative.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I announced in the Budget that we are on target to sign contracts in 1995 under the private finance initiative leading to £5 billion of capital investment. Since then, additional projects worth a further £1 billion have been identified and are being taken forward.

Vehicle Excise Duty

17. Mr. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the vehicle excise duty for lorries in the light of the discrepancy between revenue raised and total cost to public funds revealed by the Royal Commission on environmental pollution.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Vehicle excise duty for lorries is reviewed before each Budget.

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to reduce United Kingdom road tax in respect of international hauliers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer reviews vehicle excise duty before each Budget, taking account of a number of factors, including the competitive position of international hauliers. Vehicle excise duty for most lorry classes has been frozen in the past five budgets.

Public Limited Company Directors

18. Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the initiative of the Confederation of British Industry to investigate the structure within which the pay and conditions for public limited company directors is determined.

Mr. Aitken: I welcome the group set up under Sir Richard Greenbury to review this matter and look forward to their proposals. The CBI initiative gives positive proof of the private sector's willingness to respond positively to public concerns.

27. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the initiative of the Confederation of British Industry to investigate the structure within which the pay and conditions for public limited company directors is determined.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. member to the reply I gave the hon. member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) earlier today.

Single European Currency

19. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the EU will establish a single currency; and what assessment he has made of the benefits and disbenefits of United Kingdom participation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has made it clear he does not expect conditions to be right for any move to a single currency in 1997. Whether the United Kingdom would benefit from a later move to a single currency would depend a great deal on whether significant convergence had been achieved among the member states concerned. When and if the timing of any moves to stage 3 becomes clearer, the Government have ensured that United kingdom participation could not occur without the approval of a full Act of Parliament.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will undertake a compliance cost assessment with regard to the obligations likely to be imposed upon the United Kingdom's financial institutions in order to be prepared for the possible adoption of the single European currency; what discussions he, his Department, or the Bank of England have had on such obligations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: At the appropriate time, the Government will make an assessment of the costs and benefits of participating in a single currency, should this question arise. In carrying out their functions, both the Treasury and the Bank of England maintain a wide range of contacts with financial institutions. In this context, a number of them have raised the question of the implications for the United Kingdom financial sector and the wider United kingdom economy of a single European Currency.

Growth Rates

20. Mr. Mans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the growth rates over the past two years for each EC country; and if he will list them, with the least growth first.

Mr. Nelson: The UK achieved the highest growth rate of any major EU economy over the last two-years for which full year data are available. EU member countries' growth rates over the two-year period 1992 to 1993 were as set out:

	Percentage change real GDP 1992–93
Finland	–6.4
Sweden	–4.0
Spain	–0.7
Germany	–0.3
Belgium	0.1
Italy	0.1
France	0.5
Portugal	0.8
Greece	0.8
Austria	1.4
Netherlands	1.6
UK	1.6
Luxembourg	2.2
Denmark	2.7
Ireland	7.1

Monetary Conditions

21. Ms Eagle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the European Finance Ministers to discuss monetary conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: European Finance Ministers discuss monetary conditions as a matter of course in meetings of the Council of Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union—ECOFIN.

There is strong agreement that, to sustain the recovery, it will be necessary to maintain progress towards price stability. This commitment to sustaining low inflation depends to a large extent on the conduct of macroeconomic and structural policies.

Inward Investment

22. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence he has that the business taxation regime has encouraged inward investment into Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: A business takes a large number of factors into account when deciding on the location of international investment, and it is difficult to isolate the role of tax or any other factor. Nevertheless, the United Kingdom has the lowest rate of tax amongst the major industrial countries. This is one of the reasons why, in 1993, the UK attracted more than 40 per cent. of inward investment into the European Union from both the USA and Japan.

Non-aid Debt

23. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to write off non-aid debt from developing countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: The Government have sought agreement for their Trinidad terms proposals launched by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in 1990. In December 1994, the Paris Club group of official creditors agreed to implement these terms in full. These offer reductions in the stock of eligible debt at a benchmark of 67 per cent. to the poorest, most severely indebted countries on a case by case basis.

Demand

24. Sir David Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the level of total demand in the economy.

Mr. Aitken: Total final demand rose by 0.5 per cent. in the third quarter of 1994 to a level of 3.8 per cent. above its previous peak in the second quarter of 1990.

Trade Figures

25. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present trend in trade figures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The United Kingdom's recent trade performance has been much better than expected: latest figures show a current account surplus, the first since 1987; and exports growing at 13 per cent., more than double the rate for imports. Prospects remain excellent. The CBI reports export optimism for the year ahead at its highest level since 1973.

Job Creation

Mrs. Roe: To as the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the effect of the Budget on job creation.

Mr. Aitken: The Budget contained a package of measures, estimated to cost £700 million in a full year, to improve work incentives and reduce the cost to employers of taking on unemployed people. The Budget also underlined the Government's commitment to sound public finances and low inflation, which are necessary for a sustainable recovery and falling unemployment.

Fraud

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken or intends to take to enable the Inland Revenue to exchange information with the Department of Social Security and other agencies to assist in the detection of fraud; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The Government's determination to detect fraud is reflected in existing arrangements for the Inland Revenue to share information with other Government Departments relevant to specific risks. Under plans announced in the Budget, the Inland Revenue will be exchanging more information with Customs and Excise, but the effectiveness of the inland Revenue's own work is largely dependent on its ability to obtain information from taxpayers. This information will be given more freely if taxpayers are assured that it will be treated as confidential. The need to provide privacy is extremely important to the Inland Revenue because it encourages openness by taxpayers in providing the fullest information on which the Revenue can base assessments of tax.

Foreign Vehicles

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce a tax on foreign vehicles entering the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has no such plans.

Redundancy Terms

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will place a copy of the Treasury document, "Information on Outplacement Services and Redundancy Terms", in the Library;

(2) what are the redundancy terms for Treasury civil servants contained in the documents "Information on Outplacement Services and Redundancy Terms".

Mr. Nelson: Redundancy terms for Treasury civil servants are contained in the document "Information on Outplacement Services and Redundancy Terms". They apply, under the civil service compensation scheme formerly section 10 of the principal civil service pensions scheme, to permanent civil servants with more than one year's service. These terms operate throughout the civil service and are not unique to the Treasury. Details of the redundancy terms can be found in the civil service compensation scheme 1994 which was laid before Parliament on 20 December 1994.

I have arranged for a copy of the document "Information on Outplacement Services and Redundancy Terms" to be placed in the House Library.

EU Economic and Social Committee

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the annual cost of the United Kingdom contribution to the Economic and Social Committee of the European Union in the current year and over the past five years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Member states contributions are made in respect of the whole of the Community budget, and not to particular parts. On the assumption that our overall financing share, after abatement, applies equally to all parts of the budget then, as a matter of arithmetic, the United Kingdom's contributions to the Economic and Social Committee for 1995 and the previous five years are as set out:

Year	Economic and Social Committee annual cost £ million[1]	United Kingdom share of Community revenue (after abatement) Percentage[2]	Implied United Kingdom contributions to the ESC £ million
1990	31,838,027	15.0	4,775,704
1991	33,776,369	11.7	3,951,835
1992	37,881,157	12.5	4,735,145

Year	Economic and Social Committee annual cost £ million[1]	United Kingdom share of Community revenue (after abatement) Percentage[2]	Implied United Kingdom contributions to the ESC £ million
1993	43,554,261	12.1	5,270,066
1994[3]	57,835,872	11.6	6,708,961
1995[3]	57,412,830	12.7	7,291,429

[2] Calculated from the revenue tables for the adopted budgets for the years in question.
[3] Includes appropriations for the joint organisational structure with the Committee of the Regions.

Unearned Income

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total unearned income of the top 1 per cent. of tax payers for each year since 1990–91 divided into income from (a) shares and securities, (b) bank and interest-bearing accounts, (c) building societies accounts and deposits, (d) rents, (e) pensions and annuities and (f) other.

Sir George Young: Estimates for the top 1 per cent. of taxpayers are given in the table for 1991–92 and 1992–93, the latest year for which a breakdown of unearned income is available. Income from pensions is not included in the table as this is classified as earned rather than unearned.

£ billion

	Dividends	Bank and building society interest	Rents	Other unearned income
1991–92	3.6	1.9	0.5	1.8
1992–93	3.0	1.1	0.5	1.8

World Economic Forum

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals in regard to the financing of environmental protection and environmentally friendly manufacturing have been put forward by Her Majesty's Government to the world economic forum in Davos in Switzerland, which started on 26 January.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None.

Economic Growth

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average growth of the economy between the years February 1974 to 1979 and 1979 to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: Average growth in real GDP—gross domestic product at constant factor cost—between the years 1974 to 1979 is 2 per cent. Between 1979 and the present day, average growth in GDP is 1.9 per cent.

Public Bodies (Running Costs)

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Registry of Friendly Societies running costs limits in 1994–95.

Mr. Nelson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the running costs limit for class XVII, vote 10 will be increased by £158,000, from £8,365,000 to £8,523,000. The increase will be offset by additional appropriations in aid and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The increase in the running costs limit is made up of two components: first, to meet unexpected additional expenditure of £108,000 in legal costs resulting from the Lloyds/Cheltenham and Gloucester case; and second, to carry out an investigation in support of prudential supervision by the sector, at an estimated cost of £50,000.

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the National Investment and Loans Office cash and running costs limits in 1994–95.

Mr. Nelson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVII, vote 11 will be increased by £199,000 from £1,000 to £200,000. The additional provision is required to cover a shortfall in fees payable on loans to local authorities. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. The running costs limit will be reduced by £25,000 from £1,334,000 to £1,309,000.

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Central Statistical Office's cash and running costs limits in 1994–95.

Mr. Nelson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for class XVII, vote 13 will change from £48,002,000 to £48,062,000 and the running costs limit will decrease by £641,000 from £48,463,000 to £47,822,000.

These changes reflect a transfer of £60,000 from the Department of Employment, class V, vote 1, in respect of funding for the international passenger survey and the transfer of £701,000 to non-running costs. These changes do not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Ian Greer Associates

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions departmental officials met representatives of Ian Greer Associates (a) formally and (b) informally on 26 January to discuss matters relating to their clients' interests.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 31 January 1995]: To my knowledge there were no meetings, formal or informal, between Treasury officials and representatives of Ian Greer Associates on 26 January 1995.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Parkhurst Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who authorised the removal of the governor from his duties and prison staff from Her Majesty's prison, Parkhurst.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking who authorised the removal of the Governor from his duties and prison staff from Her Majesty's Prison, Parkhurst.

The decision that the Governor of Parkhurst should be moved from his duties at Parkhurst, for operational reasons, was taken by me and the Directors of Custody, Security and Personnel. I should make it clear that he was neither sacked nor suspended. He will be assisting the further inquiries which have now to take place into the escapes and will then take up a non-operational post in Prison Service Headquarters. Authorisation for the sending of any other staff closely involved in the events of 3 January on detached duty pending the further investigations (including the disciplinary investigation) and in their own interests was given in principle by me in conjunction with the Directors of Personnel and Custody.

I want to make it quite clear that these moves are entirely without prejudice to the disciplinary investigation, which will take place as soon as Sir John Learmont's assessment of security has been completed, or to any disciplinary proceedings which may follow the disciplinary investigation.

"Red Book of Captain Ramsey"

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the circumstances in which the "Red book of Captain Ramsey", mentioned in his answer of 29 March 1994, Official Report, column 614, was returned to private hands; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the entries in the "Red book of Captain Ramsey" made when he was imprisoned under regulation 18B.

Mr. Howard: No. Records do not show the movements of "Captain Ramsey's Red Book". I therefore cannot comment on its current whereabouts or how it reached its present owner. As the book is private property and is not held by the Government, the question of my placing copies of extracts in the Library does not arise.

Prisoners

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he or the Director of Prison Services has received to the effect that the testing of prisoners for cannabis use encourages the use of harder drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question enquiring about representations received to the effect that the testing of prisoners for cannabis use encourages the use of harder drugs. The Secretary of State has not received any specific representations; I have received one letter recently which touched on the issue.

We are aware that heavy users of cannabis may retain the drug in their bodies for much longer than light users of cannabis or users of harder drugs. This has been taken into account in the development of the drug testing policy within prisons and we are taking a number of precautions to ensure that prisoners are not encouraged to move from cannabis to harder drugs in the mistaken belief that they will more easily escape detection.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on (a) sentence planning for all sentenced prisoners and (b) custody plans for remand prisoners.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what progress has been made on extending sentence planning to all sentenced prisoners and custody plans for remand prisoners.

Sentence planning was introduced for longer term prisoners (serving 4 years or more) in October 1992 and for prisoners serving 12 months and over in November 1993. It is undertaken for all young offenders in Young Offender Institutions. In addition, some establishments have extended the process to prisoners serving under 12 months and remand prisoners.

An extensive review of all aspects of sentence planning is currently underway. Consideration will then be given to extending it formally to a wider group of prisoners, including the introduction of custody plans for remand prisoners.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were serving four years or more on (a) 30 June 1979, (b) 30 June 1984 and (c) 30 June 1989.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many prisoners were serving four years or more on (a) 30th June 1979, (b) 30th June 1984 and (c) 30th June 1989.

The following information is for prisoners with sentence lengths of over four years, including those serving life sentences.

Year	Number
1979	5,678
1984	6,191
1989	12,112

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what national studies his Department is undertaking into vulnerable prisoners.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what national studies are being undertaking into vulnerable prisoners.

The Prison Service is currently conducting a review of arrangements for the management of vulnerable prisoners. In addition, a research study commissioned to examine the effectiveness of integrated regimes between vulnerable and ordinary prisoners is in progress at Risley prison and other establishments.

Advertisements

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in his Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Howard: No advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals in the past five years which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in my Department.

Prison Population

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the prison population of the United Kingdom in 1991, 1992 and 1993; and what is the current figure.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Ellyn Llwyd, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question asking about the size of the prison population of the United Kingdom in 1991, 1992 and 1993; and about the current figure.

The available information is given in the attached table. The latest available figure for the prison population for the United Kingdom is 56,836. This uses figures for 27 January for England, Wales and Scotland and for the end of November from Northern Ireland.

Average population in custody[1] United Kingdom

Year	Average population
1991	52,532
1992	52,884
1993	52,136

[1] Includes prisoners held in police cells.

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the absenteeism rates for (a) the United Kingdom Passport Agency and (b) his Department in 1994.

Mr. Howard: I regret that information on sick absence for the Department as a whole in not yet available.

A special exercise by the United Kingdom Passport Agency has shown that the average number of working days lost through sick absence for the calendar year 1994 is 14.09 days. This figure is calculated by including non-working days which fall within the period of sick absence.

Licensed Premises

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licensed premises in each region have applied for children's certificates.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The changes to the Licensing Act 1964 which enable licensees to apply to the licensing justices for children's certificates came into effect on 3 January 1995. No information about the number of applications made is yet held centrally.

Asylum Division

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from what date the reorganisation of the asylum division, with separate allocations of staff to deal with incoming or existing cases, took effect.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: From July 1993.

Blakenhurst Prison

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the latest figure of the number of assaults on prisoners at Blakenhurst prison;

(2) what is the latest figure for the number of assaults on custody officers at Blakenhurst prison.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the number of assaults on prisoners and on custody officers at Blakenhurst prison.

The latest information is for assaults proved at adjudication during the calendar year 1994. Figures for 1993 were published in "Statistics of offences against prison discipline and punishments, England and Wales, 1993" (cm. 2664).

Provisional figures are that in 1994 there were 23 assaults on prisoners and 89 on staff (includes a number of assaults on others).

The current rate of assaults at Blakenhurst, relative to the size of the prisoner population, is comparable to the average of other local prisons.

Suicidal Prisoners

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing the chief inspector of prisons' recommendation of November 1994 in respect of monitoring of suicidal prisoners.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question on the progress on implementing the Chief Inspector of Prisons' recommendation of November 1994 on the monitoring of suicidal prisoners.

In his Annual Report for 1994, Judge Tumim commented that a better way of continuous monitoring of suicidal prisoners should be found.

Twenty four hour monitoring is carried out where it is considered appropriate in the clinical judgement of the medical officer. However, care has to be exercised to ensure that lack of privacy does not create a feeling of oppression which exacerbates suicidal feelings. In November 1994 an Instruction to Governors was issued which prescribed that 15 minute watches should only be used as a supplement to other supportive precautionary measures, such as cell sharing.

Probation Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) probation orders, (b) community service orders and (c) combination orders were held by the probation service in England and Wales on (i) 30 June 1992, (ii) 30 June 1993 and (iii) 30 June 1994.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information relating to 31 December is published annually in "Probation Statistics England and Wales"—table 1.3 of the 1993 issue—copies of which are in the Library. The table gives the information for 30 June; figures for 1994 are not yet available.

Persons supervised by the probation service, England and Wales

	30 June 1992	30 June 1993
Probation orders	51,884	46,695
Community service orders	30,807	36,180
Combination orders	Nil[1]	5,072

[1] Introduced on 1 October 1992.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many posts he estimates were lost from the probation service in England and Wales during the financial years 1993–94 and 1994–95.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information recorded in probation services returns of staff establishment shows an increase of about 570 posts between 31 March 1993 and 30 June 1994, the latest date for which information is currently available.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation service officers or their equivalent were employed by the probation service in England and Wales in (a) 1970, (b) 1980, (c) 1990 and (d) 1993.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The number of probation services' officers—formerly ancillaries—employed by probation services in England and Wales since 1980 is as follows:

1990 : 1,918
1993 : 2,104

Information about 1970 is not readily available in the form requested.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff and at what levels were employed by the probation service in England and Wales on 30 June 1991, 30 June 1992, 30 June 1993 and 30 June 1994.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The information is given in the table.

Staff employed by probation services in England and Wales, in post at 30 June, full time or part time, by grade and type.

[2] Figures include sessional supervisors on community service schemes, staff employed in student training units and on miscellaneous functions.

Figures exclude hostel staff.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of court reports compiled per qualified probation officer in England and Wales in (a) 1992, (b) 1993 and (c) 1994.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The average number of reports completed per main grade probation officer was 52.5 in 1992 and 51.1 in 1993—table 12.3 of "Probation Statistics, England and Wales 1993". The information for 1994 is not yet available. The figures for probation officers are on the basis of whole-time equivalents of established main grade probation officers on field work duties excluding temporary and trainee officers.

The Wolds Prison

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number and types of instances where the required level of service has not been provided or specific contract terms have not been met by Group 4 since the start of the contract to run The Wolds prison.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Group 4 and the Wolds prison.

There has been one default notice. This was issued as a result of the escape of a prisoner from hospital, early in 1994.

Departmental Reports

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the internal report and project on violence in prisons.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Prison Service project to reduce violence against staff.

The position on this project remains unchanged from that given in my letter of 20 December in reply to your earlier Question (Hansard 20 December, col 251), in which I indicated that there are no plans to publish the internal report which contains the preliminary results.

Prisons

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to limit use of private cash in prisons.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what plans there are to limit private cash in prisons.

The Secretary of State announced in the House on 19 December 1994 that a system under which prisoners would have to earn privileges would be introduced. At the same time, he stated that, as part of this new approach, the amount of private cash that prisoners are permitted to spend would be reduced. Detailed plans for the implementation of this policy are currently being finalised.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the progress which has been made in respect of improvements in co-operation between Prison Service establishments in close proximity to each other.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what assessment he has made of the progress in respect of improvements in co-operation between prison service establishments in close proximity to each other.

Community prison clustering arrangements are being developed in the Kent and East Anglia Areas; where co-ordinated regime provision and population management procedures are working satisfactorily. In addition, opportunities are being taken by other prisons in close proximity to share resources. Examples include the merger of Thorp Arch and Rudgate prisons and co-operation between Blakenhurst, Brockhill and Hewell Grange prisons.

Police (Overtime Payments)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the total and (b) the average overtime payments for police officers in each police force in England and Wales for each year since 1990.

Mr. Maclean: The table shows overtime costs for each police force in 1992–93 and 1993–94. Figures for earlier years are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The average overtime payment has been calculated by dividing the total cost of overtime for the force by its recorded police strength as at 31 March in the year in question.

Electric Shock Equipment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which companies he has issued with section 5 firearm licences for the storage, handling or development of electro-shock equipment since 1988.

Mr. Maclean: No company has been granted authority specifically to store, handle or develop electric shock weapons in the last three years. Information about the granting of authority for these purposes in earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

British Visitors Passports

Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British visitors passports were issued in each of the years 1992, 1993, and 1994.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The number of British visitors passports issued in each of the last three years was:

1992: 2,058,977

1993: 1,972,312

1994: 1,812,237

National Criminal Intelligence System

Mr. Byers: To ask the secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1994, Official Report, columns 552-53, on the cost of developing the computer for the national criminal intelligence services, how many police officers were trained to use the new computer system; what is the cost of this training; how many police forces now share computer facilities; and if there is a requirement that a police authority establishing its own computer facilities must ensure that it is compatible with computers operated by other police authorities.

Mr. Maclean: As the integrated national criminal intelligence system did not proceed beyond the design stage, no police officers were trained to use the system. All police forces share some of their computer facilities; for example, through their use of the police national computer. The national strategy for police information systems, which was launched by my right hon. and learned Friend in November 1994 sets out arrangements for ensuring compatibility and interoperability between computers operated by different police forces.

Speeding

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of persons prosecuted for speeding offences last year and the year before was male.

Mr. Maclean: The readily available information relates to the percentage of findings of guilt for speeding offences which had been committed by males and was 92 per cent. in 1993.

Figures for 1994 are not yet available.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to enable the Metropolitan police to create a financial reserve.

Mr. Howard: I have arranged to make available to the Metropolitan police £20 million to help create a financial reserve. This sum represents the total value of savings the force has said that it expects to make against the cash limit for 1994–95. The reserve will be available for use in subsequent years outside the Metropolitan police non-voted cash limit and I am reducing the 1994–95 cash limit by £20,000,000 from £1,616,511,000 to £1,596,511,000 accordingly. The relevant sum of police current grant will be paid as a special grant under section 1 of the Police Act 1909.

This new flexibility is, I know, welcomed by the commissioner and the receiver.

Criminal Justice Act 1993

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of state for the Home Department, when he expects to implement the remaining confiscation provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 1993.

Mr. Howard: The Drug Trafficking Act 1994, which enters into force tomorrow, implements and consolidates the following drug trafficking confiscation provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 1993: sections 7 to 15, 24(1) to (11), section 25 and consequential amendments in schedule 5. These include new powers to obtain a revaluation of the defendant's proceeds of drug trafficking within six years of conviction and to confiscate the proceeds of drug traffickers who abscond or who die after conviction.

The following confiscation provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 1993 are also being brought into force tomorrow by means of Commencement Order No 8: sections 24(12) to (15), 27, 28 and 36 to 43, together with related provisions in schedules 5 and 6. The provisions mainly amend the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991, which provides for the confiscation of the proceeds of terrorist related activity in Northern Ireland.

With these measures the implementation of the Criminal Justice Act 1993, except part I of that Act, is complete. A further announcement about the implementation of part I will be made in due course.

Charity Commission Funding

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes he has made to the cash limits and running costs limits for the Charity Commission for 1994–95.

Mr. Howard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VIII, vote 4, Charity Commission, will be increased by £300,000 from £24,924,000 to £25,224,000 and the running costs limit by £200,000 from £23,254,000 to £23,454,000. The increases reflect a transfer of £300,000 from Property Holdings as a contribution towards the Charity Commission's removal and fitting out costs incurred during the relocation of its Liverpool office. The transfer represents part of an estate rationalisation scheme.

Departmental Funding

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for changes to the 1994–95 cash limits and running costs within his responsibilities.

Mr. Howard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VIII, vote 3, Home Office administration, immigration, probation and police support services, England and Wales, will be increased by £20,422,000 from £1,212,721,000 to £1,233,163,000. This includes the take-up of £13,650,000 running costs end year flexibility and £7,591,000 claim on the reserve. Transfers are also being made of £154,000 from the Department of National Heritage in respect of royal palace security work and £3,000 in respect of administration of additional housing costs allowance.

In consequence of these changes, the Home Office gross running cost limit will be increased by £13,653,000 from £1,706,176,000 to £1,719,829,000.

The amount required has been reduced by a diminution in provision for administration of justice of £5,000,000; and by transfers of voted provision of £487,000 to the Crown Prosecution Service in respect of forensic science service charges: and £469,000 to the Department for Education for additional places for probation students. Additional spending on ethnic minority grants and DTELS residual privatisation will be offset by increased appropriations in aid.

Prison Escapes

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many escapes occurred from prisons in the Greater London region in (a) 1979, (b) 1985 and (c) the last year for which figures are available;

(2) how many escapes occurred from prisons in (a) 1979, (b) 1985 and (c) the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answers 18 January 1995]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mrs. Barbara Roche, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the number of escapes from prisons generally and the number from the Greater London region in (a) 1979, (b) 1985 and (c) the last year for which figures are available.

The information you request is shown in the table below:

Year	Escapes from Prisons	Escapes from Greater London Prisons

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent during 1994 on recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies; and how many staff were recruited.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 27 January 1995]: Excluding the Prison Service, the Home Office spent £869,816 in 1994 on recruiting staff to the Department. This figure excludes salary costs. Some 850 staff were recruited. Figures for the Prison Service could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Stop and Search

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many stop and search incidents took place in each division of the Metropolitan police in each of the last three years; and if he will provide the ethnic breakdown of those stopped and searched.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 January 1995]: Figures are not available for 1992, 1993 or, at present, for the final quarter of 1994. The tables give the divisional breakdown for each area of the Metropolitan police district, by ethnic appearance, for the first three-quarters of 1994.

Crime Victims (Telephone Hotline)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the telephone hotline for crime victims was established; how many calls have been made to it; how many staff have been employed to operate the hotline; how many hours a day it is in operation; and what has been the total cost of operating the service since its inception.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 30 January 1995]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 2 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Victim's Helpline.

The Helpline started operation on 5 December 1994 and by 26 January had received 49 calls. Three staff are available at any one time, undertaking other duties when they are not taking calls. Initial start-up costs for staff training, telephone lines and equipment, and other items were £8,400. Subsequent running costs are estimated to be in the region of £6,000.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have made applications since the enactment of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993; how many of these applications have been determined; and how many applicants whose cases have been detained have (a) been granted refugee status, (b) been granted exceptional leave to remain and (c) been refused.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: During the period 1 August 1993 to 31 December 1994, 20,255 decisions were taken on 41,765 applications for asylum which were lodged during the same period. A further 1,935 of these applications were withdrawn.

As at 30 January 1995, 471 persons who had sought asylum and had their application for asylum refused, were detained. This figure includes people awaiting removal following refusal of the application and dismissal of any appeal and those whose appeal was still pending. Information on the number of persons who have had an initial decision on their claim for asylum and who had at some time in the application stage spent time in detention, is not available.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the cases unresolved at the date the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 came into force remain unresolved.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: At 31 December 1994—the latest date for which information is available—an estimated 35,700 asylum applications which were lodged prior to the implementation of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, 26 July 1993 were outstanding.

WALES

National Park Authorities

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advice he has given to local authorities and other bodies in Wales about the potential establishment of the national authorities provided for in the Environment Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have today issued advice to the local authorities in Wales about the national park authorities which I intend to establish for the three national parks in Wales should the Environment Bill receive Royal Assent. I have placed a copy of this advice in the Library of the House.

The advice also covers the interaction between the national park provisions in the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 and the Environment Bill, and the effect that local government reorganisation will have on the process of establishing Welsh national park authorities.

Further guidance will be issued once the Environment Bill is enacted and comments are being sought from the local authorities and other bodies in the interim.

The national park authorities in Wales will operate with the same purpose and duties, and with the same relationship towards their constituent local authorities as those in England.

Health Services (Resources)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has now reached decisions about the allocation of resources for hospital, community and family health and related services for Wales for 1995–96.

Mr. Redwood: I announced on 14 December, an additional £114 million for the national health service in Wales for 1995–96. This brings total NHS spending to £2,191 million. Within this sum I now propose to allocate £1,620 million to hospital and community health services and the cash limited element of the family health services in Wales. This amount will be distributed as follows: health authorities will receive £1,364.7 million for revenue purposes, an increase of £69.3 million or 5.3 per cent. over 1994–95 plans. They will also receive £118.7 million for capital investment.

£69.5 million is due to be invested in education and training for NHS staff. Family health services authorities will receive £12.6 million to meet their support costs and £50.8 million for general medical service practice costs. A further £3.6 million will be provided as contributions toward FHSA-related services; most notably as contributions toward the running cost of England and Wales bodies and centrally administered services.

In addition, authorities and trusts will be expected to generate efficiency savings of at least 3 per cent. This amounts to some £49 million including £3.25 million savings in management costs. These savings, together with the £82 million cash increase, will be available to meet inflationary and other pressures and enable further investment to be made in patient care.

Details of the allocations to health authorities and family health authorities and the provisional external financing limits for NHS trusts is contained in a statement which has been placed today in the Library of the House.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits for his Department for the current financial year.

Mr. Redwood: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit on class XV, vote 2 will be reduced by £8,000,000 from £153,581,000 to £145,581,000; the cash limit on class XV, vote 4 will be increased by £6,810,000 from £570,153,000 to £576,963,000, the cash limit on class XV, vote 8 will be reduced by £7,230,000 from £1,511,411,000 to £1,504,211,000; and the cash limit on class XV, vote 10 will be reduced by £1,000,000 from £2,214,412,000 to £2,213,412,000.

The decrease on the cash limit for vote 2 results mainly from lower than expected expenditure on agricultural and environmental schemes and slippage on arterial drainage, flood and coast protection grant schemes. The increase in the cash limit for vote 4 will provide for an additional £4,500,000 for the Higher Education Funding Council for equipment and building maintenance, £2,000,000 for equipment to expand the modern apprenticeship scheme and £310,000 for the enterprise initiative consultancy scheme transferred from class IV, vote 1.

The net decrease in the cash limit for vote 8 allows mainly for an additional £2,500,000 for improvements to the community dental service and a transfer of £9,757,000 of provision to class XV, vote 7 in respect of a revised estimate of drug expenditure for GP fundholders. This transfer comprises part of a spring supplementary estimate for class XV, vote 7 of £23,051,000.

The reduction of £1,000,000 in the cash limit for vote 10 results mainly from lower than expected unit costs at the Valuation Office Agency.

None of the proposed changes will add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Educational Funding Councils

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, if she proposes to make additional resources available this year to the educational funding councils.

Mr. Redwood: Yes. I have announced today that, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, I will be making £4.5 million available to the Higher Education Funding Council. Because of underspendings elsewhere, I am also able to allocate a further £3.5 million to the funding councils.

I have decided to provide an extra £5.5 million in total to the Higher Education Funding Council and an extra £2.5 million to the Further Education Funding Council.

The £5.5 million for the higher education sector will be made available for information technology developments, for facilities to support students with special needs and for projects to increase efficiency in estate management.

The additional £2.5 million for the Further Education Funding Council is in addition to £4.5 million extra funds made available earlier in the year and will be used to assist colleges in meeting equipment needs to cater for the growing number of students and new educational initiatives.

Forestry

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many stands of woodland in Wales under the control of Forest Enterprise are currently offered for sale.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Thirty.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many disposals of woodlands were made by Forest Enterprise in Wales in 1992, 1993 and 1994.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Forestry Commission sold 55 woodlands in 1992, 79 in 1993, and 85 in 1994.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hectares of wooded land under the control of the Forestry Commission and Forest Enterprise there are in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: At 31 March 1994, the Forestry Commission's Forest Enterprise managed 124,931 hectares of woodland in Wales.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many access agreements have been completed by Forest Enterprise and the Forestry Commission in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Twenty-three.

Agriculture

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current number of agricultural holdings in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is estimated that there are currently 36,600 holdings in Wales. This total includes an estimate of 6,800 very small holdings derived from the 1989 census of minor holdings.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total acreage of agricultural land in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The total area of agricultural land at 1 June 1994, the latest date for which information is available was 1,689,000 hectares. This total was derived from the 1994 June agricultural census and includes estimates for very small holdings from the 1989 census of minor holdings. Also included are estimates for areas of common rough grazing which are not collected in these two censuses.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many agricultural holdings there were in Wales in 1990.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There were an estimated 36,500 holdings in Wales at 1 June 1990. This total includes an estimated 6,800 very small holdings derived from the 1989 census of minor holdings.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has showing the proportion of agricultural land which was tenanted in Wales for (a) 1965, (b) 1970, (c) 1980, (d) 1990 and (e) the latest available date.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The proportion of land on holdings that is rented by their occupiers has been collected in the June agricultural census since 1969. The following table shows the available information.

Proportion of rented agricultural land in Wales[1]

Year	Percentage
1970	38.3
1980	29.8
1990	24.0
1994	22.9

Note:
[1] Estimates for minor holdings are included except for 1970.

Common Land

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hectares of registered common land there are currently in Wales.

Mr. Gwilyn Jones: The latest information available is that published by the Countryside Commission in 1989 which was obtained from the registers of common land held by local authorities. The total for Wales was estimated to be 185,300 hectares.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the GDP in Wales expressed as a percentage of the United Kingdom average figure in each year from 1990 to 1993.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is shown in the following table:

GDP per head in Wales as a percentage of United Kingdom GDP per head—at factor cost, current prices

Year	Percentage
1990	84.6
1991	85.0
1992	83.4
1993[1]	84.7

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current GDP in Wales expressed as a percentage of the average United Kingdom figure.

Mr. Redwood: The latest available data are for 1993, when GDP per head in Wales, at factor cost, was estimated to be 84.7 per cent. of the United Kingdom figure.

Wales Tourist Board

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he or other Ministers met representatives of the Wales tourist board in 1994.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Twice.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met with the Council of Welsh Districts to discuss the progress of local government reorganisation in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I met a delegation from the Council of Welsh Districts on 7 June last year to discuss progress with reorganisation.

Less Favoured Areas

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total acreage of land in Wales classed as less favoured areas.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The less favoured area classification of agricultural land applies to an estimated 1,365,900 hectares—81 per cent. of all agricultural land.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of the holdings in Wales in the less favoured areas as on 31 December 1994.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A farm holding is normally classed as being in the less favoured areas if more than half of its land is within the boundaries of the areas designed as being less favoured. At 31 December 1994 there were an estimated 23,400 such holdings in Wales. This total includes an estimate of 3,400 very small holdings derived from the 1989 census of minor holdings.

Police Authorities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State when a final announcement on the standard spending assessments for police authorities in Wales will be announced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I announced my decisions on police funding for 1995–96 on 30 January, Official Report, column 533. The House will have the opportunity shortly to debate my decisions.

Public Bodies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current number of non-departmental public bodies operating in Wales; and what is their combined annual budget.

Mr. Redwood: Details of the Welsh Office's executive and advisory non-departmental public bodies will be included in "Public Bodies 1994", to be published in the next few days. Total expenditure in 1994–95 is expected to be £948.1 million.

Smallholdings

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many council-owned rented smallholdings there are in each of the existing Welsh counties.

Mr. Redwood: At 31 March 1994, the numbers of county council smallholdings rented or available for rent in each of the existing Welsh counties were as follows:

	Number
Clwyd	154
Dyfed	163
Gwent	92
Gwynedd	178
Mid Glamorgan	4
Powys	219
West Glamorgan	2
South Glamorgan	35

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the principal elements of the debenture held against each of the training and enterprise councils at the beginning of each financial year.

Mr. Redwood: The same debenture arrangements were agreed with all TECs when they were first set up. The debenture protects the Department against any debts it is owned by a TEC by providing a charge over all of the TEC's assets. A copy will be available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the procedure and criteria for his Department's approval of training and enterprise council projects for spending surpluses earned on training contracts with his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Training and enterprise councils are required to give details of their proposals for the utilisation of surpluses in their business plans which are submitted to the Welsh office each year. TEC business plans are approved as part of the process by which annual contracts are agreed with TECs. Separate approval is required for spend of surplus on projects not identified in the business plan.

TEC proposals for utilising surpluses are assessed against the following criteria as set out in the TEC operating agreement.

The proposals must be:

(i) within the terms of the TEC's memorandum and articles of association;

(ii) consistent with the terms of the operating agreement;

(iii) not in conflict with current Government policy;

(iv) financially prudent and take account of independent professional advice where appropriate;

(v) practical and represent good value for money.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many expenditure projects have been submitted from each of the training and enterprise councils; if he will give details of the main projects awaiting his approval; and how long each project has been awaiting his approval.

Mr. Redwood: TEC proposals for expenditure across the whole range of training, education and enterprise activities are set out in the annual business plan which is integral to the contracting process with the Welsh Office. This contractual relationship is commercial in confidence.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what league tables he has set up to evaluate the relative effectiveness of the training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: A table of inter-TEC performance comparisons covering all TECs in England and Wales was published on 25 August 1994. A copy is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the aggregate level of surpluses of the Welsh training and enterprise councils at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Redwood: The latest information on the aggregate level of surpluses of training and enterprise councils in Wales is contained in the appropriation accounts for 1993–94, volume 11, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Schools

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the average school rolls in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each local education authority in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: The average size of LEA and grant-maintained primary and secondary schools, in terms of number of pupils, in each local education area in Wales as at January 1994 is given in the following table.

	Primary schools	Secondary schools
Clwyd	167	836
Dyfed	103	793
Gwent	214	909
Gwynedd	105	666
Mid Glamorgan	189	919
Powys	99	610
South Glamorgan	257	1,052
West Glamorgan	231	884

Business Links

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of his proposed expenditure on (a) telecommunications and data links and (b) other items on the proposed new business links organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have approved expenditure of £1 million in 1994–95 and £0.5 million is potentially available in 1995–96 as start-up finance for the new arrangements. It supports the provision of information and new training and communications facilities.

In addition, European regional development fund resources are available in 1995–96 to pump prime the business development consortia in both industrial south wales and rural Wales.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the business links organisations to provide a one-stop shop service for small and medium-sized enterprises that he proposes; and what consultations he has had with the chairmen of the training and enterprise councils concerning their participation.

Mr. Redwood: In June 1994, my "Prospectus for Improving Business and Enterprise Support Services in Wales" invited local authorities, training and enterprise councils and other local partners to put forward proposals for improving the co-ordination of business support services in Wales. The prospectus set out general guidelines. All seven training and enterprise councils were part of the eight successful consortia bids which I approved last month.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by his Department or agency.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the headings under which the Child Support Agency returns data each month to Ministers on the operations of the agency.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 2 February 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the headings under which the Child Support Agency returns data to Ministers.

The six headings under which the Agency reports monthly performance to Ministers are as follows; Targets; Maintenance Assessment; Operational Accounting; Reviews and Appeals; Customer Service and Quality; Recovery Plan Implementation and Other Issues.

I hope that this is of help.

Income Support (Housing Costs)

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, columns 82–83, when he expects to be able to publish figures for 1994 on the assistance towards mortgage interest and rents to recipients of income support.

Mr. Roger Evans: Information on local authority tenants and private and housing association tenants for 1994 will be available when the housing management information statistics are published in late August or early September. Information on income support mortgage interest recipients is available from the February 1994 quarterly statistical inquiry and is set out in the table. We expect information for May 1994 to be available in March.

	February 1994
Number of Income Support recipients with mortgage interest included in the assessment	548,000
Average weekly cost	£37.98
Implied annual cost	£1,082 million

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand, average amount to the nearest penny and annual expenditure to the nearest million.
2. The implied annual expenditure has been calculated from the average weekly amount at the time of the enquiry.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of individuals who may not be able to obtain insurance to cover the payment of their mortgages in the event of becoming unemployed and income support no longer being available.

Mr. Roger Evans: No such estimate has been made. We expect the proposals for income support mortgage interest will stimulate the insurance market and more comprehensive cover will develop. The Association of British Insurers has said that there is no reason why anyone meeting the criteria to obtain a mortgage should be refused insurance. We recognise that in some circumstances insurance may not be available. For this reason, pensioners will be protected under the new scheme. We shall be considering the position of other groups during the consultation period.

Advertising

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on which occasions in the last five years his Department has placed newspaper advertisements arising from Government Bills from his Department (a) before proceedings in Standing Committee on the Bills have begun and (b) on the publication of a White Paper relating to the Bill.

Mr. Hague: In the past five years, this Department has placed press advertisements on three occasions on the publication of a White Paper relating to a Bill.

"Security, Equality and Choice: the future for pensions"—July 1994;

"Ending Discrimination Against Disabled People"—January 1995;

"Improving Child Support"—January 1995.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspapers or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in his Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Hague: The office of Minister for Social Security and Disabled People has a Government-wide remit and as such all advertisements relating to this area are described as issued on behalf of the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People. These campaigns are:

Everyone needs access for a better living environment (Enable) March 1994;

Government measures aimed at tackling discrimination against disabled people, July 1994;

You and Disability, December 1994; and

Ending discrimination against disabled people, January 1995.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what factors were taken into account in deciding to place the advertisement, "Ending discrimination against disabled people", in The Guardian newspaper on 25 January, and that on child support in The Daily Telegraph on the same date.

Mr. Hague: As part of a series of insertions in a variety of publications between 18 and 26 January 1995, The Guardian was selected because of the society supplement on that day. Other insertions are as follows:

The Guardian, 18 and 25 January 1995
The Independent, 19 and 26 January 1995
Community Care w/c 23 January 1995
Care Weekly w/c 23 January 1995

The child support advertisement appeared in The Daily Telegraph on that day as part of a series of inserts in a variety of national newspapers as follows:

The Independent, 24 January 1995
Daily Express
Daily Star
The Sun
The Daily Telegraph, 25 January 1995
Today, 26 January 1995
Belfast Telegraph
Daily Record, 27 January 1995
The Independent, 28 January 1995
The Sunday Telegraph, 29 January 1995
The Observer
The Independent on Sunday
The Mail on Sunday
News of the World
Sunday Mirror
The People

Advertisements are booked to achieve value for money and to reach appropriate audiences.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the cost of the advertising campaign entitled, "Ending discrimination against disabled people";

(2) in which newspapers, journals or periodicals the advertisement headed "Ending Discrimination against Disabled People" has appeared; and what are the future plans for using the advertisement.

Mr. Hague: The advertisement, "Ending discrimination against disabled people", has appeared in the following publications:

The Guardian 18 and 25 January 1995
The Independent 19 and 26 January 1995
Community Care w/c 23 January 1995
Care Weekly w/c 23 January 1995.

The cost of the advertising campaign was £16,581. There are no future plans for using this advertisement.

Benefits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each of the past 30 years (a) the number and percentage of unemployed who draw national insurance benefit only, (b) the number and percentage claiming unemployment benefit and income support, (c) the number and percentage claiming income support only, (d) the number and percentage claiming housing benefit only and (e) the number claiming no benefit.

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is set out in the table. Information relating to unemployed claimants claiming housing benefit is not kept.

[1] February figures are given: figures for May are not available due to industrial action.

[2] Figures not available due to industrial action.

1. Figures and percentages are as at second Thursday of May each year.
2. Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Percentages have been rounded to one decimal place.
4. Figures are based on a 100 per cent. count.
5. Component parts may not sum to totals due to rounding.
6. Income support replaced supplementary benefit in 1988.
7. Supplementary benefit replaced the national assistance scheme in 1966.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pension awards have been made by the War Pensions Agency to service personnel (a) who are claiming to suffer from gulf war syndrome and (b) who have claimed disablement as a result of being the subject of tests and studies at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down.

Mr. Arbuthnot: No awards have been made in respect of alleged Gulf war, or Desert Storm, syndrome, which is not recognised as a discrete medical condition. Eleven awards have been made in respect of ex-service personnel making such claims, but in all cases the awards were for recognised medical conditions.

The other information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Family Credit

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of family credit claimants currently employed in schools, who have lost or will lose benefit as a result of the ruling by Social Security commissioners in October 1994; what plans he has to monitor the situation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roger Evans: Precise information is not available but we estimate that there may be about 7,500 people who work in schools, or similar establishments, who have been affected by the commissioner's decision. Although these people may have lost eligibility for family credit, many have been able to claim income support. We have been monitoring the situation closely and intend to amend the regulations, to reverse the effects of the commissioner's decision, at the earliest opportunity, following consultation with the Social Security Advisory Committee and the local authorities associations.

Mucous Membrane Disease

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give details, including dates, duration and numbers attending, of all specialist training courses held since January 1994 on the industrial disease mucous membrane PD4 for experienced medical practitioners employed by the Benefits Agency Medical Services Section which has responsibility for Northumberland and Tyne and Wear.

Mr. Hague: All the doctors employed by the Benefits Agency medical services and the doctors who act as independent adjudicating medical practitioners assessing disablement benefit have had access to an up-to-date paper on prescribed disease D4—inflammation or ulceration of the mucous membrane of the upper respiratory passages or mouth produced by dust, liquid or vapour—prepared by a senior medical adviser of the Department of Social Security in January 1995.

In addition, two full-time medical advisers from the Northumberland and Tyne and Wear areas attended a one day international symposium on PD D4 on 20 June 1994.

Net Incomes

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much the real net incomes after housing costs of (a) the poorest 10 per cent. and (b) the richest 10 per cent. of householders with children have changed since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: Reliable estimates of the changes in the real net incomes for the top 10 per cent. and bottom 10 per cent. of householders with children are not available. The following table gives the information for the top 20 per cent. and bottom 20 per cent. The latest period for which information is available is 1991–92, that is the two calendar years combined.

Information is given both before and after housing costs.

The fall in income for the bottom 20 per cent. was due mainly to the decline in employment among couples with children and the increased in lone parenthood.

Percentage change in real incomes of top 20 per cent. and bottom 20 per cent. of families with children, 1979 to 1991–92 percentage change

	Quintile 1 bottom 20 per cent.	Quintile 5 top 20 per cent.
Before housing costs	(–2)	51
After housing costs	(–12)	49

Notes:

1. The figures relate to the top 20 per cent. and bottom 20 per cent. of individuals in families with children.
2. Percentage growth estimates are calculated from the median income of each quintile.
3. Estimates in brackets () are particularly uncertain; see Appendix 5 Of "Households Below Average Income 1979 to 1991–92"—a copy of which is in the Library—for details of the tests applied to estimates of changes in real incomes.

National Insurance

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the increase in employees' national insurance contributions since 1979.

Mr. Arbuthnot: In 1979, not contracted-out employees paid national insurance contributions at a flat rate of 6.5 per cent. of earnings. Currently, all employees pay an initial contribution of 2 per cent. on earnings up to the lower earnings limit of £57 a week and then at 10 per cent. on the balance of earnings up to the upper earnings limit of £430 a week. As a result, the percentage of earnings paid in contributions rises progressively as earnings increase; from 2 per cent. for those earning at the lower earnings limit to just under 9 per cent. for those earning at the upper earnings. limit. The present structure benefits the lower paid more. Employees earning up to about £130 a week pay less contributions now than they would have done if the flat 6.5 per cent. contribution rate and structure in force in 1979 still applied.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the budgets for departmental running costs for each of the past five years for which figures are available for (a) his Department, (b) Historic Scotland, (c) the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency, (d) the Scottish Fish Protection Agency, (e) the Scottish Office Pensions Agency, (f) the Student Awards Agency for Scotland, (g) Scottish Home and Health Department Prison Service, (h) the Scottish Courts Administration, (i) the General Register Office (Scotland), (j) Registers of Scotland and (k) the Scottish Records Office.

Mr. Lang: The information is set out in the table below.

Agencies came into being on various dates during this period. To give a consistent time series a full five-year run of figures has been prepared irrespective of when the agencies were created. The table shows outturn expenditure since information is not readily available over the full five-year period on a budget basis.

[1] On 5 April 1994 the Student Awards Agency for Scotland was established. Staff are counted in the Scottish Office core prior to that date.

Egg Market

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what percentage of the Scottish egg market is supplied by egg producers in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) the Republic of Ireland;

(2) what percentage of the Scottish egg market is supplied by Scottish egg producers;

(3) from which countries eggs are imported into Scotland; and what percentage of the Scottish egg market each country has.

Sir Hector Monro: There is no reliable information on the size of the Scottish egg market or the share of its supplies from different sources.

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisation engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by his Department or agency.

Mr. Lang: The list of courses paid for from the Department's central budget for developmental training is set out below. Information about agencies is not held centrally. Staff members taking part in the courses listed undertake a wide range of administrative and professional duties within the Department. The Department operates a system of evaluation which involves participants, line managers and training professionals and ranges from validation of the event itself to the effect of the training on the work of the Department.

Courses costing more than £5,000

Course	Cost	Aim
Effective Manager I	£17,273	To help course members to operate effectively as managers by making the best use of their staff resources. The course provides a comprehensive introduction to the manager's task and develops relevant awareness and skills.
Effective Manager II	£16,852	To improve course members' effectiveness as managers by helping them to meet new demands facing them by extending and enhancing their capabilities in areas selected according to individual needs.
Policy Programme II	£15,214	To enhance and develop policy-related skills building on a foundation of knowledge. By the end of the module students should be able to demonstrate written and oral policy skills in drafting, briefing and presenting. This is the second stage of the central Policy Programme and provides a body of skills essential to its completion.
Leadership Development for Managers	£17,719	To increase middle managers' understanding of their role as active leaders by expanding their knowledge of current thinking about leadership and practising the appropriate skills that will enable them to be more effective leaders.
EC Personal Development	£16,094	To enable participants to identify their strengths and preferences at work and to give an indication of competences and skills that need further development for their future career.
Introduction to Management for Senior Staff: Resource Management	£9,835	To develop a practical understanding and awareness of the essentials of resource management.
Policy Programme I (2 courses)	£29,563	To train managers for active involvement in policy work by examining the outline structure of central Government and the pressures and constraints on civil servants working within it. By the end of the module students should be able to describe the key elements of the government framework.

Note:
All these courses were provided by the Civil Service College.

Beaches

Mr. Malcolm Bruce : To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) beach rangers are working in Scotland and (b) beaches are patrolled by beach rangers; and what is the estimated size of coastline of the beaches patrolled.

Sir Hector Monro: District and islands councils are responsible for management of beaches in their control. Information on beach rangers is not collected centrally.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what community initiatives he has proposed to clean up Scotland's beaches.

Sir Hector Monro: Beach clean-ups are organised by district and islands councils, "Keep Scotland Beautiful" and other voluntary organisations. Local community groups are often involved in these projects.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many GP fundholding practices there are in (a) Fife and (b) North East Fife.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are currently four GP fundholding practices in Fife. In addition, one practice is preparing to commence operational fundholding from 1 April 1995. None of these practices is in North East Fife district.

Information Technology

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been allocated to the development of information technology in (a) criminal and (b) civil courts in Scotland; and what arrangements have been made for (i) judges, (ii) sheriffs and (iii) clerks of court who participate in information technology training courses.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1989, an investment programme at a level of approximately £1.1 million annually has been allocated to information technology provision in the supreme and sheriff courts. Initially, the investment was used primarily to produce a criminal operations system for the sheriff courts and is now being utilised mainly to develop a system to support the handling of civil business in the court of session and the sheriff courts, and to provide personal computers to members of the judiciary. Training is provided either by commercial organisations, under contract, or by the court service training centre, as appropriate.

Courtroom Assaults

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of assault by an accused have taken place in courtrooms in Scotland in the last 10 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Housing, Irvine

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provisions there were in the agreement reached between Irvine development corporation and Irvine housing association for the lease of development corporation properties for the eventual purchase of these properties by Irvine housing association; and how much money has been received by Irvine development corporation from Irvine housing association under this agreement.

Mr. Stewart: The leases between Irvine development corporation and Irvine housing association contain an option to purchase. No sales have been finalised to date.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the agreement was reached between Irvine development corporation and Irvine housing association for the lease by the association of the corporation's properties; and whether Scottish Office approval was sought and given for this agreement.

Mr. Stewart: The agreement was reached in July 1994. There was no requirement to seek approval from the Scottish Office.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of how the rent levels for tenants of Irvine development corporation compare with the rent levels of tenants of Irvine housing association living in Irvine development corporation tenancies.

Mr. Stewart: None. This is not a matter for my right hon. Friend.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 468, if he will make a statement giving further information about how the money spent by Irvine development corporation on the Irvine housing association has been spent.

Mr. Stewart: The expenditure by Irvine development corporation has met start-up costs of Irvine housing association. These have comprised consultancy fees, staffing and the fitting out of the association's offices.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 468, how much rental income Irvine housing association has collected on behalf of Irvine development corporation; and how much the Irvine housing association has recovered from Irvine development corporation to offset its management and maintenance costs.

Mr. Stewart: The total rents remitted by Irvine housing association were £94,300 as at 31 December 1994. The association has not yet incurred costs on management and maintenance expenditure.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the right to buy of the tenants occupying the Irvine development corporation properties leased to Irvine housing association has been altered by their current tenancy status.

Mr. Stewart: No tenanted stock has been leased by Irvine development corporation to Irvine housing association. There were therefore no tenancy agreements to be altered. The tenancy agreements offered by Irvine housing association are a matter for the association.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many vacant properties Irvine development corporation has let during each of the last five financial years.

Mr. Stewart: The information is shown in the table:

	Number
1989–90	418
1990–91	378
1991–92	404
1992–93	372
1993–94	311

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many residential properties Irvine development corporation expects to lease to Irvine housing association prior to the start of the process of balloting its tenants on the disposal of the housing stock.

Mr. Stewart: Approximately 300 houses.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which housing associations other than Irvine housing association have indicated an interest to Irvine development corporation in bidding for its properties prior to the corporation's wind-up.

Mr. Stewart: Irvine development corporation will shortly be seeking expressions of interest.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what involvement he will have in making the decision on the possible purchase of the properties currently leased by Irvine housing association from Irvine development corporation.

Mr. Stewart: In terms of the guidance issued by the Scottish Office to the development corporations for the disposal of housing, my right hon. Friend will be asked to approve the sale only if the corporation proposes to accept a price below the valuation of the district valuer.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Irvine housing association offered to purchase housing stock from Irvine development corporation; and when he expects Irvine development corporation to make a decision on this offer.

Mr. Stewart: The offer to purchase was received by Irvine development corporation on 12 January 1995. The timing of the corporation's decision on it is a matter for the corporation.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 468, which of the 183 Irvine development corporation properties leased by Irvine housing association are not the subject of a purchase offer by Irvine housing association to Irvine development corporation.

Mr. Stewart: The 23 houses leased to Irvine housing association after the date on which the district valuer was instructed to value the 160 houses currently under offer are not currently the subject of a purchase offer. Irvine housing association is expected to include the 23 houses in a future bid for Irvine development corporation stock.

Head Lice

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the incidence of the problem of head lice in Scottish schools; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not collected centrally.

Housing Associations

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many residential properties belonging to each of Scotland's development corporations have been transferred to housing associations; if he will name the bodies to which these properties have been transferred; what was the number of properties involved in each case; and if he will make a statement on the nature of the agreement which exists in each case.

Mr. Stewart: The information as at 31 January is set out in the table:

Development corporation	Housing association	Number of properties transferred
Glenrothes	Kingdom	234
	Link	30
	Collydean	190
East Kilbride	Loretto	20
	Link	60
	East Kilbride and District	130
Cumbernauld	Bield	64
	Link	163
	West of Scotland	136
	Gap	57
	YWCA	23
Livingston	Almond	71
	Castle Rock (Livingston)	29
	Edinvar in Livingston	23
	Canmore	92

Information on the terms of the transfer agreements between the Corporations and the housing associations are not held centrally.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the housing associations on which Scottish Homes has spent money establishing or administering up until 31 December 1994; and how much each housing association received in payments.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked the chairman of Scottish Homes, Sir James Mellon, to write to the hon. Member with the relevant information.

Agricultural Land

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has showing the proportion of agricultural land which was tenanted in Scotland for (a) 1965, (b) 1970, (c) 1980, (d) 1990 and (e) the latest available date.

Sir Hector Monro: The answer is as set out in the table:

Percentage

1965	1970	1980	1990	1994
41	43	42	39	38

[1] Includes minor holdings.

Departmental Funding

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he intends to make to the cash limits and running costs provision for 1994–95 within his responsibility.

Mr. Lang: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, I intend to make changes to seven voted cash limits, one non-voted cash block, one non-voted cash limit and four running costs limits:

a. The cash limit for class XIV, vote 3, training programmes, roads and transport services and industrial support, Scotland, will be increased by £25,487,000 from £876,652,000 to £902,139,000. The increase includes a transfer of £400,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry to provide innovation and technology support to small and medium sized businesses: a transfer of £16,000 to class XIV, vote 9 in respect of additional revenue support grant for air passenger duty inter-island services: increased provision of £15,984,000 for roads and transport to meet revised expenditure plans; and increased provision of £9,103,000 transferred from Department of Transport for grants to Strathclyde passenger transport authority to meet the revised costs of supporting rail services resulting from the restructuring of the railways.

b. The cash limit for class XIV, vote 7, housing and environmental services, Scotland will be decreased by £1,018,000 from £433,798,000 to £432,780,000. The reduced cash limit takes account of a reduced requirement of £1,267,000 for housing support grant; and a decrease in provision of £2,000 in appropriations in aid. There is a £250,000 increase in Scottish Homes's grant in aid to assist housing associations in the acquisition of local authority and new town development corporation housing stock. This increase will be fully offset by a reduction in the SO/LA2 non-voted cash limit. Gross running cost provision for Historic Scotland will be increased by £396,000 from £14,704,000 to £15,100,000, which will be offset fully by a matching increase in appropriations in aid for the agency.

c. The cash limit for class XIV, vote 9, revenue support grants, etc, Scotland, will be decreased by £14,000 from £4,882,291,000 to £4,882,277,000. The decrease takes account of a reduced requirement of £100,000 for council tax valuation grant offset by a transfer of £70,000 from Department of Social Security for additional revenue support grant arising from the transfer of Scottish Homes property to the WESLO housing association: and a transfer of £16,000 from class XIV, vote 3 in respect of additional revenue support grant for air passenger duty inter-island services.

d. The cash limit for class XIV, vote 14, hospital, community health, family health (part) and other health services, Scotland will be decreased by £1,712,000 from £3,012,073,000 /to £3,010,361,000. The decrease takes account of a transfer of £1,500,000 to class XIV, vote 13, for changes in the requirements for GP practice fundholders: and a decrease of £212,000 as a result of an increase in the non-voted element of the NHS trusts' external financial limit. Overall, the NHS trusts' external financing limit has been increased by £6,714,000.

e. The cash limit for clause XIV, vote 21, Scottish Office administration, will be decreased by £75,000 from £168,734,000 to £168,659,000 with the provision being transferred to class XIV, vote 22.

f. The cash limit for class XIV, vote 22, Scottish Record Office, will be increased by £75,000 from £9,027,000 to £9,102,000. Within this total, the SRO running cost limit increases by £30,000 from £5,203,000 to £5,233,000 in order to give archive advice to local governments as a result of local government reorganisation. This increase will be offset fully by a matching increase in appropriations in aid. The additional capital provision is needed for the early installation of mobile shelving for the new purpose built repository.

g. The cash limit for class XIV, vote 23, General Register Office (Scotland), will be increased by £1,000 from £5,994,000 to £5,995,000. Within this total, the running cost limit for GRO(S) increases by £95,000 from £7,380,000 to £7,475,000 to offset unforseen delays attributed to the Census output programme. This increase will be mostly offset by excess income related to the census programme and as a result the appropriations in aid increase by £94,000.

h. The cash limit for class XIV, vote 24, the registers of Scotland, will be increased by £1,000 from £1,000 to £2,000. Within this total, running cost provision increases by £611,000 to allow for the compensation payments for the increased number of staff taking voluntary early retirement and also the costs associated with the advancement of the agency's information technology strategy. The increase will be met from additional fee income of £610,000.

i. The non-voted cash limit SO/LA2, which covers housing capital expenditure by local authorities and capital expenditure by new towns, will be reduced by £250,000 from £276,207,000 to £275,957,000. This will fully offset the increase in Scottish Homes's grant in aid in class XIV, vote 7.

j. The overall running cost limit for the Scottish Office together with its agencies, including the new student awards agency for Scotland, will be increased by £396,000 from £338,589,000 to £338,985,000.

k. The non-voted cash limit SO/ERDF which covers European regional development fund payments in Scotland will be decreased by £24,000,000 from £124,000,000 to £100,000,000. This reflects slower than expected claims for payment and delays in new programmes coming on stream. (The cash limit of £124,000,000 was incorrectly shown as £122,977,000 in "Supply Estimates 1994–95: Summary and Guide", printed in March 1994 by HM Treasury, although the figure was correct in the estimate itself).

The net increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many parliamentary answers on health issues have been refused on the grounds of disproportionate cost or information not being held centrally (a) as a total and (b) as a percentage of all health answers in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 1 February 1995]: The number of parliamentary questions on readily identifiable health issues in each of the last five years for which it was not possible to provide an answer because of disproportionate cost is as follows:

Session	Number	Percentage
1989–90	2	0.6
1990–91	4	1.1
1991–92	0	0
1992–93	2	0.6
1993–94	5	1.1

In addition, the following parliamentary questions were not given a full answer because the information requested was not held centrally:

Session	Number	Percentage
1989–90	12	3.6
1990–91	13	3.7
1991–92	5	4.3
1992–93	15	4.3
1993–94	35	7.6

Electric Shock Equipment

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made that guidelines relating to the manufacture, marketing and supply of (a) electro-shock weapons and (b) instruments of torture are being fully complied with; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what further steps he is taking to review the operation of guidelines relating to the manufacture, marketing and supply of (a) electro-shock weapons and (b) weapons of torture; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 January 1995]: Electric shock weapons are prohibited by section 5(1)(b) of the Firearms Act 1968, and cannot be possessed, manufactured or sold without the authority of the Secretary of State. The procedures for granting or refusing authority to possess prohibited weapons are kept under regular review.

It is not practicable to control trade in the wide range of goods which could be misused for the purposes of torture. The Government are willing to look at any tangible evidence of British companies knowingly involved in supplying materials and expertise for the purposes of repression.

British Rail

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in respect of his meeting with the chairman of British Rail on 24 January (a) the specific issues which were discussed, (b) the conclusions arrived at over each and (c) when he next plans to discuss these and other related matters with the chairman.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 January 1995]: My right hon. Friend and I discussed with the chairman of British Rail a wide range of topics relating to railway matters affecting Scotland. The meeting was private. Further contacts will be arranged as necessary.

Commercial Lobbying

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions in the last four months he or any of his Ministers have been approached by commercial lobbying organisations on behalf of their clients at informal or unofficial engagements.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 25 January 1995]: Ministers receive numerous representations about a wide variety of matters at informal or unofficial engagements but the information requested is not collected.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions in the last four months of which he has knowledge any civil servants in his Department have been approached by commercial lobbying organisations on behalf of their clients at informal or unofficial engagements.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 25 January 1995]: Officials may receive representations about a variety of matters at informal or unofficial engagements, but the information requested is not collected.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to meet Monklands district council to discuss matters of environmental concern including (a) the Dalmacoulter landfill project and (b) the dumping at Kilgarth tip; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 January 1995]: I have no plans to meet Monklands district council to discuss these matters.

The Dalmacoulter landfill gas project was one of eight such projects bidding for support under the Scottish renewables obligation. I understand that the Dalmacoulter bid was the most expensive of all the bids from landfill gas projects and was above the price ceiling recommended by the Director General of Electricity Supply for waste-to-energy projects.

I understand that the City of Glasgow district council is continuing to deposit waste at Kilgarth coup. Any environmental concerns at the site are for the two district councils to resolve.

HEALTH

Nurses

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses were employed by the NHS (a) in 1989 and (b) at present.

Mr. Sackville: Qualified and unqualified nursing and midwifery staff employed in the NHS, excluding agency staff, in England as at 30 September each year, whole-time equivalents[1].

Consultants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what average hours consultants on maximum part-time contracts work for the NHS and how many in the private sector;

(2) what is the definition of reasonable used in deciding how many half-days a consultant may take off for private practice if he or she is full-time or maximum part-time in the NHS.

Mr. Malone: National health service consultants are able to undertake private work as well as NHS work provided that it is not to the disadvantage of the NHS or NHS patients. Consultants employed on a whole-time basis may not earn more than 10 per cent. of their gross NHS earnings from private work. The provisions of the maximum part-time contract allow practitioners to carry out private practice without a specific limit and it is for the employer and the employee to agree the balance between NHS and private work. The actual number of hours spent on NHS work is for local agreement. Consultants on both forms of contract under national terms of service are expected to devote substantially the whole of their professional time to their NHS duties. Information is not available on the average number of hours such consultants work in the private sector.

Mental Illness

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many young people under the age of 14 years have been admitted to psychiatric hospitals with severe emotional problems in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Bowis: "Severe emotional problems" is not a term used in the collection of information.

Senior Citizens

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to implement the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1993 in full, with particular reference to senior citizens.

Mr. Bowis: The implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 was phased in between 1991 and 1993. The core provisions, including those for older people, have all been in force since 1 April 1993.

Childline

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proposals she has for increasing the amount of grant paid to the charity, Childline;

(2) what discussions she has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding value added tax paid by Childline.

Mr. Bowis: The overall level of tax reliefs for charities is worth over £1.4 billion a year. The full range of reliefs means that charities are relieved of about one third of their potential VAT bill. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had not discussions with my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer about value added tax. Amounts of funding under Section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act (1968) for 1995–96 will be made in due course.

In the past eight years, Childline has received start-up, core and project funding from this and other Government Departments and I am pleased to note that this has enabled it to attract other funding such that its total income last year was £3.9 million and that it has been able to build up assets of some £1.4 million.

Information

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she intends to publish a code on practice on access to health service information.

Mr. Malone: Yes. The code of practice of openness in the national health service will be published during 1995.

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) her Department and (b) her agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by the Department or agency.

Mr. Sackville: Decisions on training have been largely devolved to line management. The information the hon. member seeks is therefore not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I understand, however, that courses with per capita costs exceeding £5,000 would be very rare.

One agency sponsored a member of staff for a course where fees exceeded £5,000. The details requested are:

Title: Master of Business Administration

Cost: £6,000

Organisations: Henley Management College

Summary of responsibilities of staff member taking part: Project manager for health facilities engineering team, including strategic management and provision of professional advice.

Objectives: To enhance business management skills to enable the officer to take a more proactive and growing role in the success of the agency. To develop consultancy skills to work effectively in support of health service clients. To develop own major projects.

Course evaluation: An evaluation form is completed by the individual. This is used in a formal evaluation process to access the contribution of the course to overall business objectives and individual development needs. A subsequent review assesses long-term impact on individual and business performance.

Residential and Domiciliary Care

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the latest statistics available showing the proportion of (a) residential accommodation and (b) domiciliary services which are provided by the independent sector in each local authority area.

Mr. Bowis: The information requested on residential accommodation (excluding nursing homes) is published in table A1 of "Key indicators of local authority social services 1994", copies of which are available in the Library. Information on domiciliary services purchased by local authorities is included in table A3 of the same publication. More recent statistics on the number of residential accommodation places, excluding nursing homes at 31 March 1994 were published in table 1 of "Residential Accommodation in England 1994", Statistical Bulletin 1994/13, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local authority residential care home beds were provided under part III of the National Assistance Act 1948 by local authority in each of the last five years.

Mr. Bowis: The information requested for England for the period 1988 to 1994 and by local authority for 1994 was published in "Personal Social Services: Residential Accommodation in England 1994", Statistical Bulletin 1994/13. The readily available information by local authority for earlier years was published in "Residential Accommodation for Elderly and for Younger Physically Disabled People: All Residents in Local Authority, Voluntary and Private Homes Year Ending 31 March 1988 to Year Ending 31 March 1993 England", RA/88-93/2(H). Copies of both publications are available in the Library.

Royal Infirmary, Leicester

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the length of time the royal infirmary, Leicester takes to perform operations on women;

(2) if she will make a statement on the case of Yvonne Smith and others whose operations at the royal infirmary, Leicester were delayed;

(3) if she will issue guidelines to ensure that there are no delays in the performing of operations on women whose pregnancies have come to an end.

Mr. Sackville: Any delays experienced in these cases are regrettable.

Hospitals take such decisions on the basis of clinical need and these are matters for Leicester royal infirmary national health service trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Philip Hammersley, chairman of the trust, for details.

NHS Trusts (Termination Payments)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answers of 9 December 1994, Official Report, column 395, and 16 December, Official Report, columns 831–32, what were the reasons why severance payments did not conform to the guidance set out in TEL(94)3.

Mr. Malone: The national health service executive has requested additional information about certain payments to establish whether they conformed to guidelines in TEL(94)3. Until this additional information is received and analysed, the NHS executive cannot say whether the level of payment was or was not consistent with the recommended method of calculation.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 19 December, Official Report, columns 985–86, if she will update the table on termination payments made to chief executives and general and senior managers of trusts.

Mr. Malone: The table sets out the latest information about termination payments made since April 1994 which national health service trusts have notified to the NHS Executive, under the arrangements in TEL(94)3.

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Private Psychiatrists

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by district health authorities on private psychiatric services over the last five years by authority.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 1 July 1993, Official Report, column 616.

NHS Contracts

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of the agreement made with the chief executive of the NHS executive between 1986 and 1989 regarding his non-involvement in NHS contracts with IBM.

Mr. Sackville: The agreement between IBM and the Department of Health and Social Security dated 10 February 1986 formed the contractual basis of the secondment of Sir Leonard Peach as director of personnel, national health service management board. It sets out the detailed terms and conditions of his appointment. It would not be appropriate to place a copy in the Library.

The relevant extract from the agreement covering Sir Leonard Peach's non-involvement in NHS contracts with IBM reads:

> "The secondee will not undertake work in any way connected with procurement of products or selection of suppliers in any of IBM's spheres of operation. His work should not in any way relate to IBM or any of its competitors and he will be asked to sign a conflict of interest statement, a copy of which is attached to this contract.
> In addition he will absent himself from any discussions on the NHS Management Board or elsewhere, which might lead to DHSS letting a contract or commission to IBM. Also he is required to make a declaration to the Chairman of the NHS Board whenever IBM submits a tender to the DHSS or a Health Authority in England or obtains a contract PROVIDED that such declaration shall only be required in respect of major bids. These are defined as IBM System 370 architectured systems or volume purchase agreements for small systems. In particular, this definition excludes typewriters, personal computers, supplies, single small-system bids and all bids or sales by Agents or third parties."

I regret that it has not been possible in the time available to find a copy of the conflict of interest statement referred to in the first paragraph of this extract.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many operations have been cancelled at St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, because of bed shortages in the past two years;

(2) how many people were admitted to St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, in 1990–91, 1991–2, 1992–93 and 1993–94;

(3) how many patients were admitted to St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, and through what routes other than accident and emergency, in 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94.

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. Detailed information may be obtained by contacting Sir Derek Boorman, chairman of the Royal Hospitals NHS trust.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many nursing posts will be lost as a result of the closure of St. Bartholomew's hospital, London;

(2) what will happen to the specialist services currently provided on the St. Bartholomew's hospital site after its closure; and what will happen to existing nursing terms working on specialist wards at St. Bartholomew's hospital;

(3) how many extra beds will be added to (a) St. Thomas's hospital, London, (b) King's College hospital, London, (c) Royal London hospital, (d) Homerton hospital, London, (e) University College hospital, London and (f) Whittington hospital, London to accommodate the extra demand as a result of St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, closure;

(4) to which hospital patients will be referred once St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, has closed.

Mr. Malone: Detailed changes in the deployment of resources at the Royal Hospitals national health service trust and neighbouring hospitals are a matter for local providers and commissioning authorities, taking account of the outcome of the public consultation exercise currently being undertaken by East London and the City health authority.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much extra money is being invested in primary health care and community care to offset the effects of the closure of St. Bartholomew's hospital, London.

Mr. Malone: For 1993–94 and 1994–95, an extra £15 million is being invested in developing primary health care in the East London and the City health district.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people attended the accident and emergency department at St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, in 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94.

Mr. Malone: Figures are shown in the table.

A and E attendances at St. Bartholomew's Hospital by financial year

Year (April/March)	First attendances	Follow-up attendances	Total attendances
1990–91	37,139	5,185	42,324
1991–92	35,184	4,529	39,713
1992–93	31,187	2,740	33,927
1993–94	29,801	2,559	32,360

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to respond to the open letter sent to her on 26 January by the Islington Gazette about the future of St. Bartholomew's hospital and of health services generally for the people of Islington.

Mr. Malone: We have no record of receiving any such letter.

Hospitals, London

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average and mean rate of bed occupancy for (a) St. Thomas's hospital, London, (b) King's College hospital, London, (c) Royal London hospital, (d) Homerton hospital, London, (e) University College hospital, London and (f) Whittington hospital, London, in 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94; and what is the estimated increase in journey times for patients in the areas immediately surrounding St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, to travel to these hospitals.

Mr. Malone: Information on the average and mean rates of bed occupancy is not available centrally. Detailed information about individual trusts may be obtained by writing to the appropriate trust chairmen.

Studies have shown that St. Thomas hospital, King's College hospital, the Royal London hospital, Homerton hospital and University College hospital are all within 15 minutes driving time[1] of St. Bartholomew's hospital. The journey time to the Whittington is only slightly longer.

[1] Based on average traffic speed, Monday to Friday off-peak.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current bed capacity of (a) St. Thomas's hospital, London, (b) Kings College hospital, London, (c) Royal London hospital, (d) Homerton hospital, London, (e) University College hospital, London and (f) Whittington hospital, London.

Mr. Malone: The bed capacity of individual hospital sites within hospital trusts is not available centrally. Available information for hospital trusts is shown in the table:

Acute bed numbers in inner London trusts—average available beds 1993–94

Trust	Acute
Guys and St. Thomas's Hospital Trust[1]	1,054
King's Healthcare[2]	634
Royal Hospitals NHS Trust[3]	610
Homerton Hospital[4]	321
University College London Hospitals[5]	562
Whittington Hospital NHS Trust	420

[1] Includes Guy's hospital and St. Thomas's hospital.
[2] Includes King's College hospital and Dulwich hospital.
[3] Includes the Royal London hospital, St. Bartholomew's hospital and the London Chest hospital.
[4] Shadow Trust.
[5] Includes University College hospitals and the Central Middlesex hospital.

Acute beds includes:
General patients excluding elderly, younger physically disabled, neonatal cots not in maternity wards, terminally ill/palliative care. Mental illness and maternity beds are not included.

Fertility Treatment

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the policy of each health authority with regard to fertility treatment in general and in vitro fertility treatment in particular, including details of restrictions placed by age and the existence of children by the present or previous relationship.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. It is the responsibility of each individual health authority to determine the local availability of infertility services.

Waiting Times

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the average current waiting times in the accident and emergency departments in (a) St. Thomas's hospital, London, (b) King's College hospital, London, (c) Royal London hospital, (d) Homerton hospital, London, (e) University College hospital, London and (f) Whittington hospital, London.

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Hugh Fraser

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will direct the chief executive of the Lewisham hospital trust to reply to the inquiries of 29 November 1994, 20 December 1994 and 18 January from the hon. Member for Lewisham, West relating to the case of Mr. Hugh Fraser.

Mr. Sackville: I understand Lewisham Hospital national health service trust has now sent a full reply.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, whom she has appointed as the new chairman of the Committee for Monitoring Agreements on Tobacco Advertising and Sponsorship.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have recently appointed, in consultation with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for National Heritage, for Scotland and Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Sir Clive Whitmore GCB CVO to be the new chairman of the Committee for Monitoring Agreements on Tobacco Advertising and Sponsorship.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes she plans to make to the cash limits of her Department in 1994–95.

Mrs. Virginnia Bottomley: The cash limit for class XII, vote 1—hospital, community health, family health services, part, and related services, England—will be increased by £9,676,000—from £21,734,116,000 to £21,743,792,000. This allows for an increase of £11,287,000 to the external financing limits of national health service trusts—£25,887,000 in respect of 1993–94 external financing limit end-year flexibility carryforward less £14,600,000 financed from trusts own cash balances—partially offset by transfers of £1,457,000 to class XII, vote 3—Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England—for the work of the Health Education Authority; for part-time training posts for career registrars in the public health laboratory service and a grant towards the renovation of Tadworth Court hospital; £116,000 to class XIV, vote 18—Student awards, Scotland—for orthoptic clinical placements of Glasgow Caledonian university students; £11,000 to—Department of Health and Social Services, Northern Ireland—and £27,000 to class XV, vote 8—hospital, community health, family health services, part, and related services, Wales—for the national poisons information service.

The cash limit for class XII, vote 3—Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England—will be reduced by £1,369,000—from £1,591,256,000 to £1,589,887,000. This reduction allows for a transfer of £2,946,000 to class X, vote 2—higher and further education—for the conversion of social work training courses. The overall decrease is partially offset by a transfer of £1,457,000 from class XII, vote 1 as mentioned above and £120,000 from class XIV, vote 14—hospital, community health, part, and other health services, Scotland—for the work of the clinical standards advisory group.

The Department's gross running cost limit will be reduced by £5,655,000 from £257,853,000 to £252,198,000. This reflects a reallocation of £4,800,000 for capital works, £625,000 for the work of the Mental Health Act Commission and £230,000 for the national aids helpline.

All increases will either be offset by savings, increased receipts or transfers to or from other votes and will not therefore add to the planned total of pubic expenditure.

Overall the external financing limit for NHS trusts is increased by £42,190,000 from £588,264,000 to £630,454,000.

Intensive Care Units

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) intensive care units in London and (b) intensive care beds in total there were in each year since 1989.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 30 January 1995]: Information on the number of intensive care units is not available centrally. Information is provided in the table on the average daily number of available designated intensive therapy beds in London.

In addition to these services provided in units designated as intensive therapy units, intensive therapy can also be delivered in a variety of hospital departments, such as neonatal intensive care, coronary care units, accident and emergency departments, renal units and high dependency units.

1990–91: 459
1991–92: 458
1992–93: 480
1993–94: 501

Note:
For the years 1989–90 to 1992–93, Ashford hospital intensive care beds were included in Hounslow and Spelthorne DHA figures as follows: 1989–90, four beds; 1990–91, four beds, 1991–92 four beds, 1992–93, four beds. From 1993–94 Ashford hospital intensive care beds–two have been included in North West Surrey returns and are therefore no longer included in the London figure.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the EC law which prevents the banning of the export of calves for rearing in veal crates.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the legal opinion that he has received relating to the export of veal calves and other live animals for slaughter; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Browning: My right hon. Friend the Minister has consulted further on the legality under Community law of measures banning the export of calves, or imposing selective restrictions intended to ensure that they are reared in other member states under conditions corresponding to those applied here by virtue of the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994 (SI 1994/2126).

Consideration has been given to the best case that could be made in favour of such measures. However, the conclusion that emerges from the legal advice available to him is that such measures cannot be justified, for the following reasons:

there is already in existence a directive on welfare standards for calves which forms part of the Community legislation governing trade in calves and it is advised that the terms of that directive would preclude member states from introducing export restrictions;

Article 36 of the treaty can in some circumstances justify export restrictions, on the grounds of the protection of health and life of animals, which includes animal welfare. That article, however, is only available to member states where there is no Community legislation governing the particular area. But that is not the case here, given the directive on welfare standards; also it is very probable that measures banning or restricting the export of calves would constitute an unacceptable interference with the operation of the common agricultural policy, as it affects the market for beef and veal;

a total ban on all calf exports could not in any event be justified under article 36, because it would be deemed to be disproportionate;

in addition to the grave difficulties of justifying them legally, and the consequent high risk of their being struck down in court, selective restrictions would present severe practical problems of enforcement.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 71, what was the age of the cattle exported to (a) France, (b) the Netherlands, (c) Eire and (d) Northern Ireland for immediate slaughter.

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 30 January 1995]: I cannot add to my earlier replies as the information is not available. Exports to the other member states were restricted under EC rules to calves under six months of age. Cattle, including calves, to destinations in Northern Ireland would not have been subject to an age restriction.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the policy objectives of Her Majesty's Government for 1995 on the subject of transportation of live animals.

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 January 1995]: We shall continue to press for the further detailed Community measures—for example on feeding, watering and rest and on limits on journeys to slaughter—that we consider to be necessary to ensure effective Community-wide safeguards for the welfare of livestock in transit. In the meantime, we shall maintain our existing strict national measures which protect the welfare of livestock, including exported livestock, during transit and which we have recently tightened up. We shall supplement these measures with a code of practice, and will continue to scrutinise all new proposals to export livestock to ensure that only those which meet welfare requirements are allowed to proceed. On the related issue of veal crates on the continent, we shall press, in the Council of Ministers' review of the directive which permits the veal crate, for changes which bring an end to this system of production. It is encouraging that the Commission has agreed to my right hon. Friend's request to facilitate this review by bringing forward to this year its review report scheduled for 1997.

Meat Imports

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he is in a position to ban the import into the United Kingdom of pork and pork products which are not reared in conditions permitted here;

(2) if he is in a position to ban the import into the United Kingdom of veal and veal products which are not reared in conditions permitted here.

Mrs. Browning: It is not apparent that it would be feasible to identify the production methods used for the imported goods mentioned. In any case, I am advised that selective import restrictions of the type proposed would not be compatible with Community law.

New Zealand Flatworm

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are being taken by his Department to support research into and curb the New Zealand flatworm.

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is funding a study to review current knowledge of the New Zealand flatworm in the British Isles, to assess its effects. The results of this research are expected this spring, and will provide a basis on which to assess what further action may be appropriate.

Anglo-European Livestock Exporters Association

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Anglo-European Livestock Exporters Association.

Mrs. Browning: My ministerial colleagues and I have never met representatives of the Anglo-European Livestock Exporters Association. Nevertheless, officials maintain regular contacts with the association.

Salmon and Sea Trout

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food what initiatives his Department is pursuing to protect and enhance stocks of wild salmon and sea trout; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The National Rivers Authority is responsible, within the policy and legislative framework determined by my right hon. Friends the Minister, and the Secretary of State for Wales, for maintaining, improving and developing salmon and sea trout fisheries in England and Wales. It carries out a range of activities, including habitat restoration, restocking and enforcement of legislation designed to combat illegal fishing. Much of this work is funded by the Government through grant-in-aid. The authority has recently prepared a draft salmon management strategy which considers how salmon stocks might best be managed in the future. In addition, the Government also fund a significant programme of research on wild salmon and sea trout.

Dredging (Docking Shoal)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current situation as regards dredging off the Docking shoal; whether he has given permission to dredge in this area; and what other areas the National Rivers Authority has applied to dredge.

Mr. Jack: Licences for dredging of marine aggregates are issued by the Crown Estate. A Government view on each application is co-ordinated by the Department of the Environment.

The Ministry will in due course be providing its contribution to the Government view on an application from the NRA to dredge Docking shoal. The NRA has also applied to the Crown Estate for a licence to dredge an area known as Race bank.

Pesticides

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Health regarding the use and effects of pesticides and any other animal treatments on the animal food chain.

Mrs. Browning: My right hon. Friend the Minister and the Secretary of State for Health are among the Ministers responsible for the regulation of pesticides and regularly discuss such matters. An important part of the regulatory process is consideration of effects on the food chain.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to reduce the amount of pesticides and other chemicals being used in agriculture.

Mrs. Browning: The Government's policy is that pesticide usage should be the minimum necessary for effective pest control compatible with the protection of human health and the environment. This policy is pursued by a variety of means including a rigorous approvals policy, codes of practice for pesticide users and an extensive research and development programme.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food what plans he has to implement more stringent regulations on the use of chemical treatments.

Mrs. Browning: None. Ministers have sufficient powers to ensure the proper protection of health and to safeguard the environment.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what discussions he has had with other countries regarding legislation used in those countries to ban the use of toxins and pesticides;

(2) what proposals he has for legislation to be introduced in this country which will bring this country into line with other countries which have banned the use of pesticides, toxins and chemicals.

Mrs. Browning: The United Kingdom has a well-developed system for regulating pesticides which protects people and the environment while ensuring that those who need them have effective pesticides available. We can and do restrict or ban pesticides where they cannot be used safely. Our system is widely respected abroad and the new Community regime closely resembles it.

Tenanted Land

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has showing the proportion of agricultural land which was tenanted in England for (a) 1965, (b) 1970, (c) 1975, (d) 1980, (e) 1985, (f) 1990 and (g) the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The proportion of agricultural land which was rented as recorded in the June agricultural and horticultural census is as follows:

	Percentage
1965	not collected[1]
1970	48.3
1975	47.8
1980	43.4
1985	40.4
1990	37.0
1994	35.6

Note:
[1] World Census of Agriculture (FAO) records 50.9 per cent. in 1960 for England and Wales combined.

The continuing decline in the proportion of let land is one reason why the main industry organisations all agree that the reforms in our Agricultural Tenancies Bill are badly needed.

Agricultural Wages Board

Ms Harman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people in Islwyn are covered by the Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales; and what percentage this is of the work force in employment.

Mr. Jack: There were 31 hired workers on agricultural holdings in the district of Islwyn recorded in the June census of 1993. This represents 0.1 per cent. of the work force in employment in that district.

Departmental Cash Limits

Dr. Spink: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes are proposed in his Department's cash limits for 1994–95.

Mr. Waldegrave: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class III, vote 4—Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food: agricultural, food and fishing services—will be reduced by £10,045,000 from £372,630,000 to £362,585,000. Within this limit, the estimated provision will be reduced by £6,205,000 on environmentally sensitive area grants and by £3 million on coast protection. The remaining reduction, £840,000, reflects a transfer of funds to the Office of Science and Technology to cover the cost of redundancies arising among staff of the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council seconded to Horticulture Research International.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department spent during 1994 on recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies; and how many staff were recruited.

Mr. Jack: In 1994, 411 staff were recruited to the Department and its agencies at a cost of £579,987.

Sheep Exporters

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the exporters of sheep currently using Brightlingsea have convictions for livestock animal cruelty; and if he will specify the date and nature of the offences.

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 January 1995]: Complete information is not available centrally on convictions of exporters and others for offences related to animal welfare.

DEFENCE

Ex-service Men's Organisations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he and his colleagues in other Government departments have had with ex-service men's organisations regarding the abolition of compensation for noise-induced deafness.

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have been asked to reply.

Where disablement due to noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss is assessed at 20 per cent. or more, a war pension is paid.

The Government's proposals to abolish war pension gratuities for noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss causing disablement of less than 20 per cent. were discussed with the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions, which includes representatives of ex-service organisations on 3 December 1992. The Central Advisory Committee is the statutory body with which Ministers, by convention, discuss proposals to amend the war pensions scheme.

The matter has been discussed on several occasions since, including at later meetings of the central advisory committee and of the regional war pensions committees attended by the Minister with special responsibility for war pensions. It has also been raised at meetings he has had with delegations from the Royal British Legion.

Departmental Funding

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will announce changes to the class 1 cash limits and operating costs limited for 1994–95.

Mr. Soames: Subject to parliamentary approval of the spring supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

Class 1 cash limit

Vote	Current cash limit	Change	Revised cash limit £000
1	11,549,651	-25.675	11,523,976

This change decreases the block Defence cash limit by £25,675,000 from £22,761,260,000 to £22,735,585,000. It reflects the net effect of transfers between the Ministry of Defence and other Government Departments and a revision to the estimated costs for redundancy.

The Ministry of Defence operating costs limit will be reduced by £19,181,000 from £17,399,500,000 to £17,380,319,000. This also reflects the net effect of transfers between the Ministry of Defence and other Government Departments, a revision to the estimated costs for redundancy and an overestimate of receipts.

Service Career Review

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with Mr. Bett's review of service career and manpower structures and terms and conditions of service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence expects to receive Mr. Bett's report at the end of March. The terms of reference for the review require Mr. Bett to consult widely within MOD and the services. He very much appreciates the response he has received to his request for ideas and information, both in his visits programme and the extensive questionnaires and surveys which have formed an important part of the review. As part of this continuing dialogue, Mr. Bett and his team are now at the stage of testing elements of their ideas with those concerned in my Department and the services. Not all of these ideas will necessarily develop into recommendations, and others may be modified. There is bound to be speculation, some of it inaccurate and ill-founded, about what the report will recommend, but we regard Mr. Bett's continuing dialogue with us as important to the success of the review. Final decisions on Mr. Bett's recommendations will of course be taken by Ministers, in a process of consultation involving the armed forces and others, following receipt of his report.

Buried Atomic Bombs

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will establish an investigation into the allegations by former Royal Ordnance employee, Harry Southall, that two atomic bombs were buried at the Royal Ordnance site at Pembrey, Dyfed.

Mr. Soames: Until its closure in 1964, the former royal ordnance factory Pembrey was primarily engaged in the production of explosives although, in its final years of operation, it acted as a munition breakdown centre. The factory was never associated with our nuclear weapon programme and at no stage in its operations was the factory used for the production, storage or disposal of nuclear weapons.

Disabled People

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion and number of non-industrial civil servants in the Departments and agencies for which he has responsibility are registered disabled and disabled as defined by the Cabinet Office "Focus on Ability".

Mr. Freeman: My Department monitors its non-industrial staff to gather data on those who have a disability, for which they may or may not be registered. The results from the monitoring show that on 1 July 1994, the Ministry of Defence and its agencies employed 1,096 non-industrial staff who were registered disabled, representing 1.3 per cent. of the total. In addition to this, on 1 October 1994—figures for 1 July are not available—3,050 non-industrial staff, representing 3.7 per cent. of the total, were recorded as having declared some form of disability for which they were not registered.

Live Animal Research

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for defence what plans he has to carry out an investigation into the use of live animals for MOD experiments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: There are no plans to carry out an investigation into the use of live animals for MOD experiments.

Animal experiments are a small but essential part of the MOD's research and development programme. Animal experiments are carried out only when careful consideration of alternatives to the use of animals has shown that there is no adequate substitute and where it is judged essential to use animals for this purpose. The experiments carried out fully meet the spirit and letter of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and are subject to unannounced visits by Home Office inspectors.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many animals were used in research by or on behalf of his Department in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: Animals used in research include not only those used in animal experiments, but also those used for the provision of tissues, those not used and those used as passive control. The total numbers of animals used in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

1985: 7,855
1986: 7,712
1987: 10,628
1988: 10,462
1989: 10,419
1990: 9,270
1991: 7,028
1992: 5,088
1993: 7,329

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of animals used for the testing of military equipment by or on behalf of his Department are kept alive after the experiment has taken place.

Mr. Freeman: No animals are used to improve weapons or ammunition. Experiments involving animals have been used in the development of protective measures against certain weapons and to test procedures relating to submarine crew and aircrew safety. At the completion of experiments, animals are killed humanely in accordance with the project licence granted by the Home Office.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many live animal experiments have been carried out by his Department over each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: Under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, the number of animal experiments reported to the Home Office as required by the legislation in each of the last three years for which figures are available was as follows:

1993: 6,796

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been conducted by or on behalf of his Department into the application of results of military research on animals to draw conclusions about the effects on humans; and if he will publish this research.

Mr. Freeman: Animal experiments are carried out only when careful consideration of the use of animals has shown that there is no adequate substitute and where it is judged essential to use animals for this purpose. In the context of the work at CBDE Porton Down, which accounts for the majority of the animal experiments carried out by the MOD, it is important to recognise that as there is no group suffering from chemical or biological warfare agents in the population at large, the effectiveness of medical counter-measures cannot be evaluated, unlike drugs developed against naturally occurring illness or disease, using human beings. It is consequently necessary to evaluate the effectiveness of medical counter-measures against chemical and biological weapons using the most appropriate animal model for man. This work is published as appropriate in the scientific literature. In addition, studies of the interaction of drugs with animals have been compared with the interaction of the same drugs in man and a common mechanism has been established. Work on submarine and aircrew safety has been successfully applied to humans and the results published.

Work has also been undertaken to compare the relative mechanical properties of human and animal tissue, and has been presented to scientific conferences and published in the scientific literature. Computer models to predict the response of the human torso to impact and blast injury are also being developed.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he has commissioned or undertaken into the effectiveness and necessity of using live animals for testing military equipment.

Mr. Freeman: No animals are used to improve weapons or ammunition or to practise surgery. All MOD experimental work with animals is subject to the conditions of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, and related legislation. Before any project involving animals is begun, a project licence must be granted by the Home Office as a critical part of the project licence application is a closely argued justification of the proposed use of animals considering the ethical and scientific issues. At each stage, the use of non-animal alternatives has to be considered and the licence is only granted where no alternatives are possible. Alternatives to the use of animals are used whenever possible. Some such methods have been developed and published in the scientific literature.

In some cases, in vitro methods which do not use living animals have been shown to be scientifically superior.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many experiments by or on behalf of his Department have involved the use of live pigs in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many pigs were (a) involved and (b) killed in each year.

Mr. Freeman: Under the provisions of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, the number of animal experiments reportable concerning live pigs in each of the last five years was:

1990 : 86
1991 : 102
1992 : 132
1993 : 109

At the end of each experiment, the pig was humanely killed in accordance with the conditions of the project licence issued by the Home Office.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been conducted by or on behalf of his Department into the applicability of weapons research on unconscious animals to draw conclusions about their effect on conscious humans; and if he will publish this research.

Mr. Freeman: No animals are used to improve weapons or ammunition or to practise surgery. Work has been undertaken to compare the relative mechanical properties of human and animal tissue, and has been presented to scientific conferences. Computer models to predict the response of the human torso to impact and blast injury are also being developed.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of animals used for the testing of military equipment by or on behalf of his Department are killed while still under anaesthetic.

Mr. Freeman: No animals are used to improve weapons or ammunition or to practise surgery. The total number of experiments involving animals in 1993 that were reportable to the Home Office under the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 was 6,796. Around 6.5 per cent. of the animals involved were killed while under anaesthetic. All other animals were put down humanely in accordance with the Act.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many animals experiments by or on behalf of his Department took place in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: All research carried out by the MOD using animals is carried out under the provisions of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. The number of animal experiments reportable to the Home Office in each of the last 10 years was as follows:

1984: 10,941
1985: 6,611
1986: 6,400
1987: 8,300
1988: 8,148
1989: 9,129
1990: 8,146
1991: 6,100
1992: 4,500
1993: 6,796

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many experiments (a) involving animals, (b) leading to the death of an animal and (c) causing injury to an animal were carried out at Porton Down in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham S. Pearson to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 2 February 1995:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many experiments (a) involving animals, (b) leading to the death of an animal and (c) causing injury to an animal were carried out at Porton Down in each of the last five years, and if he will make a statement has been passed to me to answer as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to carry out work to ensure that the UK Armed Forces are provided with effective protective measures against the threat that chemical and biological weapons may be used against them.

3. It is an essential but relatively small part of the work of CBDE that a small number of experiments with animals, mainly mice, rats and guinea-pigs are carried out in order to ensure that the protective measures provided to the Armed Forces are effective and are safe. No animals are used to practice surgery or in work to improve weapons or ammunition performance. The number of animal experiments reported to the Home Office in each of the last five years was as follows:

1990: 8,100
1991: 6,100
1992: 4,500
1993: 6,700

In accordance with the conditions of the Project Licences issued by the Home Office, all animals were humanely killed at the completion of the experiments. The Project Licences currently in effect at CBDE cover mild 7, moderate 14, substantial 4 and unclassified 1.

4. It should be recognised that the total number of all animal experiments carried out at CBDE in any one year is less than one half of one percent of all the animal experiments conducted in the United Kingdom. Indeed the number of animal experiments at CBDE has dropped over the past decade. However, the number of experiments carried out in any one year will vary according to the MOD programme. It was recognised during and after the Gulf War that there was an increasing potential biological warfare threat and that it is necessary to strengthen the UK's biological defence capability. This has required the use of more animals.

5. The United Kingdom does not possess chemical or biological weapons and abandoned its capability relating to such weapons in the late 1950s. Consequently, there is absolutely no use of animals to develop or improve chemical or biological weapons. We have to recognise, however, that a number of countries do possess such weapons and it is essential that our Armed Forces are provided with adequate protection against their use and against the use of biological weapons. There is evidence of proliferation around the world in the availability of such weapons and the recent hostilities in the Gulf have demonstrated the reality of that threat which our Armed Forces have to be prepared to face.

6. Animal experiments are carried out at CBDE Porton Down only when careful consideration of alternatives to the use of animals has shown that there is no adequate substitute and where it is judged essential to use animals for this purpose. It is, important to recognise that there is no population suffering from chemical or biological warfare agents in the population at large and consequently the effectiveness of medical countermeasures cannot be evaluated, as can drugs developed against naturally occurring illness or disease, using human beings. It is consequently necessary to evaluate the effectiveness of medical countermeasures against chemical and biological weapons using an animal model for man.

7. The experiments carried out at CBDE involving the use of animals fully meet the spirit and letter of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act of 1986. CBDE is a registered place under the Act and all animal experiments and all the staff involved in them are licensed by the Home Office. Unannounced visits are made by Home Office inspectors to satisfy themselves that the requirements of the Act are met.

8. All work at CBDE is carefully controlled and monitored and is conducted by appropriately qualified personnel to the highest standards. It is vital that the protection provided for our Service personnel against the threat that they may be exposed to chemical or biological weapons should have been developed and tested to ensure safety and efficacy. Our role is to save the lives of the members of the British Armed Forces and this work is of continuing importance to the nation.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the research carried out by or on behalf of his Department using live animals leading to the death or injury of that animal for each of the last five years.

Mr. Freeman: The research carried out was designed to:

investigate gravitiational effects;

demonstrate the results of exposure to different pressures of air or oxygen; provide effective protective measures for the armed forces against the threat that chemical or biological weapons might be used against them; provide effective protective measures against conventional weapons.

Facsimile Messages

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reports he has received of facsimile messages to and from royal naval establishments being sent to civilian addresses as a result of mis-dialling; and what proposals he has to eliminate the problem.

Mr. Soames: Three messages containing management information have been reported as having reached The News, Portsmouth as a consequence of mis-dialling a Plymouth terminal number. The terminal number in question has been changed, users are being advised and reminded to take care that the correct number has been dialled before material is transmitted.

Sniper Protection Armour

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cabs of logistics vehicles in Bosnia have been fitted with sniper protection armour; and whether any such vehicles so fitted have been detained for any period by any local military or paramilitary forces operating in Bosnia.

Mr. Soames: No logistic vehicles in Bosnia have been fitted with protective armour. However, this equipment is held in theatre and vehicles could be so fitted if this was warranted by operational circumstances.

Emergency Tour Tasks

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names of known or foreseeable emergency tour tasks; what relation the size of units on emergency tour tasks bears to battalion size; and which units are currently on emergency tour tasks and are expected to be in the foreseeable future.

Mr. Soames: The list of current operational tour commitments, and the units undertaking them are set out below. Those units at serials 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 11 are of battalion size—or equivalent in non infantry-arms—those of 14 and 15 are of battalion group size; others are of less than battalion size. In all cases, the minimum manning strength required of the unit to carry out its operational tour commitment is less than that unit's peace establishment. It is not our usual practice to identify those units which are planned to take up operational tour commitments in the future.

Bilateral Cost-sharing Agreement

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the nature of the bilateral cost-sharing agreement under which the United Kingdom Government carry out construction work for the United States military at their bases and other property in the United Kingdom; when this agreement was first started; what is the value of the work currently being carried out; and at which United States bases and facilities this work is currently being carried out.

Mr. Soames: The confidential exchange of notes between the Governments of the United Kingdom and of the United States relating to the cost-sharing arrangement was signed on 4 April 1973. It is not our practice to comment on the details of such arrangements. The value of work currently being carried out is a matter for the United States Government. Work is being carried out under the provisions of the above arrangement at the following main locations and their associated sites:

RAF Alconbury
RAF Brawdy
RAF Chicksands
RAF Croughton
RAF Daws Hill

Mr. John Anderson

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action he has initiated against any of his Department's personnel involved in the arrest of Mr. John Anderson.

Mr. Soames: None. The Ministry of Defence police investigated the complaint under the supervision of the Police Complaints Authority. The investigation concluded that there were no grounds for disciplinary action.

Haymes Garth

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to announce the finding of the Peat Marwick investigation into expenditure at Haymes Garth; if he will publish the findings, report and recommendations in full; whether disciplinary action is to be taken against any individual; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: As I said in my answer to the hon. Member for Dorset, West (Sir J. Spicer) on 4 July 1994, Official Report, column 85, we will make a full report to the House on the conclusion of the work which has been set in hand to look into expenditure on Haymes Garth and other official service residences.

TRANSPORT

International Station, Ebbsfleet

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he (a) reached and (b) announced the decision to site the international station at Ebbsfleet in Kent.

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend announced the Government's decision on 31 August, shortly after the choice was finally settled.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on which occasions his Department had meetings's attended by or arranged with (a) Mr. Oliver Colville, (b) Decision Makers and (c) Blue Circle in connection with the channel tunnel link and the location of the international station.

Mr. Watts: The Department has had no meeting with Mr. Colville. Miss Maureen Tomison of Decision Makers was present on one occasion, when the Ebbsfleet promoter group made a presentation to my predecessor. The delegation was led by the hon. Members for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) and for Dartford (Mr. Dunn); representatives of Dartford borough council, Blue Circle, Union Railways and departmental officials were also present. The Department has had numerous meetings on this subject with Blue Circle.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if the channel tunnel route announced in October 1991 was compatible with the location of the international station at Ebbsfleet, Kent;

(2) what were the factors that led to the revision in 1993 of the final line of the route for the channel tunnel link as announced by his predecessor in October 1991; and what consideration underlay the alterations to the location and line of the link at its crossing of the River Thames.

Mr. Watts [holding answer 1 February 1995]: The route corridor announced in October 1991 offered the opportunity for a station at several locations in north Kent, although not at Ebbsfleet. In his statement of 22 March 1993—announcing that the channel tunnel rail link would run along the Ebbsfleet valley then tunnel under the Thames, to run alongside the London Tilbury and Southend line from north of Purfleet to Barking—the then Secretary of State for Transport made it clear that this route overcame a number of engineering and environmental difficulties associated with the route published in 1991.

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if (a) his Department and (b) Channel Tunnel safety authority accepted the view of the inter-governmental commission into the operation of the channel tunnel with regard to fire resistant end barriers and pass doors; and if he will make a statement;

(2) for what reason the inter-governmental commission into the operation of the channel tunnel objected to the request of Eurotunnel to vary the agreed width of the pass doors on the wagons carrying passengers with their cars from 0.7m to 0.6m; to whom this objection was communicated at Eurotunnel and when; and if he will make a statement;

(3) on what date Eurotunnel confirmed its acceptance of the requirement that wagons carrying passengers with their cars on the channel tunnel should have 30-minute fire and smoke-resistant end barriers and that both would have pass doors not less than 0.7m wide; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Watts: The CTSA advised the IGC on safety grounds not to accept Eurotunnel's proposed reduction in the width of pass doors. The advice was based on French and British regulations, guidelines and practice for the sizing of emergency exits. The IGC accepted the CTSA's advice and raised a formal objection to the Eurotunnel proposal. This was notified to the joint chief executives of Eurotunnel on 30 April 1990.

Eurotunnel confirmed its acceptance of the wider pass doors in a letter dated 21 March 1991 to the IGC.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek to end the constraint imposed on the inter-governmental commission into the operation of the channel tunnel that prevents it publicising any documentation used in reaching decisions on approval of safety matters relating to the channel tunnel's operation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Watts: The requirement to maintain the confidentiality of documents passed between the different parties involved in the channel tunnel is set down in the concession agreement. It arose from the proper concern about the need for confidentiality in a commercial operation. However, Eurotunnel has published its safety case, the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority publishes annual reports on its work, and a number of technical reports has been published.

Transport Police

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what support officers of the British Transport police may given when they are asked by members of the public for help in a situation outwith their current jurisdiction as a constable;

(2) what support officers of the British Transport police may give when they are asked by members of the Home Department forces for supporting action in situations away from the railway.

Mr. Watts: None, other than that which any member of the public may render to another or to a Home Department police officer.

Runway Capacity, South-East

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has considered the report of the working group to consider runway capacity to service the south-east; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government are firmly committed to enabling the development of additional airport capacity where this makes economic, social and environment sense. The economic benefits to business and industry are clear, as are the average of greater opportunities for leisure travel. The quality of airports in the South-East provides the United Kingdom and London with a vital competitive advantage and make the UK a world centre for commerce and tourism.

The Government wish to ensure that capacity can be made available in response to future demand, but in such as way that recognises and takes reasonable account of the environmental impacts, including the impacts of increased air traffic associated with additional runway capacity.

The working group on runway capacity to serve the south-east—RUCASTE—considered a number of options of increasing runway capacity at airports in south-east England, taking account of the contribution which regional airports can be expected to make. The group considered the need for and the impacts of the provision of additional runway capacity at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stanstead and Luton. It also noted, but did not examine in detail, the suggestion for a new airport in the Thames estuary. The group's report contains no specific recommendations although it concluded that benefits to passengers would justify a further runway at Heathrow or Gatwick by 2010, or at Stanstead by 2015. This conclusion was based on an assumption about the maximum achievable passenger throughput on the existing runways. The report was published in July 1993 and was followed by a period of public consideration. I am grateful to all the participants in the group for their assistance in producing a thorough and useful report.

The Government have concluded that RUCATSE's analysis shows a strong case for additional runway capacity in the south-east; but that more work is needed to inform decisions on any proposals which operators may bring forward for that additional capacity.

Our airports operate on a commercial basis and it is for the operators to bring forward proposals for development, where they see a business case, and take them through the planning processes. In doing so, they need to take account of the overall framework of the Government's airports policy, which indicates the factors that would weigh in Government decisions on such proposals. It has been suggested that the Government should seek to reintroduce traffic distribution rules in order to direct air traffic to use specific airports; the Government have considered this option and concluded that they do not wish to seek to influence the pattern of demand for commercial passenger services by the reintroduction of these rules.

Three important new considerations have emerged since the group reported; these require more work. First, an independent study of runway capacity at Heathrow, sponsored by National Air Traffic Services, BAA plc and the airlines, has produced a report suggesting that there is greater scope for increasing the utilisation of the existing runways at Heathrow than was previously envisaged. Before reaching any decisions, I am asking the CAA, in consultation with BAA and others, to examine further the gains that might be achieved and the environmental impact involved in making better use of the existing infrastructure at Heathrow.

Secondly, I am clear that BAA should not consider the options studied in RUCATSE for a third runway at Heathrow or for a second runway at Gatwick. However, it has been suggested that there may be better, less environmentally damaging, runway options than those considered by RUCATSE. I am therefore asking BAA to examine whether there might be less damaging options for development, such as a close parallel runway at Gatwick.

The above is without prejudice to my or the Secretary of State for the Environment's role in decisions on any future planning applications.

Thirdly, it has become clear that the issue of surface access to airports in the south-east, and particularly the scope for improved public transport links to, and between, the airports need further examination. I note that BAA has initiated a study and I will be commissioning further work on this.

The Government welcome the growth of regional airports. They recognise the benefits of liberalising air services to and from the regions. They also wish to provide the opportunity for the less busy airports in the south-east to develop. In particular, the Government draw attention to the capacity available at Stansted. The Government sought to accelerate these processes recently by liberalising transatlantic arrangements for regional airports, Luton and Stansted. Even on the most optimistic assumptions, however, regional growth will have a limited effect on the demand for additional airport capacity in the south-east. The Government also recognise the valuable contribution that small airfields can play, for example in serving business aviation.

We will continue to address the global impacts of air travel through work at the international level, to meet the goals of sustainable development; but these impacts are of very limited relevance to decisions on capacity at United Kingdom airports.

I expect the further work that I have commissioned to take between two and three years.

Train Accident, Kirkby Stephen

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, if he will make a statement about the passenger train collision near Kirkby Stephen on 31 January.

Dr. Mawhinney: The accident happened at about 18.56 after the 16.23 Carlisle-Leeds train was instructed to return to Carlisle because of flooding. Travelling north, the train ran into a landslide and was derailed into the path of the 17.45 Carlisle-Leeds train which was approaching on the adjacent line.

British Rail and Railtrack are conducting a joint injury into the accident. In addition, one of HM railway inspectorate's inspectors visited the scene of the accident and is investigating the circumstances.

HM coroner for the Carlisle area will be holding an inquest into the fatality that occurred, and has indicated that he wishes an inspector from HM railway inspectorate to assist in holding the inquest. The inspector's report under section 8 of the Railway Regulation Act 1871 will be made public.

Privatisation Programmes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide estimates for the total amount that has been paid to N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. with respect to any work undertaken by them on privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1979 after taking account of inflation.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 31 January 1995]: The table lists the sales conducted by my Department in which N. M. Rothschild were appointed and the role to which they were appointed. The fees paid to firms appointed within the privatisation programme are commercially confidential.

Special Advisers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the severance payments made to special advisers in each of the last five years indicating (a) the amount and (b) the date.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 1 February 1995]: The severance payments made to special advisers in the Department of Transport in each of the last five years are as follows:

Year	£
1990	6,654	December
1991	Nil
1992	3,197
1993	Nil
1994	33,180	August/September—two individuals.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Water Purification Plants

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total number of water purification plants held in storage by the Government; what is the purpose of the storage; how many have been released to assist the recent emergency in Rwanda; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The Overseas Development Administration holds no water purification plants in store. If such items are to be supplied for overseas emergencies, they can be obtained rapidly from a variety of sources. No such plants have been directly provided by the ODA for the Rwandan emergency.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by his Department or agency.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for during the last 12 months through central funds is listed at annexe A. Further inquiries concerning courses which may be held locally throughout the Department would incur disproportionate costs.

The Lord Chancellor is responsible for three agencies—HM Land Registry, the Public Record Office and the Public Trust Office. The question concerns specific operational matters on which the chief executives are best placed to provide answers. I have accordingly asked chief executives to reply direct.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 31 January 1995:

I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply to your question about training.

No individual training or tuition course at the public Record Office has exceeded £5,000. The overall cost of two longer-term, phased, training courses has exceeded £5,000.

1. Title: Senior Management Competences Programme

Objective: To improve the management and specialist skills of senior managers

Organisation engaged: Human Resource Partnership

Total cost: £60,768 (£934 a head)

Responsibilities of staff members: Senior managers throughout the Agency

Process of course evaluation: Invitation to tender and tender board. Individual post-course evaluations and a report from the Training Manager

2. Title: Training for Microsoft Office Computer Software

Objective: To train PRO staff on the new computer software package

Organisations engaged: FMI and Britech

Total cost: £31,537 (£152.35 a head)

Responsibilities of staff members: Staff throughout the Agency

Process of course evaluation: Invitation to tender and tender board. Individual post-course evaluations.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 3 February 1995:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question concerning training and tuition courses in HM Land Registry during the last twelve months with a total cost paid by the Agency exceeding £5,000.

There were two such courses, both relating to Information Systems training, and I can provide the following information:

1. Course Title: Advanced PL1

Objective: To provide the knowledge and skills of advance PL1 facilities to programmers who had at least twelve months experience in using the language.

Supplier: Altergo Education, London

Total cost: £7,840 (inc. VAT)

Trainees: 10 members of Development Groups within the Registry's Computer Services Division whose prime responsibilities are application development.

Evaluation: Course critiques are completed by all trainees following completion of the course to assess how well objectives were met. Managers monitor the effectiveness of the training by evaluating the expected against the perceived improvement in skills and performance.

2. Course Title: Advanced DB2

Objective: To provide PL1 and Assembler programmers with the appropriate knowledge and skills of advanced DB2.

Supplier: Sequel, Milton Keynes

Total cost: £6,909 (inc. VAT)

Trainees: 12 members of Development Groups within the Registry's Computer Services Division whose prime responsibilities are application development.

Evaluation: As for Course No.1 above.

I do hope that this answers the points raised with the Parliamentary Secretary but please contact me if I can be of any further assistance.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 1 February 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your parliamentary question, listed on 26 January 1995, regarding the Training and Tuition Courses exceeding £5000.

The PTO organised one training course where the cost exceeded £5000. The title of the course was "Mastering Effective Communication" and the key objective was for trainees to develop skills that will help them to:

- Influence others
- Constructively confront unacceptable behaviour in others that will be more likely to effect change and co-operation without defensiveness
- Resolve problems which are based on conflicting needs
- Help others to become more aware of the impact of their behaviour
- Help others to share their problems
- Develop personal power

The training was delivered by Effectiveness Training and Consulting, 11 Western Road, Henley-on-Thames, Oxfordshire, RG9 1JL. The cost of the one-week course for eight people was £5712.26, (which included a consultancy fee of £275 for gearing it specifically to PTO needs).

The course was aimed at SEO and HEO grades with staff management roles and/or caseworkers who worked directly with clients or their families.

Evaluation was carried out in the following manner.

- Observation and participation in the course by the Training Manager
- Questionnaire completed by the trainees immediately after the course.
- Follow-up questionnaire and ad hoc interviews with trainees and their line managers three months after the course to clarify what they are now doing differently as a result of the training.

I hope this deals with your query.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

World Summit for Social Development

Ms Lestor: To ask the Lord President of the Council what parliamentary procedure he proposes for pre-summit consideration of the principles of the world summit for social development in Copenhagen in March.

Mr. Newton: I have no current plans for a debate in Government time on the world summit for social development.

HEALTH

Health Care Expenditure

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was Britain's expenditure on public sector health care expressed as a percentage of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development average in (a) 1979 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available; and what factors account for the relative change since 1979.

Mr. Sackville: The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development collects and publishes figures for health spending. The table shows the figures requested for 1979 and 1990, the latest year for which figures are available for all countries.

Public expenditure on health care—value per capita in $ at current prices using purchasing power parities

	1979	1990
United Kingdom	353	825
OECD Average	389	901
United Kingdom as percentage of OECD average	91	92

These figures are not fully comparable because of differences in definitions between countries. In addition, comparisons between expenditure figures alone ignore the efficiency and effectiveness with which resources are used. The national health service improved its efficiency by over a fifth between 1978–79 and 1991–92. In contrast, unit costs in the health care systems of comparable countries have generally risen over the last decade.

Nurses

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 10 January, Official Report, column 113, when the information for the number of qualified nursing staff by specialty for each region in 1994 will become available.

Mr. Sackville: Data for qualified nursing staff by specialty for each region should be available by mid-summer 1995.

NHS Trusts (Termination Payments)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) of 19 December, Official Report, column 985-86 regarding termination payments to senior executives, to whom each of the two payments from the Hammersmith Hospitals NHS trust was made.

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for the Hammersmith Hospitals national health service trust.

Rehabilitation Beds

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many long-stay rehabilitation beds in (a) London, (b) Birmingham and (c) Manchester have been closed since 1979.

Mr. Bowis: Long-stay rehabilitation is not a recognised classification for national health service beds.

General Practitioners (Registration)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has had on difficulties encountered by persons who, on moving home try to register with a new general practitioner (a) in London and (b) elsewhere in England; and if she will make a statement on measures to assist persons encountering such difficulties.

Mr. Malone: None. Family health services authorities have responsibility for assisting any patient who experiences difficulty in registering with a general practitioner.

High-security Psychiatric Services

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish her decision on the future of high-security NHS psychiatric services.

Mr. Bowis: The official group announced in my reply on 14 July 1994 to my hon. Friend the Member for Somerton and Frome (Mr. Robinson), columns 701–702, has now submitted its advice. We will announce our conclusions when we have completed our consideration of this advice.

Limb Defects

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she will publish the report of the Advisory Group on Limb Defects.

Mr. Sackville: The group's report has been published today and copies placed in the Library.

I welcome the publication of the group's report which has been prepared promptly. Although defects of the limb which are present at birth are rare, when they occur they are very distressing for the parents and families of the children concerned and speculation on the causes can be a source of worry for women who are pregnant or who are thinking of becoming pregnant. I am particularly glad that REACH—the Association for Children with Hand or Arm Deficiency—which represents many parents of children with limb defects, were able to send an observer to the advisory group and that it has been able to endorse the group's advice.

The causes of most limb defects are unknown. The Government set up the advisory group on limb defects to determine the best way of making progress. The group's report sets out a programme of action which we intend to take forward. The group recommends a detailed, thorough review of all current relevant research and my officials are negotiating with a research team which will undertake this task. The group has also identified three further lines of inquiry and the Department is exploring these.

The advisory group also considered the value of a case-control study of limb reduction defects. Such studies are most appropriate when a strong new hypothesis—for example, that a particular environmental factor might be a cause—has been raised. There is no such hypothesis in the case of limb defects. The advisory group has therefore advised against such a study at present.

The advisory group also reviewed the evidence of possible adverse effects of specific agents such as dioxins and heavy metals. They found no evidence to show that these substances cause limb reduction defects.

The advisory group commended the steps that are being taken by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys to improve the recording and notification of limb defects and birth defects generally, to strengthen the means of monitoring trends, and changes which might merit further investigation.

Hospital Beds, London

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the relationship between the need for hospital beds in London and the number of beds available; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Malone: It is for commissioning authorities to assess health care requirements locally and to secure the appropriate services.

London Implementation Zone

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the latest available figure for the number of (a) practice managers and (b) general practitioners in the London implementation zone; and how many there were in September 1990.

Mr. Malone: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms Jowell) on 6 December 1994, column 198.

Information on the number of practice managers is not available centrally.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage increase in treatments in casualty departments within the London implementation zone area over the past three years; what plans she has to reduce the number of casualty departments; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Malone: The increase in attendances at accident and emergency departments in Greater London over the years 1991–92 to 1993–94 was 2.1 per cent. Health authorities are responsible for planning future demand for casualty facilities.

Cot Deaths

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the budget for health promotional activities on cot death in each of the last five years; and what is the projected budget for the next two years.

Mr. Sackville [pursuant to his reply, 18 January 1995, c. 481-82]: I regret that there were errors in the table relating to health promotion activity on smoking in my previous reply. The following table shows the corrected data.

£000

Baby Milk Products

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's assessment of the relative merits of breast feeding and baby milk products; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Based on medical advice, the Government have consistently supported breastfeeding as the best means of feeding a baby. Where a mother is either unable or chooses not to breastfeed, there is a range of suitable infant formulae available.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will introduce measures to implement the World Health Organisation's code of marketing in relation to baby milk products.

Mr. Sackville: The Infant Formula and Follow-on Formula Regulations 1995 on the composition, labelling and marketing of these products were laid before Parliament on 16 January 1995 and will come into force on 1 March 1995. The regulations implement relevant European Community legislation which is based on the principles of the World Health Organisation international code of marketing of breast milk substitutes which the United Kingdom supports.

Generic Prescribing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the proportion of generic prescribing for each family health services authority divided by (a) general practitioner fundholders and (b) non-fundholders in each of the last three years.

Mr. Malone: The information will be placed in the Library.

NHS Contracts

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the value of NHS contracts with non-NHS providers (a) in total, (b) by each regional health authority, (c) by each general practitioner fundholding practice, (d) by each trust hospital and (e) by each district health authority.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 20 January 1995]: The value of national health service contracts with non-NHS providers for 1993–94 in total was £357,354,000. A breakdown of this total by each regional health authority, by family health services authority—for general practice fundholders—and by each trust hospital and each district health authority will be placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list all (a) specialist medical and (b) general training courses by duration and numbers attending since January 1993 for experienced medical practitioners employed by the Benefits Agency medical services section which has responsibility for Northumberland and Tyne and Wear;

(2) if he will give the total number of experienced medical practitioners employed by the Benefits Agency medical services section which has responsibility for Northumberland and Tyne and Wear;

(3) if he will give the total budget by year since 1993 for training courses provided for experienced medical practitioners employed by the Benefits Agency medical services section which has responsibility for Northumberland and Tyne and Wear.

Mr. Hague: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 2 February 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for the number of experienced medical practitioners employed by the Benefits Agency's Medical Services (BAMS) in Northumberland and Tyne and Wear. In addition, you require the total budget since 1993 for training courses in Northumberland and Tyne and Wear and a list of all courses for experienced medical practitioners attended since that date.

There are ten medical advisers employed by the BAMS in the Northumberland and Tyne and Wear area. In addition, there are approximately one hundred and thirty six medical practitioners who undertake examinations in connection with a variety of benefits on a sessional basis. These medical practitioners are not employed by BAMS, but are paid a sessional fee for the work they undertake.

I have provided at Annex A information relating to budget figures for training courses in the Northumberland and Tyne and Wear area as requested.

At Annex B is information relating to the specialist medical training undertaken since January 1993 by the ten medical advisers employed by the BAMS in Northumberland and Tyne and Wear.

At Annex C I have provided details of general training courses attended.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Annex A

Budget for BAMS' training courses in the Northumberland and Tyne and Wear area

	Locally held training budget £	Centrally held training budget[1] £
1993–94	1,500	200,000
1994–95	1,500	[2]3,000,000

[1] Of the centrally held training budget, approximately ten per cent. is spent in the North East, which includes the Northumberland and Tyne and Wear area.

[2] The increase in the centrally held budget is due to an increase in training arising from the introduction of Incapacity Benefit.

Child Support

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost for reprogramming information systems because of changes to the Child Support Act 1991 announced on 23 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Nigel Jones, dated 2 February 1995:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the cost of reprogramming information systems following the changes to the Child Support Act 1991 announced on 23 January 1995.

The estimated cost of reprogramming the Child Support Agency's information systems is £0.65 million.

I hope that this is of help.

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the absenteeism rates for (a) the Child Support Agency, (b) his Department, (c) the Benefits Agency, (d) the Contributions Agency, (e) the Information Technology Services Agency, (f) the Resettlement Agency and (g) the War Pensions Agency in 1994.

Mr. Hague: Information on sickness absence rates for 1994 will not be available until later in the year.

Life-threatening Illnesses

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy on the provision of rights for those suffering from life-threatening illness not already identified in the Disability Discrimination Bill.

Mr. Hague: The Bill does not seek to identify specific illnesses but establishes a framework definition of those who would be protected by the proposed rights. This is that a person has a disability if he or she has a physical or mental impairment which has a substantial and long-term adverse effect on his or her ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities. Further details on the interpretation of disability are given in schedule 1 of the Bill.

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost of restoring income support to unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds.

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available.

Severe Hardship Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the number of (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful claims for the severe hardship allowance in each month since its introduction; and if he will give these figures as a percentage of the total number of claims.

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the tables.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to the national insurance fund of all current holders of an appropriate personal pension with an annual income of (a) £2,000 or below (b) up to £3,000, (c) up to £4,000, (d) up to £5,000, (e) up to £6,000, (f) up to £7,000, (g) up to £8,000, (h) up to £9,000 and (i) up to £10,000 opting back into state earnings-related pensions.

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 25 January 1995]: Information is not available in the form requested. Any estimates of the total cost to the national insurance fund of current holders of appropriate personal pensions opting back into the state earnings-related pension scheme would depend on a large number of unknown factors: these include how long the people concerned would remain contracted in to SERPS, how long they would otherwise have contributed to APP schemes and what their future earnings would be. The table gives illustrative estimates of the cost arising, in selected future years, from contributions paid solely in the single year in which the individuals concerned are assumed to contract into SERPS.

Extra SERPS expenditure in selected years if APP holder in low earnings bands opt back into SERPS for one year. £ million 1994–95 prices

APP holders with earnings under (£per annum)	2010-11	2020-21	2030-31	2040-41	2050-51

9,000	2	10	25	25	15
10,000	2	10	30	35	20

Notes:
1. Little extra cost until 2010 as most APP holders are under age 45.
2. Estimates of numbers affected based on data for 1992–93, the most recently available, used to estimate proportions of APP holders in respect of people in the earnings bands quoted.
3. Earnings under £2,000 would not accrue SERPS so no financial effect in respect of that year.
4. Earnings have been used, as a breakdown by income is not available.
5. The year in which opting back into SERPS is assumed to take place is 1994–95.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government will take with regard to the recent Burmese military offensive against the Karen people.

Mr. Goodlad: Together with our European Union partners, we intend to express our concern directly to the ruling military regime in Burma about the recent attacks on the headquarters of the Karen ethnic group. We will be pressing for clarification of their commitment to national reconciliation and democratic reform.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures Her Majesty's Government have taken to promote bilateral trade with Burma; and what account is being taken of the Burmese Government's human rights violations.

Mr. Goodlad: We try to ensure that British firms are aware of trade opportunities in Burma not covered by the EU arms embargo, but we offer no financial support to them.

We remain acutely concerned about the continued abuse of human rights in Burma. We and our European Union partners have made it clear to the ruling military regime that normalisation of our relations depends on progress in key areas, including human rights.

Public Funding

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what public funds were made available in the current financial year and what changes are likely for the year 1995–96 for payments to (a) the Westminster Foundation for Democracy and (b) the Council for Education in World Citizenship; and in which countries each organisation operates.

Mr. Baldry: (a) The Westminster Foundation for Democracy received a grant in aid of £2.2 million for the current financial year. The foundation will receive £2.5 million for the financial year 1995–96. The foundation exists to promote democratic development worldwide. The majority of its income is spent in central and eastern Europe, former Soviet Union and anglophone Africa.

(b) The Council for Education in World Citizenship is an independent charity operating throughout the United Kingdom, which currently receives funding from the Department for Education, the Scottish Education Department and the Department of Education, Northern Ireland. In 1994–95, the DFE grant amounted to £110,000. In 1995–96, the DFE proposes to provide CEWC with funds totalling £85,000.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what public representations were made to the Indonesian delegation to the consultative group on Indonesia in July 1994 in respect of the violent suppression of a peaceful demonstration in Jakarta and the suppression of three publications; and if he will explain the phrase in the margins of the July meeting as used in his answer to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 14 July 1994, Official Report, column 752.

Mr. Goodlad: None. We raised our concerns about the banning of the three journals in the margins—outside the formal sessions—of the July meeting of the consultative group for Indonesia, in bilateral representations to the Indonesian delegation.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the cost of Britain's diplomatic presence in Indonesia for each year since 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: The total annual costs of Britain's diplomatic presence in Indonesia since the financial year 1983–84 are given. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Mrs Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many diplomatic staff have been stationed in Indonesia in each year since 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: The number of United Kingdom-based staff stationed in Indonesia—at the British embassy, Jakarta—for each year since 1982 are listed. The figures include representatives from other Government Departments and agencies. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Year	Number
1982	30

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last raised the question of Indonesia's illegal occupation of East Timor at meetings of the Group of Seven.

Mr. Goodlad: As far as we are aware, the subject has not been addressed at G7 meetings.

DEFENCE

Military Training (Colombia)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many military personnel visited Colombia in 1994 to train military students;

(2) when military personnel were first dispatched to Colombia to assist in the training of military students; and if he will make a statement;

(3) from which regiments military personnel are dispatched to Colombia to train military students.

Mr. Soames: British military personnel have been providing training to the Colombian authorities to help counter the illicit production and trafficking of drugs since 1989. Details of the assistance provided are confidential between the two Governments.

Low Flying

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reported incidents of low flying there were in each year since 1990.

Mr. Soames: The numbers of inquiries and complaints received by my Department about military low flying in the United Kingdom in each year since 1990 are as follows:

1990: 7,130
1991: 4,846
1992: 6,295
1993: 5,738
1994: 5,778

Ex-service Men's Organisations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what recent discussions he has had with his colleagues in Government regarding a single ministry for ex-service men's organisations;

(2) what discussions he has had with ex-service men's associations regarding a single Ministry to work with ex-service men's associations.

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence met the Minister of State for Social Security and Disabled People together with representatives of the Royal British Legion and the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 23 November 1994.

Nerve Agents

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the provisions in health and safety laws and regulations from which the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down is exempt, providing an explanation of why the exemption has been allowed in each case;

(2) what research has been carried out on the nerve agent GB at the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down since the closure of the nerve agent plant at Nancekuke; what quantity of the nerve agent GB has been used in this research at Porton Down; with which country the results of the research have been exchanged; and under which defence agreements these results were exchanged;

(3) how many service volunteers were involved in studies with the nerve agent pre-treatment set tablets at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down; in which years these studies took place; what was the nature and purpose of these studies; what was the conclusion of the studies; what are the side-effects of NAPS; and under which defence agreement the results of these studies were exchanged with other countries;

(4) what was the purpose of research on the nerve agent GE at the nerve agent plant at Nancekuke, Cornwall; what quantities of nerve agent GE were used in this research; with which other countries the results of this research were shared; and under which defence agreements these results were exchanged;

(5) what is the purpose of the contract from the Directorate of Science (Ballistic Missile Defence) which is being carried out at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down; when this contract started; when it will end; and what is its value;

(6) how many service volunteers were involved in studies with the S10 respirator at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down; in which years these studies took place; what was the nature and purpose of these studies; what was the conclusion of these studies; and under which defence agreement the results of these studies were exchanged with other countries.

Mr. Soames: These are matters for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, CBDE, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 February 1995:

Question 11, Order Paper 26 January 1995

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking if he will list the provisions in health and safety laws and regulations from which the Chemical and Biological Defence Establish at Porton Down is exempt, providing an explanation of why the exemption has been allowed in each case has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to carry out work to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them.

3. The Ministry of Defence is bound by the provisions of the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 except where the Secretary of State chooses to exercise his powers to exempt the MOD on grounds of National Security. To date the Secretary of State has not exercised this.

4. The Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is a Defence Executive Agency and as such is subject to regulation by the Health and Safety Executive on the same basis as any other MOD establishment. Safety is of paramount importance at CBDE and is a delegated line management responsibility as all members of staff are responsible for their own safety and that of others. Line management carry out six monthly safety inspections and are supported by an independent safety section. These regular inspections are complemented by periodic safety audits carried out by the Safety Services Organisation of the Ministry of Defence and by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE).

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 February 1995:

Question 14, Order Paper 26 January 1995

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what research has been carried out on the nerve agent GB at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down since the closure of the nerve agent plant at Nancekuke; what quantity of the nerve agent GB has been used in this research at Porton Down; with which country the results of the research have been exchanged; and under which defence agreements these results were exchanged has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to carry out work to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the effectiveness of British protective measures evaluated.

3. Since the closure of the Chemical Defence Establishment at Nancekuke in 1980 research on the nerve agent GB at CBDE Porton Down has covered all aspects concerned with the provision of effective protective measures against the threat that GB might be used by an aggressor against the UK Armed Forces. This has included hazard assessment, detection and identification, physical protection contamination monitoring and management and the use of prophylactic and therapeutic medical countermeasures. Our records that the quantity of GB used in research at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment from 1985 to the present date is about 16 kg.

4. The results of this work were part of the chemical and biological defence programme and would have formed part of the technical database drawn upon in collaboration with our allies under the agreements covering research, development, deployment and standardisation of chemical and biological defence equipment such as those listed by the Rt Hon Archie Hamilton in his reply of 21 May 1992, Official Report, Column 255-256.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 February 1995:

Question 15, Order Paper 26 January 1995

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many Service volunteers were involved in studies with the nerve agent pre-treatment set tablets at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down; in which years these studies took place; what was the nature and purpose of these studies; what was the conclusion of the studies; what are the side-effects of NAPS; and under which defence agreement the results of these studies were exchanged with other countries has been passed to me to answer as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. In order to carry out this work, it is necessary to use service volunteers to:

a. assess the ability of Service personnel to function with new equipment and procedures,

b. develop medical countermeasures to protect Service personnel and

c. evaluate the effects of very low and medically safe concentrations of CW agents on the ability of unprotected personnel to operate normally.

No studies involving volunteers are carried out unless there is a clear military need and a detailed protocol has been reviewed and approved by an independent Ethics Committee in accordance with the guidelines laid down by the Royal College of Physicians.

3. A number of studies using Service volunteers were carried out primarily between 1970 and the early 1980s at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, RMCS Shrivenham, Dover, Bulford, Cambridge Military Hospital as well as some collaborative work with the Institution of Aviation Medicine and more recently in 1993 at the Cambridge Military Hospital. These studies were to evaluate the acceptability of using pyridostigmine bromide and whether such use had adverse side effects or was affected by the nature of the duties of the Service personnel. These studies which lasted for up to eight weeks included the assessment of the effects of NAPS on volunteers undergoing strenuous exercise and of a thermally stressful environment. Our records indicate that a total of about 300 Service volunteers received NAPS during these studies.

4. The short term side effects attributable to the administration of NAPS include; increased frequency of bowel action but rarely overt diarrhoea, nausea and abdominal pain, increased frequency of urination and the worsening of established upper respiratory infection, runny nose and cough.

5. These studies concluded that pyridostigmine bromide in NAPS give considerable protection against all organophosphorus nerve agents with no adverse effects and did not interfere with military duties.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 February 1993:

Question 22, Order Paper 26 January 1995

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what was the purpose of research on the nerve agent GE at the nerve agent plant at Nancekuke, Cornwall; what quantities of nerve agent GE were used in this research; with which other countries the results of this research were shared; and under which defence agreements these results were exchanged has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to carry out work to ensure that the UK Armed Forced have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the effectiveness of British protective measures evaluated.

3. My earlier answer to you of 11 January 1994, Official Report, 11 January 1994 (Column 163–4) indicated the approximate periods during which research into nerve agents was carried out at Nancekuke. The majority of the work relating to the nerve agent GE was carried out at the Chemical Defence Research Establishment at Sutton Oak during the late 1940s and early 1950s when GE was studied as part of a systematic approach to the process chemistry of all the nerve agents in the G series. The chemistry of GE is very similar to that of GB and both are dependent upon the intermediate phosphonous dichloride. Although GE is less toxic than GB, it was believed that it was easier to produce. Some studies were devoted to investigating this. Our records indicate that about 700 lbs of GE was produced at Sutton Oak in these studies. Although it was originally envisaged that GE would be produced at Nancekuke in the event interest in GE lapsed and little if any work on GE was carried out at Nancekuke.

4. The results of this work would have formed part of the technical database drawn upon in collaboration with the United States and Canada under the Tripartite Conferences on toxicological warfare.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 February 1995:

Question 23, Order paper 26 January 1995

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State asking what is the purpose of the contract from the Directorate of Science (Ballistic Missile Defence) which is being carried out at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down; when this contract started; when it will end; and what is its value has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is pursuing a technology research programme into the defeat of attacks by ballistic missiles with chemical or biological warheads as part of a wider lethality technology research programme which is being funded by the US Government under the terms and conditions of the 1985 US/UK Strategic Defence Initiative Memorandum of Understanding. CBDE's involvement started in May 1992 and is planned to complete later this year, unless a further option of one year, included in the original arrangements, is taken up. The total value of the work due to complete later this year is $9.2M.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 2 February 1995:

Question 26, Order Paper 26 January 1995

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many Service volunteers were involved in studies with the S10 respirator at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down; in which years these studies took place; what was the nature and purpose of these studies; what was the conclusion of these studies and under which defence agreement the results of these studies were exchanged with other countries has been passed to me to answer as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. In order to carry out this work, it is necessary to use service volunteers to:

a. assess the ability of Service personnel to function with new equipment and procedures,

b. develop medical countermeasures to protect Service personnel and

c. evaluate the effects of very low and medically safety concentrations of CW agents on the ability of unprotected personnel to operate normally,

No studies involving volunteers are carried out unless there is a clear military need and a detailed protocol has been reviewed and approved by an independent Ethics Committee in accordance with the guidelines laid down by the Royal College of Physicians.

3. Studies took place between August 1984 and February 1985 to gather information on facial and eye to eyepiece dimensions. These took place at various Service units and involved 1,511 Service volunteers. The conclusions led to recommendations for some minor modifications of design and similar small scale studies involving about 30 or 40 volunteers confirmed that the modified design met the requirements.

4. During the same period, laboratory faceseal leakage trials were carried out at CBDE using 249 Service volunteers to measure protection levels as laid down in the NATO Triptych. The test aerosol used in these faceseal leakage trials was sub-micron sodium chloride particles. The trials demonstrated that the respirator performance met the design specification.

5. The S10 respirator is now standard issue to all Service personnel. Consequently all studies at CBDE involving Service volunteers wearing Individual Protective Equipment (IPE) also involve the use of the S10 respirator. Our records are not maintained in a way to readily allow us to identify the number of Service personnel who have worn the S10 respirator and taken part in these studies. Volunteers wearing the S10 respirator have participated in studies to assess the protection given against chemical warfare agents using harmless stimulants such as nebulised corn oil. The S10 respirator has also been worn in studies of the effect of IPE in different climatic conditions to assess the effects on performance of standard military tasks and to assess the physiological load induced by breathing through the respirator under different exercise conditions in order to quantify the degradation in physical performance expected as a result of wearing the respirator.

6. The results of this work were part of the chemical and biological defence programme and would have formed part of the technical database drawn upon in collaboration with our allies under the agreements covering research, development, deployment and standardisation of chemical and biological defence equipment such as those listed by the Rt. Hon. Archie Hamilton in his reply of 21 May 1992, Official Report, Column 255–256.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which years studies with service volunteers were undertaken at RMCS Shrivenham; what was the purpose and conclusions of these studies; how many studies were carried out there; and how many service volunteers were involved in these tests.

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 February 1995:

Question 17, Order Paper 26 January 1995

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State asking in which years studies with Service volunteers were undertaken at RMCS Shrivenham; what was the purpose and conclusions of these studies; how many studies were carried out there; and how many Service volunteers were involved in these tests has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. In order to carry out this work, it is necessary to use service volunteers to:

a. assess the ability of Service personnel to function with new equipment and procedures,

b. develop medical countermeasures to protect Service personnel and

c. evaluate the effects of very low and medically safe concentrations of CW agents on the ability of unprotected personnel to operate normally.

No studies involving volunteers are carried out unless there is a clear military need and a detailed protocol has been reviewed and approved by an independent Ethics Committee in accordance with the guidelines laid down by the Royal College of Physicians.

3. The Nerve Agent Pretreatment Set (NAPS) was developed in response to a requirement which called for a pretreatment effective against poisoning by all known nerve agents. A number of studies were conducted by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment to identify the effective oral dose regime which used in conjunction with therapy would provide protection against nerve agent poisoning whilst producing minimal or nil side effects.

4. One of these studies took place at RMCS Shrivenham in 1980. Twenty-eight military personnel on a training course volunteered to take part and the conclusions of the study confirmed earlier findings that the side effects from the taking of NAPS were minimal and did not interfere with military duties.

Spy Recruitment

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain for his Department a copy of the article, details of which have been sent to him.

Mr. Soames: Copies of the article are held by my Department.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will commission research to investigate any possible future risk to fishermen fishing the deep waters west of the Hebrides from chemical weapons dumped in the area after the second world war; and if he will discuss with other European Governments collective ways of addressing this issue.

Mr. Soames: The potential hazards of chemical waste dump sites and whether there is a need for any remedial action have been reviewed by the Helsinki commission and the Oslo commission. The results of this work have been reported to the global London convention. The consensus of international scientific opinion is to leave CW dump sites undisturbed. Current scientific evidence indicates CW dump sites present no significant risk to human health or to the marine environment and the living resources it supports, now or in the future. Chemical warfare agents either rapidly hydrolise to non-toxic components or are rendered ineffective through dilution. Given this background and the depth of water in which the vessels were scuttled, no monitoring of the Atlantic dump sites has been undertaken or is planned.

Service Personnel (Women)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 2, if he will list the ranks of each of the armed services in which there are no women serving.

Mr. Soames: As at 1 October 1994, the information requested is as follows:

Royal Naval Services[1]	Army	Royal Air Force
Admiral of the Fleet	Field Marshal	Marshal of the RAF
Admiral	General	Air Chief Marshal
Vice Admiral	Lieutenant General	Air Marshal
Rear Admiral	Major General	Air Vice Marshal
		Air Commodore

[1] Women do not serve in the Royal Marines apart from the Band Service where the only ranks in which women are serving are marine (2nd class) and junior.

Advertisements

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions and in what circumstances in the last five years advertisements have been placed in newspaper or periodicals which have been described as being issued by or on behalf of Ministers in his Department rather than on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Freeman: Advertisements for land and property for sale by the Ministry of Defence are normally issued in the name of the Secretary of State for Defence. Records of the numbers of advertisements over the past five years are not kept centrally.

Remote Control Undersea Detonators

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has received on the sale of remote control undersea detonators to Iraq by Oceano Instruments UK Ltd. of Edinburgh in 1990; and whether Lord Justice Scott has asked his Department for any information held on this equipment sale.

Mr. Freeman: These matters are being investigated by Sir Richard Scott and it would therefore be inappropriate for me to comment. The question of information requested by the Scott inquiry is a matter for the inquiry and the Ministry of Defence.

Arms Sales

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is in relation to answering questions relating to details of arms sales to particular countries.

Mr. Freeman: In general, it remains Government policy not to reveal details of arms sales to particular countries. Such information is confidential between the purchaser and the supplier.

Gulf War

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration his Department has given to the report by Wing Commander Bill Coker concerning illnesses suffered by service personnel since serving in the Gulf war; if he will publish the report; what assessment he has made of the percentage of people diagnosed as ill by Wing Commander C[illegible] and if he will now establish an independent medical inquiry.

Mr. Soames: Contrary to media speculation, no such report exists. Gulf veterans who consider that their health has been adversely affected by their service in the Gulf continue to be assessed under the Department's medical assessment programme and detailed preliminary findings will be made public at an appropriate stage when sufficient have been examined to draw provisional conclusions. Of those seen so far, approximately 25 per cent. have been diagnosed as suffering from psychological conditions, 20 per cent. from a range of serious well-recognised medical conditions unrelated to service in the Gulf, 10 per cent. from chronic fatigue syndrome and the remainder from a range of minor physical ailments. None of the conditions has been found to be peculiar to service in the Gulf. There is no single illness, major or minor, common to those he has examined and no evidence to suggest the existence of a Gulf war syndrome. Consequently, there is no reason to establish an independent inquiry.

Warships

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it remains his Department's policy to maintain around 33 warships; what consideration he has given to changing this policy; what consultations he has had with the Admiral of the Fleet on any change in the number of warships required for the Royal Navy; how many warships he estimates the United Kingdom will posses by 2000; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The Royal Navy currently maintains a surface fleet of 97 commissioned vessels, including 36 destroyers and frigates. As set out in the last year's statement on the Defence Estimates, we continue to plan for a future force level of 35 destroyers and frigates from 1995.

Land Mines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 445, what are the other established criteria in deciding the export of land mine components.

Mr. Freeman: The other established criteria are those used in deciding whether to grant export licences for any defence equipment, and include the guidelines agreed by the permanent five members of the Security Council of the United Nations; with European Union partners; and in the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe.

Haymes Garth

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 446, when the conclusions of the KPMG Peat Marwick report concerning the expenditure at the residence known as Haymes Garth will be reported to the House.

Mr. Soames: As I said in my answer to the hon. Member for Dorset, West (Sir J. Spicer) on 4 July 1994, Official Report, column 85, we will make a full report to the House on the conclusion of the work which has been set in hand to look into expenditure on Haymes Garth and other official service residences.

Intra-departmental Facsimiles

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last year intra-departmental facsimile messages have been sent to the wrong destination; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: This information is not recorded.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the security implications of intra-departmental facsimile messages mistakenly sent to the wrong destination; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: Should a breach of security occur, the circumstances would be investigated by my Department's security directorate or the appropriate single service security authority. Additionally, an investigation into local procedures would be undertaken by line management.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has initiated an inquiry into mistakes in his Department resulting in the sending of facsimile messages to the wrong destination; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: Should a breach of security occur from the mis-dialling and transmission of a facsimile message, the appropriate departmental authority would investigate the incident.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the intra-departmental facsimile messages sent to the wrong destination in the last year have been (a) classified and (b) unclassified.

Mr. Soames: Although records would be kept when breaches of security occur, no central record of these is maintained.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the effect of the facsimile message mistakenly sent to The News in Plymouth in April 1994, on the career prospects of the officers who were its subject.

Mr. Soames: None.

Golf Courses

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 690, when the hon. Member for South Shields will receive an answer to his question about golf courses.

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member shortly, and a copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Royal Army Dental Corps

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what conditions civilian students are admitted to dental hygiene courses at the Royal Army Dental Corps training unit at Aldershot; and how many such students have been admitted in each of the past five years.

Mr. Freeman: Civilian students are admitted to dental hygienist courses at RADC Aldershot on a "space available" and repayment basis. Over the last five years, two one-year courses have been run every year with a maximum of 10 students per course. At present, only one course is being offered and this begins in March 1995. Priority is given to armed forces students, but any surplus places may be allocated to civilian students.

During the past five years, a total of 30 civilian students have been trained at RADC Aldershot as follows.

Service and civilian students admitted to dental hygienist course at RADC Aldershot

Noise Pollution Complaints

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints about noise pollution from each proof and experimental establishment at Shoeburyness and Pendine were received in each calendar month from January 1992 to date.

Mr. Freeman: I will write to the hon. Member.

Trident

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the percentage production outside the Trident warhead programme by value at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Llanishen, Cardiff, in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: Figures for each of the last 10 years could not be produced without disproportionate effort. During the period 1984 to date, however, somewhat less than half the output of the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Llanishen, Cardiff has been related to the Trident programme. The balance of capacity has been allocated to other nuclear work save for 5 to 10 per cent. which consisted of work, primarily high-precision machining, undertaken on behalf of commercial customers.

Rocket Tests

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements exist with the Russian Federation and the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation to ensure that the Russian military or Government do not misinterpret as offensive the testing of rockets launched for scientific research with particular reference to the launch in Norway on 25 January.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

None. However, the Norwegian Government have confirmed that, in line with long-standing bilateral arrangements with Russia, the launch on 25 January was notified in advance to the Russian authorities through diplomatic channels.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Child Witnesses

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the research findings from the project currently being conducted at the university of Leicester: "Evaluation of New Provision for Child Witnesses 1991".

Mr. Maclean: We expect to publish the report in the spring.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will outline the remit of the steering group chaired by his Department on children's evidence; and if he will list the membership of the group.

Mr. Maclean: The remit of the steering group on child evidence is as follows:

(a) to monitor the implementation of relevant legislation and Government initiatives;

(b) to provide a national forum for the resolution of problems relating to child evidence;

(c) to assess what further reforms might be necessary and to assess their viability; and

(d) to keep informed of new developments in the field.

The following are represented on the group:

Home Office—chairing the Group
Department of Health
Lord Chancellor's Department
Crown Prosecution Service
Association of Chief Police Officers
Association of Directors of Social Services
Social Services Inspectorate
Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary.

Police Authorities

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines are issued by his Department to the new police authorities in respect of (a) the number of full meetings that should be held annually and (b) what constitutes suitable accommodation for those meetings.

Mr. Maclean: None; these are matters for the members of the new authorities.

Secure Training Centres

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made in the setting-up of secure training centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Outline planning permission has been granted in respect of the site at Cookham Wood, and a certificate of lawful use for the redevelopment of the site at Gringley. We intend to issue invitations to tender for the design, construction/refurbishment, management and finance of STCs on those sites within the next few weeks. Invitations to tender for the remaining sites will follow as soon as possible thereafter.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of asylum seekers from Bosnia who have arrived in the United Kingdom since the beginning of the civil war in Bosnia; and how many have (a) been given full political refugee status, (b) been given exceptional leave to remain, (c) been rejected and (d) still await his decision.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The available information on asylum applications by nationals of the former Yugoslavia, and on decisions made, for the period 1 January 1992 to 31 December 1994, is given in the table; data for Bosnians are not separately identified in the statistics. As at 31 December 1994 an estimated 5,990 applications for asylum from former Yugoslavs were outstanding.

In addition to consideration of asylum applications, the Government have, under arrangements announced in November 1992 and June 1993, offered to receive 1,000 particularly vulnerable individuals from the former Yugoslavia and their close dependants. As at 31 January 1995, 842 particularly vulnerable individuals and 1,142 dependants had arrived under these arrangements. Prior to this, 68 sick and wounded ex-detainees from Bosnia arrived in September 1992.

Decisions[1] on applications[1] received for asylum from nationals of the former Yugoslavia in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, 1992 to 1994

Number of principal applicants

	1992	1993	1994
Asylum applications[2]	5,635	1,830	1,385
Decisions[3]	130	175	1,765

Not recognised as a refugee but granted exceptional leave to remain[4]	*	55	1,265
Refused asylum and ELR—after full consideration	—	10	375
Refused under para 180F[5]	65	80	75
Refused on safe third country grounds[6]	60	30	25

[1] Provisional figures rounded to the nearest 5, with '*' = 1 or 2.
[2] Figures exclude information on applications made overseas.
[3] Decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in the same year.
[4] Usually granted for a year in the first instance, subject then to further review.
[5] For failure to provide evidence to support the asylum claim within a reasonable period, including failure to respond to invitation to interview to establish identity—para. 101 prior to 26 July 1993.
[6] Refused on the grounds that the applicant had arrived from a safe third country.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers and dependants have made applications to enter the United Kingdom since 1 January 1990; what percentage of these have made their application other than on arrival at the port of entry; how many have had their cases determined and, of these, how many have been refused and deported; and how many are awaiting determination of their cases.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The available information on applications, decisions, and removals, excluding dependants, by location of application, for the years 1990 to 1994 is given in table A. Table B gives the available information on applications and decisions, including dependants for the years 1990 to 1994.

At 31 December 1994—the latest date for which information is available—an estimated 55,255 applications for asylum, excluding dependants, were outstanding.

Figures for those persons and their dependants granted entry clearance abroad to seek asylum in the United Kingdom are not separately identified in the statistics.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of the provision of housing, schooling, health care and social security provision in respect of asylum seekers and their dependants currently in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The average estimated cost in income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit of maintaining an asylum applicant and any dependants is around £100 per week. No recent estimates of the other costs are available.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest estimate available to him of the number of asylum-seekers currently seeking entry to the European Union.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The available information covering the period 1 January 1992 to 30 November 1994 is given in the table.

Applications[1] received for asylum in member countries of the European Union, including dependants, 1 January 1992 to 30 November 1994

[4] United Kingdom figures have been adjusted to include dependants.

Departmental Research

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish his Department's research into (a) intensive probation, (b) reconviction rates of offenders, (c) remand decisions and offending while on bail and (d) the experience of settlement among refugees.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The four research reports have now all been completed and are currently being prepared for printing or publication. I expect them to be published in March and April 1995.

Prisoners

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the chief inspector of prisons' recommendations in respect of the use of secure accommodation to facilitate the control of category C prisoners.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 3 February 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about progress on recommendations made by the Chief Inspector of Prisons in respect of the use of secure accommodation to facilitate the control of category C prisoners.

The Chief Inspector recommended that the Prison Service should develop a coherent policy towards the control of prisoners in category C prisons making better use of the secure accommodation in some establishments.

In response to the Chief Inspector's recommendations, a review of control in category C prisons has been completed. This included an analysis of the effects of the population mix on the risk to good order in category C prisons and an assessment of the control capability of each individual category C establishment. The research identified that the presence of a high proportion of certain types of category C prisoners will make serious disturbances more likely.

New allocation procedures for category C prisoners were introduced in October 1994 to take account of this analysis. All category C prisons were placed in one of four groups depending on the combination of design and architectural features affecting control capability. Guidelines on the maximum proportion of potentially disruptive prisoners have been set for each group of prisons and the population mix at each establishment is now regularly monitored.

We have also increased the provision of cellular accommodation within the category C estate at Moorland (310 places), Buckley Hall (350 places) and Guys Marsh (120 places). No new dormitory or cubicular accommodation will be commissioned for category C use. This is in line with the Chief Inspector's recommendations.

Probation Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average case load of probation officers in England and Wakes on (a) 30 June 1992, (b) 30 June 1993 and (c) 30 June 1994.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information relating to 31 December is published annually in "Probation Statistics England and Wales"—Table 12.2 of the 1993 issue—copies of which are in the Library. The average case load, excluding community service orders, per main grade officer was 23.3 on 30 June 1992 and 21.5 on 30 June 1993; information for 1994 is not yet available. The figures for probation officers are not on the basis of whole-time equivalents of established main grade probation officers on field work duties excluding temporary and trainee officers.

Police Grants

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from chief constables with regard to the impact of the grants formula for policing on police numbers.

Mr. Maclean: Nineteen chief constables have made representations.

Prison Service

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 January, Official Report, column 302, when he plans to take the decision on whether the director general should be offered an extension of his contract.

Mr. Howard: When I am ready to do so.

WALES

Average Earnings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the average earnings in Wales expressed as a percentage of the United Kingdom average in 1992, 1993 and 1994.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Average gross weekly earnings[1] in Wales, as a percentage of the United Kingdom average

1992	89.2
1993	89.0
1994	89.7

Less-favoured Areas

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals there are to extend the area of land classed as less-favoured areas in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 713, with regard to the running costs of non-departmental public bodies, if he will give the indicative management running costs for non-departmental public bodies expressed as a proportion of the total budget for each, in each year from 1993–94 to 1995–96.

Mr. Redwood: The figures are set out in the following table. The NDPBs listed have a wide variety of functions and levels of programme and capital expenditure. These differences are reflected in the table.

Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will place in the Library documents listing the principal points of the agreement reached with the previous chief executive by the Health Promotion Authority for Wales relating to the overpayment and underpayment of disputed travel and subsistence claims;

(2) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales in relation to (a) those payments for travel and subsistence to the previous chief executive classified as questionable in the district auditor's report and (b) the exclusion of those payments from the settlement between the authority and the previous chief executive;

(3) what representations he has received from the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales to write off sums arising from claims relating to those payments categorized as questionable in the district auditor's report in respect of travel and subsistence claims made by (a) the chief executive and (b) other officers;

(4) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the out-of-court settlement it has reached with the previous chief executive; and what arrangements he has made for the publication of the (a) gross and (b) net sums owed and repaid by the previous chief executive.

Mr. Redwood: There were various claims between Dr. Catford and the Health Promotion Authority for Wales. Following examination of these claims it was agreed that Dr. Catford owed the authority £2,100; this has now been paid. These were matters for the authority to resolve, and the chairman has not needed to consult me. I know of no proposals to write off any moneys.

Nursery Contract

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all those organisations who gave advice on the formulation and specification of the tender advertising the three-year nursery contract in 1993 eventually won by Acorn Nurseries.

Mr. Redwood: The specification was based on advice from central and local government departments concerned with child care and the organisation of nursery care. This included guidance on the establishment of nurseries from the Office of Public Service and Science; advice from the Welsh Office social service inspectorate and Cardiff city environmental health office, and the experience of other Government Departments which had established nurseries. The specifications also required that South Glamorgan county council's regulations on child care be adhered to as a minimum standard.

Planning Policy

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1994, Official Report, column 907, what meetings he has held with planning inspectors; and what representations he has received from planning inspectors concerning the issuing of planning policy guidance notes equivalent to PPG9s 13, 15, 23 and 24 of the Department of the Environment.

Mr. Redwood: The issuing of planning policy guidance was one of the items discussed at my meeting with the chief planning inspector and the Welsh inspectors on 21 November 1994.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1994, Official Report, column 907, what further consideration he has given to issuing equivalent planning policy guidance notes to PPGs 9, 13, 15, 23 and 24 of the Department of the Environment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Draft reviewed guidance is being prepared at present on a number of topics.

Generic Prescribing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the average percentage level of generic prescribing for general practitioner fundholders in each family health services authority in the year immediately prior to their switch into fundholding.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the average percentage figures for generic prescribing for each family health services authority in (a) 1989, (b) 1990 and (c) 1991.

Mr. Redwood: For each family health services authority area, the percentage of prescriptions prescribed generically is given in the following table. Data for years prior to 1991 are not readily available centrally.

Family health services authority

	Quarter ending 31 December 1991
Clywd	41
Dyfed	43
Gwent	40
Gwynedd	37
Mid Glamorgan	41
Powys	40
South Glamorgan	44
West Glamorgan	42

Whitland Bypass

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to add a second carriageway to the Whitland bypass scheme.

Mr. Redwood: There are no proposals to add a second carriageway to the Whitland bypass. The design capacity of a single carriageway two-lane highway is more than adequate to cater with the anticipated traffic flows for the foreseeable future.

Implant Research Technology

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 27 January, Official Report, column 422, if he will give the date on which the application for assistance under the small firms merit award for research and technology programme was received from Meditech Research, later renamed Implant Research Technology; when it was approved; what was the relevance of the professional and research qualifications of the appraisal team advising him on the application; what specialist advisers in (a) other Government Departments, (b) the research establishments and (c) the Patent Office were consulted; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Office received an entry form for the 1992 SMART stage 1 competition from Mr. Alan Jones on 24 April 1992. The project's objective was to produce a small microchip device that could be implanted into damaged areas of the body at nerve junctions, thus offering a treatment for diseases such as muscular dystrophy and Parkinson's disease. Mr. Jones's company, Meditech, had not at that time been formed.

Because no member of the competition judging panel had formal qualifications in biotechnology, specialist professional advice was sought from the DTI's biotechnology unit, then located at the Laboratory of the Government Chemist. The Patent Office was also consulted. Both departments had SMART liaison officers through whom these requests for advice were routinely channelled.

Having considered the comments received and acknowledging the technological risks involved, my officials recommended to the Department of Trade and Industry that an award be made. This recommendation was assessed and accepted and a formal offer of support was sent from the DTI to Mr. Jones on 7 September 1992.

The purpose of the SMART competition—stage 1—is to enable individuals and small companies to undertake practical feasibility studies of innovative projects which cannot attract full private sector financial support because of the high degree of risk involved. Naturally, some feasibility studies, as in the case of Mr. Jones's implant project, demonstrate that the difficulties are greater than originally anticipated and therefore preclude immediate commercial exploitation.

Artificial Limb and Appliance Service

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the estimated value of the work carried out by the artificial limb and appliance service attributable to the (a) Rookwood, (b) Morriston and (c) Wrexham centres.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh artificial limb and appliance service estimates the cost of providing services from each of their centres in 1994–95 as:

	£ million
a. Rookwood[1]	6.622
b. Morriston	1.096
c. Wrexham	2.419

[1]In addition to local services, the Rookwood centre provides a number of specialist services on an all-Wales basis.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent on purchasing artificial limb and appliance services from Clatterbridge hospital by purchasers in Wales in each of the past three years.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh artificial limb and appliance service has purchased an artificial limb service from Clatterbridge hospital to the following amounts in the last three financial years:

1991–92	28,000
1992–93	23,000
1993–94	16,000

Dental Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the current estimates for the numbers of (a) community, (b) salaried and (c) self-employed conventional contract dentists, employed in each family health services authority.

Mr. Redwood: The information is given in the following table.

Staff employed at 30 September 1994

Family Health Service Authority	[1]Community dentists	[2]Salaried dentists	[3]General Dental Practitioners
Clwyd	14.9	—	117
Dyfed	13.8	1	105
Gwent	13.1	—	138
Gwynedd	9.4	1	66
Mid Glamorgan	7.0	—	125
Powys	6.6	1	33
South Glamorgan	13.6	—	133
West Glamorgan	10.8	—	132
Wales	89.2	3	849

[1] Whole-time equivalents. Staff employed by NHS trusts have been included within the FHSA area in which they are situated.
[2] Numbers of staff.
[3] Numbers of principals and assistants.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has for the employment of more (a) salaried and (b) community dentists in 1995–96 in each family health services authority in Wales; and what estimate he has made of the average value of the surgery premises and equipment to be provided in association with each additional dentist.

Mr. Redwood: I have made available an extra £2.5 million for dental services in the community. All health authorities in Wales have been invited to bring forward proposals to improve the quality and availability of dental services in their area.

Family health services authorities can apply, at any time, for my permission to employ salaried dentists. The costs of such appointments are met from central funds.

The value of surgery premises and equipment required for any appointment in either the community, or salaried, dental service will vary depending on the type of location of the premises and the amount of additional equipment required, if any.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the average value of the surgery accommodation and capital equipment associated with each (a) community, (b) salaried and (c) self-employed dentist in each family health services authority.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not available centrally.

Geriatric Care

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library an anonymised version of the independent professional review carried out on 6 October 1994 by geriatric consultants relating to the standard of geriatric care on ward B6, University hospital of Wales, Cardiff; what arrangements he has made to ensure adequate monitoring of the improvements ordered by the review team during the six-months period specified by the review; and what visits have taken place or correspondence exchanged with South Glamorgan health authority in relation to the review team's recommendation.

Mr. Redwood: No. Independent professional review reports on clinical complaints are prepared at the request of the independent medical officers for complaints—MO(C)—in Wales. The MO(C)s make their recommendations direct to the organisation concerned and to the director of public health medicine, who is required to review the implementation of any necessary changes or actions within six months.

Civil Service Creche, Gabalfa

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 10 January, Official Report, column 50, what arrangements he has made for the reopening of the civil service creche at Gabalfa, Cardiff, in early February; what arrangements he has made for advertising the tender for the full three-year contract; and what decision he has made in relation to legal action.

Mr. Redwood: The civil service nursery, Gabalfa, will reopen on Monday 6 February under the management of South Glamorgan county council.,

An invitation to tender for a three-year contract will be placed in the press before the end of March 1995.

Decisions have not yet been made about legal action.

TREASURY

Capital Gains

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals had capital gains in excess of (a) £500,000, (b) £100,000, (c) £50,000, (d) £6,000 and (e) less than £6,000 in the latest year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: The relevant information is given in the table for liabilities in 1991–92, the latest year for which a breakdown by size of gains is available.

Number of taxpayers

Net chargeable gains in excess of	Individuals	Trustees	Total

£5,500[1]	79,200	10,800	90,000

[1] £2,750 for trustees.

I regret that precise estimates are not possible for the number of individuals with net gains below the capital gains tax annual exempt amount of £5,500 in 1991–92.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the countryside sites in Wiltshire and Hampshire for which publicity regarding public access has been given following conditional exemption from inheritance tax in the years since 1984–85.

Sir George Young: As with any matter concerning the tax affairs of the individual the normal rules of taxpayer confidentiality prevent me from giving details of individual cases where conditional exemption from inheritance tax, or its predecessor, capital transfer tax, has been granted.

However, the owner of land which is conditionally exempt from inheritance tax is required to publicise the agreed public access arrangements. The heritage advisory agencies will discuss with each owner the appropriate level of publicity. Each case is considered individually and all relevant factors, including the existing level of publicity, are taken into account. Although the extent of public access may already be widely known, for example where substantial public access is already given, the owner will generally be required to take specific steps to publicise the public access arrangements, for example by advertising the access arrangements in a local tourist office or town hall. For new designations of scenic land in England, owners are required to display at all points of entry on to their land map boards showing the agreed public access.

In addition, in England and Wales, a member of the public who wants information about public access in a specific area can contact the footpaths officer of the appropriate county council or national park authority. Details of footpaths and public access also often appear on maps and in commercial publications, particularly for major tourist areas.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the European Commission's review of the transitional VAT regime.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 2 February 1995]: The Government received the official version of the Commission's report on 30 January, and will make their views known once it has been carefully considered.

SCOTLAND

Chemical Weapons, Hebrides

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to confirm that chemical weapons dumped in the deep waters off the Hebrides after the second world war pose no potential future risk to Scottish fishermen.

Sir Hector Monro: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces.

Public Bodies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people sit on two or more non-departmental public bodies in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current number of non-departmental public bodies operating in Scotland; and what is their combined annual budget.

Mr. Lang: A table showing the non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department at 1 April 1994 will be contained in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1994", which will be published in the next few days. The information contained in that publication also shows the total expenditure of each of those bodies.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons sit on non-departmental public bodies in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1994", which will be published in the next few days, shows the number of appointments which are made to non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department as at 1 September 1994.

Crimes Against Children

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) allegations, (b) prosecutions, (c) convictions, (d) not proven verdicts and (e) not guilty verdicts there were for crimes against children such as would be relevant to section 67 of the Children (Scotland) Bill in the latest year for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available.

Elderly People

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of frail elderly people receiving care (a) in the community, (b) in NHD hospitals, (c) in local authority residential homes, (d) in voluntary sector residential or nursing homes and (e) in private sector residential or nursing homes.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 February 1995]: Central Government do not make such long-term projections as to the number of people who will receive these forms of care. This is a matter for individual local authorities and health boards, and will be dependent on community care policy at a local level.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Credits Guarantees

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his reply of 31 January, what were the numbers of contracts awarded to each named company for the years concerned which were supported by export credits guarantees.

Mr. Needham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 31 January, Official Report, columns 612-13.

Chemical Weapons Convention

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with representatives of British industry with the aim of facilitating Her Majesty's Government's ratification of the chemical weapons convention; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 2 February 1995]: My Department has on-going discussions with representatives of the chemicals industry on the preparations needed to enable the UK to ratify and implement the chemical weapons convention. On 31 January, a discussion document was published, to canvass the views of all industrial sectors likely to be affected by the implementation of the convention in the UK. Copies of the document have been placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the area cost adjustment factor as a percentage of the standard spending assessment for each year from 1990–91 to 1995–96.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested is set out in the table:

Year	Contribution of area cost adjustment factor £ million	Total standard spending assessment £ million	Area cost adjustment as percentage of total Percentage
1990–91	837	29,805	2.8
1991–92	1,152	35,587	3.2
1992–93	1,315	37,993	3.5
1993–94	1,332	36,622	3.6

Year	Contribution of area cost adjustment factor £ million	Total standard spending assessment £ million	Area cost adjustment as percentage of total Percentage
1994–95	1,563	37,848	4.1
1995–96	1,658	38.743	4.3
(1995–96 excluding Metropolitan Police)	(1,556)		(4.0)

Notes:

[1] The apparent increase in share in 1995–96 is because the SSA for the receiver for the Metropolitan police was previously based o n his budget, as approved by the Home Secretary. This included those extra costs which, from 1995–96, are reflected in the area cost adjustment. Excluding this effects, the share fell slightly in 1995–96 from 4.1 per cent. to 4.per cent.

[2] The 1995–96 figures exclude a small element of area cost adjustment which is incorporated within the indicator "Pensions Expenditure" in the police SSA.

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities have benefited from the area cost adjustment factor, and by how much, as (a) a total, (b) a percentage of the overall standard spending assessment and (c) an amount per resident in each year since 1990–91.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the change in the area cost adjustment factor compared to the overall change in standard spending assessment for each year since 1990–91.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested is set out in the table:

Year	Percentage change in contribution of area cost adjustment	Percentage change in total standard spending assessment
1990–91 to 1991–92	37.7	19.4
1991–92 to 1992–93	14.1	6.8
1992–93 to 1993–94	1.4	-3.6
1993–94 to 1994–95	15.3	3.3
1994–95 to 1995–96	7.9	2.4

Notes:

[1] Until 1995–96, the SSA for the receiver for the Metropolitan police was based on his budget, as approved by the Home Secretary. This included those extra costs which, in 1995–96, are reflected in the area cost adjustment. Excluding this effect, the contribution of the area cost adjustment factor rose by only 1.3 per cent. in 1995–96.

[2] The 1995–96 figures exclude a small element of area cost adjustment which is incorporated within the indicator "Pensions Expenditure" in the police SSA.

[3] The percentage changes have been calculated on the basis of figures unadjusted for changes of function.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the value of bids he has received from local authorities in the Isle of Wight, Cleveland, Avon, Humberside and North Yorkshire for supplementary credit approvals in 1995–96 towards the cost of local government restructuring; and if he will name the local authorities involved and set out the amount of each bid.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested is set out.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which bodies he has consulted under section 17 of the Local Government Act 1992 on (a) the Cleveland (Structural Change) Order, (b) the draft Avon (Structural Change) Order, (c) the draft Humberside (Structural Change) Order, (d) the draft North Yorkshire District of York (Structural Change) Order and (e) the draft Selby District (Boundary Change) Order.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: In all cases, we have consulted:

the principal local authorities;
Association of County Councils;
Association of District Councils;
Local Government Management Board;
Local Government Staff Commission (England);
National Association of Local Councils.

We have consulted the police authorities and the Lord Lieutenants on (a) to (c) and will do so on (d) when the relevant articles are prepared.

The Association of Chief Police Officers was consulted on (a) and (b) but has since indicated that it no longer wishes to be consulted.

We have consulted Ordnance Survey on (b) where maps are needed to illustrate new ward boundaries.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received the Local Government Commission's recommendations for Humberside and for

Avon; on what date he announced his decision on these recommendations; and on what date he announced his intention to modify the recommendations to create new county areas.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Local Government Commission's recommendations for Avon and Humberside were received on 20 December 1993 and 24 January 1994 respectively. The Government's decisions were announced on 25 October 1994.

The structural change orders will make provision for county areas, coterminous with the new district areas which will have unitary district councils, in order to satisfy the requirements of the Local Government Act 1972; but those county areas will not have county councils and, with the exception of Bristol, will be deemed to be part of adjoining counties for ceremonial purposes.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has consulted the Audit Commission on the draft Humberside and Avon (Structural Change) Order.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: No.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what circumstances during the preliminary period a transfer authority will be legally allowed to prepare any budgets or plans, or to consult any person for purposes connected with the exercise on or after the reorganisation date, of any functions transferred by a structural or boundary change order made under section 17 of the Local Government Act 1992.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The orders will remove the duties of transferor authorities where they relate to years subsequent to the reorganisation date. The orders will not prevent the authorities from continuing to work on these functions in co-operation with their successors.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what will be the entitlement of an existing minerals and waste planning authority affected by structural change under the Local Government Act 1992 to be consulted during the preliminary period by a shadow unitary authority, or by a continuing authority granted corresponding powers regarding the future of minerals and waste planning in the area of the new authority;

(2) what will be the entitlement of an existing structure planning authority affected by structural change under the Local Government Act 1992 to be consulted during the preliminary period by a shadow unitary authority, or by a continuing authority granted corresponding powers regarding the future of strategic planning in the area of the new authority;

(3) what will be the entitlement of an existing social services department affected by structural change under the Local Government Act 1992 to be consulted during the preliminary period by a shadow unitary authority, or by a continuing authority granted corresponding powers regarding the future provision of social services in the area of the new authority;

(4) what will be the entitlement of an existing local education authority affected by structural change under the Local Government Act 1992 to be consulted during the preliminary period by a shadow unitary authority, or by a continuing authority granted corresponding powers regarding the future provision of education in the area of the new authority.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Authorities which are inheriting functions will have the responsibility to prepare for the exercise of those functions. Those authorities, and the current holders of those functions, will have the duty to work and co-operate to ensure the successful transfer of functions.

Departmental Research Documents

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list showing for each of the past five years all research documents produced by his Department for (a) ministerial or (b) other use, showing the dates on which each piece of research was commissioned and completed and indicating whether each such piece of research was made publicly available.

Mr. Gummer: It would entail disproportionate cost to provide all the information requested since it is not at present held centrally. However, the Department's research is commissioned under the presumption that the results will be published. The RESLINE database, available through the London research centre, lists over 800 research reports and publications. Details of research programmes and sources of further information are given in the Department's contribution to "The Forward Look of Government-funded Science, Engineering and Technology" and in the Department's annual research market paper and research report which are available in the Library of the House.

Natura 2000 Network

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date he will publish the draft lists of sites to be proposed to the European Commission as the United Kingdom contributions to the Natura 2000 network; if he will give the estimated monthly average of candidate sites of special areas of conservation to be published between now and June 1995; and on what date he expects to publish the name or names of the first candidate site or list of sites.

Mr. Atkins: I will shortly publish for consultation a draft list of areas. Following consultation, proposed special areas of conservation will be submitted to the Commission, as required by the directive. The list will be published.

Outside Contractors

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list showing for each of the past five years (a) all outside bodies or individuals employed by his Department, (b) the date on which each outside body or individual commenced working for his Department, (c) the date on which each outside body or individual completed working for his Department, (d) the total amount paid to each outside body or individual, (e) what work each outside body or individual was asked to carry out, including specific titles of any reports, briefings or research commissioned and (f) whether each outside body or individual was recruited following a competitive interview or tendering process.

Mr. Gummer: The information is not held centrally by my Department and is obtainable only at disproportionate cost.

Council Tax

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to make to the council tax to help people who are severely mentally impaired.

Mr. Curry: We have recently issued a consultation paper on amendments to council tax liability, discounts and exemptions regulations which includes a proposal to exempt from council tax a dwelling which is only occupied by a person or people who are severely mentally impaired. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library of the House.

Police, Wiltshire

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been made to his Department by (a) Wiltshire county council or (b) the new Wiltshire police authority concerning the level of police grant for 1995–96.

Mr. Jones: No representations have been made to the Department of the Environment by Wiltshire county council or Wiltshire police authority concerning the level of police grant for 1995–96.

Deprivation, London

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will rank each ward in Greater London by the degree and intensity of deprivation on the basis of the 1991 census.

Mr. Gummer: I am placing this information in the Library of the House.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those successful bidders in the first round of the single regeneration budget which had not, in every case, identified matching funding for the project or projects.

Mr. Curry: All successful bidders identified sources of funding for their schemes in addition to support from the single regeneration budget. Summaries of successful bids have been placed in the Library of the House. In addition, individual bids are available for inspection at the relevant Government offices for the regions, and copies of bids are available at a charge.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful local authorities and other bodies bidding in the first round of the single regeneration budget included in their submissions existing schemes and not new ones as required by the bidding guidance.

Mr. Curry: The bidding guidance for the single regeneration budget, published in April 1994, copies of which are in the Library of the House, set out the criteria to be followed by those bidding for support from the SRB for the financial year 1995–96. There was no requirement on bidders to specify whether the whole or part of their bid consisted of existing or new schemes. Paragraph 16 and annexe A of the bidding guidance stated that bids should show how SRB resources would reinforce or enhance main programmes and other existing public or private sector initiatives in ways which help the process of regeneration and secure value for money.

Waste, Manchester

Mr. Alred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had from the Greater Manchester waste regulation and disposal authority in regard to the allocation of capital resources; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robert B. Jones [holding answer 31 January 1995]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 2 February about this matter. A copy of my letter has been placed in the Library.

EMPLOYMENT

Next Steps Agencies

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set out for each of the next steps agencies in his Department, whether they have acquired their own headquarters buildings and, if so, at what purchase cost or annual rental; how many support staff they have required which were not required when their operations were within his Department; how many of them publish periodical journals and at what annual cost; how many have fleets of executive cars or single executive cars and at what annual cost; how many have specially designed logos and at what cost; how many have corporate clothing and at what cost; and what is the cost of specially designed and printed corporate stationery.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the chief executive of the Employment Service to write with a detailed response on these particular matters. More generally, the record shows that, making allowance for work load changes, there has been a continuing real-terms reduction in the ES's running costs since it became an agency, while its performance levels and impact on the labour market have increased. These are clear benefits arising from its management as an agency which have been combined with a real-terms fall in the Department's own running costs.

A recent evaluation of ES concluded that the establishment of ES as an executive agency had created a performance-driven organisation, clearly focused on achievement of its key objectives. The agency's performance against targets has improved significantly since its creation. For example, annual efficiency savings have risen from £13.6 million to £21.2 million over the period 1990–94 and the proportion of long-term unemployed people placed into jobs has increased from 14.9 per cent. to 28.2 per cent. over the same period. I will send the right hon. Member a copy of the report, a copy of which is also available in the Library.

Letter from M.E.G. Fogden to Mr. Gerald Kaufman, dated 3 February 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about certain specific costs incurred by the Employment Service (ES) since it was established as a Next Steps Agency.

The ES Head Office is spread across eleven small to medium buildings, utilising property previously leased to the Department of Employment (ED) or Property Services Agency/Property Holdings. Each building is occupied under a commercial lease negotiated to meet changing operational requirements. Total rental costs are currently £3.7 million, with planned reductions of at least 10% being achieved by the end of the 1995/96 financial year.

Following the establishment of ES, support staff (security, messengers and typing services) continued to be managed by the Manpower Services Commission (now ED). In April 1991 ES took responsibility for their own Head Office support grade staff, with the exception of those based in London. This involved the pro rata transfer of 42 employees from ED. The number now employed in the support area has reduced to 36.

The ES does not publish periodical journals for external audiences.

Although the ES has no executive cars, we do have approximately 1800 vehicles which are used by individuals or groups of ES employees in order to achieve savings over alternative methods of transport.

The ES utilises the logo developed by the ED and as such does not incur any design costs. In addition, the ES does not use any specially designed corporate stationery.

In an effort to present a professional appearance and assist the public in identifying ES staff in open plan offices, a corporate tie or neck scarf is made available to employees. The cost of setting up this initiative in 1991 was £125,000. Ongoing costs relating primarily to staff turnover and wear and tear amount to £15,000 pa.

I hope this is helpful.

Incomes

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the percentage of men in part-time employment who earn less than (a) £4.15 per hour, (b) £5.53 per hour and (c) £5.88 per hour; and if he will list the average weekly earnings, including and excluding overtime, for part-time workers in (i) Great Britain and (ii) Scotland for the categories (1) manual employment, (2) non-manual employment and (3) all men;

(2) if he will list the percentage of women in part-time employment who earn less than (a) £4.15 per hour, (b) £5.53 per hour and (c) £5.88 per hour; and if he will list average weekly earnings, including and excluding overtime, for part-time workers in (i) Great Britain, (ii) Scotland and (iii) the regions of Scotland for the categories (1) manual employment, (2) non-manual employment and (3) all women.

Mr. Oppenheim: Information on part-time employees is limited because many part-timers whose weekly earnings are below the tax threshold are excluded from the new earnings survey. I will write to the hon. Member with the information which is available, and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by the Department or agency.

Miss Widdecombe: The Employment Department and its agency, the Employment Service, have central budgets to deliver the training and development priorities set by their management boards.

In the last 12 months, ES has funded one training course costing in excess of £5,000 per capita head: certified "NetWare" engineering training, delivered by Azlan Training. The total cost was £25,000—£6,250 per trainee. Its objective is to enable the staff responsible for ES's computer network to become fully competent and qualified in installing and managing it. Evaluation is through examination and by line management.

The Department and ES have devolved authority for other training needed in individual commands to local management. Information on this is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Career Services

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many local authorities had not been informed by 30 January of the name of the successful bidder for providing career services for their area from April 1995.

Mr. Paice: No local authorities have yet been notified of the names of successful bidders because no contracts have yet been concluded. Both preferred and unsuccessful bidders in the south-east region were notified on 17 January 1995 and preferred and unsuccessful bidders in other areas were notified on 20 December 1994.

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 726, if he will list the names of the organisations which have been awarded the contract for careers services in local authority areas where the decision has been announced.

Mr. Paice: This information is not yet available as no contracts have been awarded. Preferred bidders have been selected for post-tender negotiation and the contracts will be announced after negotiations are complete.

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many bids to provide the careers service for the metropolitan borough of Solihull had been received by the advertised closing date in the prospectus for the provision of career services from April 1995.

Mr. Paice: This information is commercial in confidence.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what facilities were available to (a) Government and (b) training providers to check the changing credit rating assessments of TECs;

(2) who offered credit rating assessments of TECs;

(3) when the Government checked the credit ratings of TECs.

Mr. Paice: The Government do not check the credit ratings of training and enterprise councils. They keep in touch with TEC's own statements of their financial position through regular scrutiny of their management accounts, which they receive on a commercial in confidence basis.

The Government TECs' annual statutory accounts, which they are required to lodge with this Department by 31 July and with Companies House by the end of the January following each financial year.

Until the date by which the statutory accounts have to be lodged at Companies House, they are commercial in confidence. But as the Department receives them, copies are placed in the Library.

Disabled People

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many disabled people were placed in work and/or training as a result of intervention by placing assessment counselling teams and disability employment advisers in the last year (a) nationally and (b) in West Yorkshire.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mrs. Alice Mahon, dated 3 February 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of disabled people placed in work and/or training as a result of the intervention by Placing, Assessment and Counselling Teams and Disability Employment Advisers.

In Great Britain, 13,400 disabled people were placed into jobs by Placing Assessment and Counselling Teams (PACTs) between 1 April 1993 and 31 March 1994.

West Yorkshire is covered by three PACTs. These are Leeds PACT, part of Wakefield, Barnsley and Doncaster PACT, and most of Bradford, Calderdale and Kirklees PACT. In those PACTs, 476 disabled people were placed into jobs by Disability Employment Advisers between 1 April 1993 and 31 March 1994.

9737 disabled people started vocational training between 1 April 1993 and 31 March 1994 in Great Britain following referral by PACTs. Of these, 460 were in the PACTs covering West Yorkshire.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefits (Refusal)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have been refused benefit under section 28(5) of the Social Security Contributions and Benefit Act 1992, on the grounds that they have refused a job because of the rate of pay.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Harriet Harman, dated 3 February 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of people who have been disqualified from receiving unemployment benefit on the grounds that they have refused a job because of the rate of pay.

Unfortunately we do not collect the information you have requested. We record the number of adjudication decisions for all the main entitlement questions arising on claims, including those following refusal of employment, but we do not record the reasons for the decisions.

Information on the number of adjudication officers' decisions, and disallowance rates, is contained in a published document entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions". Copies of this document are held in the Library of the House. The latest available information relates to the quarter and a half year ending 30 September 1994.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the number of people who will be refused benefit by virtue of their answer to question 18 of the draft jobsearch plan.

Miss Widdecombe: The jobsearch plan is not designed as a test of availability for work but will enable jobseekers to set out information to help them prepare for the discussions with an employment adviser about their jobseekers agreement.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to issue guidance about question 18 of the draft jobsearch plan.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will issue guidance to Employment Service staff on the use of the jobsearch plan in helping jobseekers prepare for discussions about their jobseeker's agreement.

Training

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many fewer trainees will go on to the training for work scheme following the reduction in expenditure on training for work announced in the Budget.

Mr. Paice [holding answer 2 February 1995]: In 1994–95 we expect 280,000 starts on training for work and 100,000 ex-trainees to obtain jobs. In 1995–96, we expect 225,000 to start on the programme and that 104,000 ex-trainees will get jobs.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cash Limits

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on cash and running cost limits for the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland departmental services, the independent living fund and certain national agricultural schemes for 1994–95.

Sir John Wheeler: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, it is proposed that the cash limit for class XVI, vote 1—the Northern Ireland Office—will be increased by £1,580,000 from £927,325,000 to £928,905,000.

The cash limit which covers Northern Ireland departmental services will be increased by £23,360,000 from £3,812,842,000 to £3,836,202,000. This increase reflects the take-up of entitlement to end-year flexibility on capital and departmental running costs and other technical changes.

The cash limit for the independent living fund will decrease by £1,554,000 to reflect a reduction in provision earlier in the year.

The cash limit covering national agricultural capital grant schemes and certain assistance for production, marketing and processing and the fishing industry will decrease by £486,000 from £10,515,000 to £10,029,000 mainly as a result of technical changes.

The combined gross running cost for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments will be increased by £18,476,000 from £787,031,000 to £805,507,000. This reflects the take-up of £13,324,000 of end–year flexibility entitlement announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 730-34, and an increase of £5,152,000 from the Department of Social Security, in respect of agency services. Of the revised gross running cost provision, £177,699,000 is for the NIO and £627,808,000 is for NI Departments.

These changes will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Armed Forces (Murder Charges)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the members of the armed forces charged (a) with murder and (b) with manslaughter as a result of offences committed while on duty in Northern Ireland during the last five years; and what was the outcome in each case.

Sir John Wheeler: The information is as follows:

Name of person charged	Charge	Month and year charged	Outcome	Names of deceased
Lee Clegg	Murder	July 1991	Guilty	Martin Peake and Karen Reilly
Richard Elkington	Murder	February 1992	Not Guilty	Fergal Caraher
Andrew M. Callaghan	Murder	February 1992	Not Guilty	Fergal Caraher
Mark D. Wright	Murder	September 1992	Judgement Reserved	Peter McBride
James Fisher	Murder	September 1992	Judgement Reserved	Peter McBride

Soldiers (Firearms Offences)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many soldiers were convicted during the last 10 years in Northern Ireland (a) charged with and (b) convicted of offences involving firearms;

(2) in what format information relating to the number of soldiers (a) charged with and (b) committed with offences involving firearms in Northern Ireland in the last 10 years is available to him; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 31 January 1995]: The available information is as follows:

Members of the armed forces charged with firearms offences in Northern Ireland 1990 to 1994

Name of person charged	Main charge	Month and year charged
Clegg[1]	Murder	July 1991
Aindow[1]	Attempted Murder	July 1991

These figures refer to primary offences.

Maryfield Secretariat

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the annual Christmas party was held by the Maryfield secretariat; how many members of the Northern Ireland (a) judiciary and (b) legal profession were present; and who was responsible for the invitation list.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: No annual Christmas party is held by the Anglo-Irish secretariat at Maryfield. The Irish side of the secretariat offers seasonable hospitality on its own behalf.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Training Courses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each training and tuition course with a total cost exceeding £5,000 paid for by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies during the last 12 months, showing the title and objectives of each course, the name of the organisations engaged, the total cost of each course, a summary of the responsibilities of staff members taking part and the process for course evaluation by his Department or agency.

Mr. Waldegrave: In respect of the Department, this information can be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

In respect of the agencies, the matter has been delegated to them and I have asked the chief executives to reply direct.

Letter from Guy Stapleton to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 3 February 1995:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about training and tuition courses as this is a matter within my operational responsibility. The information is as follows:

Title: Milk Quota Management—Computer Development (Phase 1A) User Training.
Objectives: To train users in a new computer system developed for the Milk Quotas Scheme.
Organisation: Triad Special Systems Limited.
Total Cost: £6,786+ VAT.
Staff: 2 managers (1 HEO and 1 EO) plus 7 clerical staff in the Agency's new Milk Quotas section. Tuition provided over a period of 18 days during January 1994.
Evaluation: This form of training is usually considered as part of the project costs of setting up a new computerised system and was paid for out of funds specifically designated for the project. Evaluation of the training will form part of the evaluation exercise for the success of the project as a whole. An initial assessment has been made by management of the ability of individual members of staff to effectively carry-out and operate the range of functions available on the computer system.
Title: Team Building.
Objectives: To provide training, using a range of simulated exercises, both in the classroom and out-of-doors, with the aim of building team-work and leadership skills. The course was tailored to the express needs of the particular team identified in a pre-course discussion. A secondary objective was to pilot this kind of training to see if it was an approach the Agency wished to use more widely.
Organisation: Group 4 Securitas Training Limited.
Total Cost: £7,460 + VAT. The course was residential (from 13 to 16 June 1994) and costs included full board and transport to and from the course by mini-bus provided by Group 4.
Staff: 4 managers (1HEO and 3 EOs), plus 8 clerical staff from Crops Division, Non-Food Set Aside Scheme Section.
Evaluation: Course assessment sheets were completed by each attendee immediately after the event and there was follow up evaluation after three months by questionnaires to attendees and their line managers. Because this was a pilot exercise, four members of the line management for this area of work, returning from a meeting in the locality, arranged to call in to observe the course in progress. A report was also made by the team leader after the event.
Title: Certified Network Engineer.
Objectives: To attain the standards required for professional certification.
Organisation: Azlan Limited.
Total Cost: £5,225 + VAT.
Staff: Assistant Manager, PC Network (responsible for supporting the Agency's networked communications systems.)
Evaluation: By external examination for a recognised qualification.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 3 February 1995:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about training and tuition courses held by the Agency over the last twelve months.

CVL has not held any course which meets the criteria set out in your question in the last twelve months.

Letter from Dr. P. T. Stanley to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 3 February 1995:

Information about training and tuition courses costing in excess of £5000

The Central Science Laboratory (CSL) has been an executive agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) since 1 April 1992. In the past twelve months the Agency has not paid for any single training or tuition course costing over £5,000. However there has been one composite training contract involving several similar courses in the area of IT.

In terms of IT, CSL took the decision to move towards using Microsoft Word for Windows as the Agency's corporate software package. The objective of the training was to bring staff up to the appropriate level of competence to use the new software. The training requires individuals having access to a workstation and therefore each course is often restricted to six delegates at a time. A commercial training company, Genysis Training, was employed for a period of three months to provide the training on-site at the Agency's Slough laboratory at a total cost of £11,456. The six courses making up the composite training package and numbers of staff participating were as follows:

Basic wordprocessing: 57
Advanced wordprocessing: 28
Basic spreadsheet: 87
Advanced spreadsheet: 46
Presentation graphics: 26
E-mail: 43

The responsibilities of staff receiving training ranged from scientists working on R & D and service contracts to business support staff from areas such as finance, personnel and marketing.

Courses were evaluated through the completion of questionnaires by the staff at the end of training courses and by interviews conducted by the CSL Training Officer.

Letter from A. M. Kerr to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 3 February 1995:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Question about expenditure on training and tuition courses in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate.

In the last 12 months the Directorate has not run a course where the total cost exceeded £5,000.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 31 January 1995:

The Minister of State has asked me to reply to your question about training and tuition courses paid for by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate during the last 12 months, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

During this period there were no training or tuition courses paid for by the Directorate with a total cost exceeding £5,000.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Walsh to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 3 February 1995:

As you know, the Minister has asked that I write to you direct with the answer to your question. In 1994 there were no courses run by this Agency that had a cost in excess of £15,000. However, there were two courses exceeding a total cost of £5,000. Details are as follows:

ADAS New Entrants Conference. The objective was to welcome new staff (consultants and administrative) to ADAS and to provide them with a clear insight into the role and work of the Agency. Seventy-four staff attended and the duration of the conference was three days (including time for travel). All tuition was undertaken by ADAS staff except for one session which was organised by the company New Direction. Staff were given an evaluation sheet at the end of the training which sought views of participants relative to the detailed objectives. The total cost for this course was £12,650.

National Training Conference for Dairy Consultants. This was a conference for ADAS Consultants working in the Dairy sector. Of the twelve sessions in the conference, eight were provided by ADAS and four were undertaken by a range of outside organisations. These were the Danish Dairy Board, Reading University, Veepro, Holland, Scottish Agricultural College, the Midland Bank plc and Liverpool University. The objective was to widen the consultants' horizons into the innovative and developing areas of the UK Dairy industry. Eighty-one staff attended and the duration was two days (including travel). There was an evaluation at the end of the conference seeking delegates views relative to the detailed objectives. The total cost was £8,000.

Absenteeism

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the absenteeism rates for (a) the Veterinary Medicines Directorate and (b) the Intervention Board in 1994.

Mr. Waldegrave: Responsibility for this matter is delegated to the Veterinary Medicines Directorate and Intervention Board, and I have asked the chief executives to reply to the hon. Gentleman direct.

Letter from Guy Stapleton to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 3 February 1995:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about the absenteeism rate in the Intervention

Board during 1994 as this matter is within my operational responsibility.

We monitor sick absence rates in this Agency on a financial year basis to correspond with some of the other key performance measures and targets which are published in our Annual Report. The sick absence rate in the Intervention Board for the calendar year 1994, calculated as a percentage of total man years, was 5.7 per cent. The figure represents an estimate of working days lost through sick leave, which has been drawn from our payroll data, and excludes absences for maternity leave and special leave.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter, to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 30 January 1995:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the absenteeism rate in the Veterinary Medicines Directorate for 1994, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

In terms of absenteeism related to sickness, the figure was 3.1 per cent.

Pesticides (Allergies)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies his Department has carried out regarding the possible connection between the use of pesticides and allergies.

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 February 1995]: None. However, we require companies to submit data in support of the approval of pesticides including those relating to potential allergic effects of those pesticides. These data are thoroughly evaluated.

PRIME MINISTER

Act of Union

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Prime Minister if the treaty as well as the Act of Union with Scotland 1707 remains in full force in all its provisions, with particular reference to the Church of Scotland, the legal system for Scotland, the Scottish universities and Scottish banking together with the Union with England and for England, the Church of England, and the Union with Scotland.

The Prime Minister: The Acts of Union of 1706 and 1707 which ratified the treaty of Union remain in force as a basic legal framework for the Union of Scotland and England. Within that framework the distinctiveness of the various areas mentioned has been preserved and developed in the light of changing circumstances.

TRANSPORT

A564

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the concrete overlay surface on the A564 Foston-Hatton-Hilton bypass.

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. However, I did make a site visit on the 11 November to see the concrete overlay surface. I understand that construction of the concrete overlay has now been completed and that a testing programme to assess the concrete will be undertaken over the next few months.

Nuclear Waste

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to inspect the ship safety standards in respect of the imminent shipment of high-level radioactive waste from the United Kingdom to customer countries; and what plans he has to inform countries along the route of the ship's journey from France to Japan.

Mr. Norris: There are no imminent shipments of high-level radioactive waste from the United Kingdom. It would be for the French authorities to take appropriate steps about shipments from France.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contingency plans his Department has drawn up for possible accidents involving high-level radioactive waste during transport.

Mr. Norris: Contingency plans for accidents during the carriage of high-level radioactive and irradiated fuels have been drawn up by the United Kingdom operators concerned. The Department is satisfied that those plans are adequate.

Transport Research Laboratory

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans the Transport Research Laboratory has to recruit staff during 1995; at what grade and discipline; what are the costs of recruitment exercises planned; and whether they will be undertaken by the private sector.

Mr. Norris: The Transport Research Laboratory is preparing its business plan for 1995–96 and, as part of this process, is reviewing the skills and resources required to meet the demands of its customers.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff by grade and discipline were given early retirement in 1994 by the Transport Research Laboratory; what was the total costs of these early retirement measures; and what is his estimate of the number and costs of early retirement planned for 1995.

Mr. Norris: The information requested is given in the following table.

Discipline	Grade	Number
Scientific staff	Assistant Scientific Officer	2
	Scientific Officer	5
	Higher Scientific Officer	8
	Senior Scientific Officer	10
	Grade 7 (Principal Scientific Officer)	6
	Grade 6	3
Total Scientific staff		34
Technical staff	Professional and Technical Officer	2
	Higher Professional and Technical Officer	2

	Higher Executive Officer	2
		2
Total Administrative staff		21
Industrial staff	Craft	20
	Non-craft	28
Total Industrial staff		48
Total staff		109

The total cost of these early retirements which are being made in 1994–95 is £3.8 million. The Transport Research Laboratory has no plans for further early retirements.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated staff surplus (a) in his Department as a whole and (b) at the Transport Research Laboratory.

Mr. Norris: The information requested is not yet available.

Transport Police

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the jurisdiction of the British Transport police.

Mr. Watts: I have received a number of representations on British Transport police jurisdiction, from the chief constable of the force, the British Transport Police Federation and the Association of British Transport Police Superintendents and from 15 individual BTP officers.

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the British Transport police force has been fully trained to Home Office standards.

Mr. Watts: All members of the British Transport police force are fully trained at Home Office establishments to the same standards as Home Department police officers.

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current strength of the British Transport police force.

Mr. Watts: Some 2,137 police officers and 429 civilians as at 31 December 1994.

Speed Limits

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research indications there are about the effect of a reduction of speed on the casualty and fatality rate.

Mr. Norris: International studies have indicated that a 1 mph reduction in average speed reduces accidents by 5 per cent. Recent United Kingdom work has confirmed this finding in a wide range of circumstances. Twenty mph zones have reduced casualties by 56 per cent. and child casualties by 75 per cent. Further studies have shown how the enforcement of speed limits can provide significant reductions in casualties, particularly fatalities.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in which local authority areas 20 mph speed limits are in operation.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend has granted consents to 20 mph speed limit orders in the areas covered by the local traffic authorities listed:

Air Algerie

Mr. Morely: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 98, when he expects his Department to announce the results of the inquiry being conducted into flights by Air Algerie aircraft from Coventry airport in November and December 1994.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 February 1995]: My Department expects to complete its inquiry as soon as possible.

Shipping Casualties

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the occasions when he has ordered a formal investigation into a shipping casualty under sections 55 and 56 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1970 when no casualties or loss of life has occurred as provided for in section 32 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1979;

(2) if he will provide a reference for a comprehensive list of, or list in the Official Report, the occasions since 1979 when he or his predecessors have ordered a formal investigation into shipping casualties as provided for in sections 55 and 56 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1970, stating in each case any loss of life arising from the incident.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 February 1995]: From January 1979, formal investigations were ordered on the following occasions:

Commencement Date	Vessel(s) Name(s)	Type of Casualty
June 1979	MV Hero	Loss of vessel with loss of one life
July 1979	MVF Boston Sea Ranger	Loss of vessel with loss of five lives
December 1979	MVF Do It Again	Loss of vessel with loss of two lives
November 1980	MV Pool Fisher	Loss of vessel with loss of 13 lives
January 1981	MV Kurdistan	Breaking in two of vessel; no loss of life
March 1983	RNLB Solomon Browne and MV Union Star	Loss of both vessels with loss of 16 lives
July 1983	MV Grainville	Loss of vessel with loss of three lives
November 1983	MV European Gateway MV Speedlink Vanguard	Collision resulting in loss of one vessel with loss of six lives
October 1985	Auxiliary Barque Marques	Loss of vessel with loss of 19 lives
April 1987	MV Herald of Free Enterprise	Capsizing of vessel with loss of 188 lives
October 1987	MV Derbyshire	Loss of vessel with loss of 44 lives
March 1990	MFV Boy Andrew	Stranding and loss of vessel. No loss of life.

Gibraltar Airport

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration has been given to according Gibraltar airport the status of a regional airport.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 February 1995]: Gibraltar airport is regarded as a regional United Kingdom domestic airport.

Mayday Call (Olympic Airways)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport over what districts of London Olympic Airways Boeing 737 Flight 265 from Athens travelled on 17 January from the moment of its Mayday call until its touchdown at Heathrow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 30 January 1995]: The Mayday call was made by Olympic Airways flight OA265 while it was in a holding "stack" at 18,000 ft over East Sussex. The aircraft entered the London area travelling north-east from Reigate to the Hither Green area where it turned to a westerly heading for the approach to Heathrow. This route was necessary to enable the aircraft to descend for landing.

Cash Limits

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits and running costs limits; and what proposals there are to change the cash limit and running costs limit of passenger rail services and the Office of the Rail Regulator for 1994–95.

Dr. Mawhinney: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

(i) The cash limit for class VI, vote 1—Highways Agency—will be increased by £243,000 from £2,142,659,000 to £2,142,902,000. The increase in the cash limit arises from adjustments in funding relating to the formation of the Highways Agency between this vote and class VI, vote 2.

(ii) The cash limit for class VI, vote 2—administration and transport services—is reduced by £1,733,000 from £251,045,000 to £249,312,000. The reduction is made up of transfers to class VI, vote 1, £243,000, and to class VI vote 7, £1,670,000, offset by a transfer from class 1, vote 1, £180,000, for bounty payments to the Merchant Navy reserve.

(iii) The cash limit on class VI, vote 4—Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency—is reduced by £4,000,000 from £179,003,000 to £175,003,000, made up of transfers of £2,461,000 to class VI, vote 7 and £1,539,000 to class VI, vote 8 for consultancies.

(iv) The cash limit for class VI, vote 5—local roads and transport—is reduced by £2,150,000 by from £592,573,000 to £590,423,000. This reflects a reduction in the cash limit to this vote of £3,625,000 offset by the take up of end year flexibility entitlement as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 729-34.

(v) The cash limit for class VI, vote 7—passenger rail services—will be increased by £52,131,000 by transfers from class VI, vote 2, £1,670,000, class VI, vote 4, £2,461,000, and from non–voted expenditure from £1,747,500,000 to £1,799,631,000. The additional provision is required for sums due to British Railways Board in respect of public service obligations and for costs of administrative and miscellaneous services.

(vi) The cash limit for class VI, vote 8—Office of the Rail Regulator—will be increased by £1,539,000 from £7,712,000 to £9,251,000. The additional provision is made up of a transfer from class VI, vote 4 for consultancies offset by additional appropriations in aid.

(vii) The Department of Transport local authority capital cash limit has been increased by £3,732,000 from £297,358,000 to £301,090,000. This reflects the take up of end year flexibility entitlement as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 729-34.

(viii) The Department of Transport running costs limits has been reduced by £3,755,000 from £417,993,000 to £414,238,000 and the Office of the Rail Regulator running costs limit has been increased by £1,514,000 from £6,170,000 to £7,684,000.

The overall increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Coaches

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 30 January, Official Report, column 483, how he proposes to judge the effect of the experiment intended to reduce risk and to cut casualties by banning coaches in the right-hand lane of carriageways with more than two lanes.

Mr. Norris: The effects will be judged by examining any changes in the accident data over a two-year period with respect to the historical accident patterns, and in particular the manoeuvres that vehicles were making prior to collision and the proportions of coach accidents involving other vehicles of various classes, including heavy lorries.

M18

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the concrete overlay surface between junctions 5 and 6 of the M18.

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Tim Devlin, dated 3 February 1995:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the concrete overlay surface between junctions 5 and 6 of the M18.

A number of trial concrete surfacings were constructed as part of the concrete overlay section of the M18.

The preliminary assessment being undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory is giving encouraging results. A Report on the full assessment is due to be published later this year.

Stoke-Derby Link Road

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much money has been expended on the Stoke-Derby link road to date; and when he expects it to be completed;

(2) how much money has been spent on the public inquiries that have been held in to the whole route for the Stoke-Derby link road;

(3) what assessment he has made as to whether the Doveridge bypass is necessary to complete the Stoke-Derby link road;

(4) if the Stoke-Derby link road forms an integral part of the roads programme;

(5) how much money has been spent in the preparation for the Doveridge bypass as part of the Stoke-Derby link road.

Mr. Watts: Schemes forming the Stoke-Derby link road, including Doveridge bypass, are an important part of the roads programme and we intend to complete the link road as funds permit. To date, £110.4 million, excluding VAT and land compensation payments, has been spent on preparing and building the link road. It is not possible to disaggregate the cost of public inquiries included in that total without disproportionate effort; but of the total, £3.5 million excluding VAT has so far been spent in preparing Doveridge bypass for construction. We are giving urgent consideration to the possibility of taking forward the Doveridge bypass as a design, build, finance and operate scheme.

Buses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take in respect of monopolies in the bus industry and reduced competition among bus companies.

Mr. Norris: It is for the Director General of Fair Trading to initiate any such action.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 253

SESSION 1994–95

23rd January—3rd February 1995

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
